The National Book
Fortnight

A Universal Shout

In connection with The National Book Fortnight, of which we have already more than once given particulars, the originator of the excellent idea, Mr. Robb Lawson, of Messrs. Cassell & Co., has the following in Cassell's Book Talk for November :—

The scheme is not one which is going to cost the bookseller much in money. The Publishers' Association will supply, free of cost, attractive advertising material to every bookseller who cares to send in a post card to Stationers' Hall Court.

In every part of the Kingdom booksellers are invited to join in the universal effort.

May I repeat that we must not end by talking about it. Let's do it. Don't let the same thing happen as did in Oliver Wendell Holmes's story. If you don't remember it, here are the rough outlines. "Once on a time a notion was started that if all the people in the world shouted at once it might be heard in the moon. When the time came, everybody had their ears so wide open to hear the universal shout—that nobody spoke except a deaf man in one of the Fiji Islands and a woman in Pekin. So that the world was never so still since the Creation."

As originator of the National Book Fortnight may I crave your co-operation in that shout?

ROBB LAWSON.

Notes and Announcements

SIR SIDNEY LEE's revised and enlarged "Life of Shakespeare," which will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on November 29th, embodies a large amount of fresh information and illustrates from contemporary evidence the high place that Shakespeare filled in both the literary and social life of his day. Sir Sidney has consulted for the first time the wills of several of Shakespeare's Stratford friends which furnish pertinent material. New information also figures in the account of Shakespeare's monument in Stratford Church.

The brilliant letters and descriptions written by Mr. Frederick Palmer of his experiences in Belgium and France and with the Grand Fleet have attracted such attention that his book detailing his adventures, "My Year of the War," and many facts and impressions which have hitherto not appeared in print, will be welcome. It is to be published by Mr. Murray immediately.

Messrs. Macmillan will publish at the end of the month a new book on "Fighting France," by Mrs. Edith Wharton, the well-known novelist. Mrs. Wharton has visited the front from Dunkerque to Belfort, and has written an impressive account of what she saw, and of the magnificent spirit of the French army and nation in the present crisis. The book will have several illustrations.

Mr. Murray will shortly publish a half-a-crown edition of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's novel, "Laddie," a book of peculiar interest to the many admirers of "Freckles," because it is largely reminiscent, the scene being laid in the farmhouse where the author's childhood was spent.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. hope to publish in December, in small quarto, "The Dardanelles: An Account of the Operations in Gallipoli," written and painted by Norman Wilkinson, R.I. This work will contain 30 full-page plates in colour, reproduced from water-colour drawings made on the spot by Mr. Norman Wilkinson, and a number of black-and-white illustrations.

The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith's great speech in the House of Commons on November 2nd was (by authority) published on Wednesday last, November 10th, by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin as a penny pamphlet, uniform with the text of Sir Edward Grey's reply to Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, brought out a short time ago by Mr. Unwin.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. have just published the second volume of their superb quarto four-volume work on "British Birds," written and illustrated by Archd. Thorburn, F.Z.S. Volume 3 will appear next spring, and Volume 4 in the autumn. It is one of the finest art works ever published; four hundred species of birds are shown in colours.

As we are informed by a violet impression from a lozenge-shape rubber stamp on its otherwise rather nice title-page, that on November 4th Messrs. Duckworth & Co. published a handsome quarto edition of "The Songs and Sonnets of Shakespeare," illustrated in colour and black and white by Charles Robinson. There are twelve full-page plates in colour, most of them charming in conception and execution and the text is accompanied by graceful designs in monochrome. The pictures of Cupid and children please us best.

Publishers' Association Catalogue for 1915

We are requested by the Publishers' Association to inform the Trade that it is impossible now to accept orders for the above Catalogue. The whole edition has been sold and the work cannot be reprinted.

Messrs. Cassell have just published one of the best adventure stories which we have met with for a long time. It is in 6s. novel form, entitled "His Unknown Wife," and is by Louis Tracy, who has not only a lively imagination, but also a vivid realistic style of expressing it. The characters are mainly two fine English girls, a courageous and resourceful young Englishman, and an equally resourceful and courageous young American. These young people are cast away on the cold, desolate coast of Chile. It is a book for everybody who loves a story of breezy adventures, and much piquancy is added by the love entanglements. We have read many descriptions of shipwreck, but not many better than that which Mr. Tracy gives us in "His Unknown Wife"; his demands on our credulity are pontifical, delightfully audacious. In the night, at the height of the storm, with the ship breaking up, the heroes rescue the heroines by superhuman efforts, and carry them, nearly dead and nearly naked, to the shelter of a ledge of rock. The hero has a bottle of good old brandy, and all four of their lives depend upon it; he drops it—he actually dropped it. Again Providence intervened. It fell on the thick poncho, and did not break." It seems to us that Providence is kept "busy" all through this delightful book. We hope it will not meet the fate of the ordinary 6s. novel and be dead in a few brief months. It is worth illustrating and would make a fine school prize for boys and girls, although it is also a story for men and women.

Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. have been publishing some rather striking novels lately; the latest has a plot which surely deserves to have that much-abused word, "unique," applied to its plot. In "Our Immortal Battle," by Elizabeth Harden, the chief male characters are twin brothers. One, John, is mad really, although there is so much method in his madness that he is able to lock up his perfectly sane brother Jocelyn in an asylum while he takes his medical practice and his place in the world. The madman makes a charming host; the part he takes in conversation is the best part of the book, as his remarks are often amusing and sometimes amazing, e.g., that all human beasts should be made to go on all fours. While the sane twin is in the asylum the mad one pays him visits once a year or so, and eventually lets him out, and somehow or other gets him to join him in his pet hobby which turns out to be wholesale assassination. If the execution had been equal to the conception of this great idea, this would have been a great book.

It is, perhaps, the greatest achievement for a writer to reconstruct and make vivid to his readers historical scenes of another age. In "Zeppelin Nights: a London Entertainment" (John Lane), the new work by Violet Hunt and Ford Madox Hueffer, the stories that are told to pass the time waiting for Zeppelin Raids are set in every period of English history

In a preface dated London, September 10th, 1915, Mr. Crawford Price, in a little work entitled "Light on the Balkan Darkness," says: "There is scarce a statesman in Europe to-day who would not willingly sacrifice years of office to know exactly what Bulgaria is driving at." Almost before Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. can publish the book the question is answered: Bulgaria is driving her armies into the heart of Serbia. All who wish to examine—we will not say understand—the tangle of politics in the Balkans should read this little work.

Messrs. Williams & Norgate have in the press for publication this week a little volume entitled "With the Grand Fleet," by L. Cope Cornford, author of "Echoes from the Fleet"; he gives here a fuller account of his impressions than appeared in his contributions to the Morning Post.

Mr. Geo. A. Stephen, the Norwich City Librarian, contributed to the Norwich Mercury of October 30th, 1915, a long article which might give some points to publishers and booksellers, as it is entitled "What Soldiers Read."

IMPORTANT

In consequence of shortage of labour and dislocation of traffic, we are asked to say that the Publishing Date for the Publishers' Association Christmas Catalogue has had to be postponed from Nov. 16. Notice will be sent to all who have ordered copies as soon as the new date can be fixed. Booksellers are requested by the Association kindly not to distribute copies before the official date.

In response to a widespread demand for Rupert Brooke's famous series of War sonnets, entitled "1914," in a form suited to a Christmas greeting, Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson are now issuing them in a sixpenny booklet enclosed in an envelope ready for posting.

"Grenade Warfare: Notes on the Training and Organisation of Grenadiers" is the title of a useful little handbook by Lieut. G. Dyson (Brigade Grenadier officer 90th Infantry Brigade), just published at 6d. net by Messrs. Sifton, Praed & Co., Ltd., The Map House, 67, St. James' Street, S.W.

Miss Gertrude Foxe (Mrs. G. M. Foakes), has written a novel descriptive of life in the English colony of a Russian provincial town, which Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., will publish shortly, under the title of "The Pool of Gold."

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish on November 16th a book by a new writer, Miss Stella Benson, entitled "I Pose." The book is "a medley of wit, wisdom, whimsicality, vivid description, and quick perception."

The Book Trade and the War

A RECENT casualty list contained the name of E. A. Munday, 6th London Rifles (Territorials). Rifleman Munday had been in the employment of the joint firm of Henry Frowde and Hodder & Stoughton for nearly five years when he enlisted in September last year. Engaged in the educational department, he distinguished himself by steady, intelligent work, and by a quiet modesty that made him a general favourite. He was shot through the heart at the parapet of a German trench during the advance on Loos, after having been only a month at the front.

Manchester and District Booksellers' and Stationers' Association

ONE of the largest gatherings of the above Association assembled at the Whist Drive held on Saturday, November 6th, in aid of the British Red Cross Fund, over 130 members and friends being present. Good fellowship prevailed, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening, varied by excellent refreshments, ended with the following ladies and gentlemen being declared winners of the prizes generously provided by Mr. A. Shaw (C. Goodall & Son, Ltd.); Mr. A. Sutton (Second-hand Bookseller); Messrs. A. & S. Walker, Ltd.; Mr. F. Mitchell (Second-hand Bookseller); Mr. F. J. Barlow (S.P.C.K.) and Mr. F. Johnson (Williams & Norgate):—

Mrs. Russell presented the prizes, and the Hon. Auditor, Mr. W. M. Wharton (John Heywood's, Ltd.) moved a hearty vote of thanks to the donors. In thanking the members for such an excellent turn-up the President, Mr. F. Johnson, paid a sincere tribute to the splendid work of those members of the Committee, Messrs. Russell, J. S. Smith, Mitchell, and Barlow, whose efforts deserved the success attained.

For our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors

AN Exhibition of Pictures, by Arthur G. Bell, R.I., R.O.I., will be held at "Rastgarth," 2, Foxholes Road, Southbourne-on-Sea, Hants., from Monday, November 29th, to Saturday, December 11th, inclusive. Admission: One shilling; Wednesdays and Saturdays, sixpence. The whole of the proceeds will be given to St. Dunstan's Hostel for Our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors, and to the "Bournemouth Blind Aid Society."

We hope some of our Bournemouth and other South Coast readers may be able to support this good work in aid of our splendid men.

The Medici Christmas Cards and Calendars, 1915-1916

A MOST charming series of Christmas cards, both for subjects and execution, are undoubtedly those published by the Medici Society, Ltd., of 7, Grafton Street, London, W. There is the Old Masters Series of Cards, 6d. each, in envelopes; these are fine reproductions in colour of or from the masterpieces of the old masters, Fra Angelico, Botticelli, Correggio, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Titian, Rembrandt, Rubens, Van Dyke, &c.; also from Gainsborough, Lely, Romney, &c. The picture of Lady Hamilton with the white shawl round her head, after Romney's picture in the Tennant Collection, is very bewitching. There are fifty subjects in this exquisite series of reproductions from some of the world's greatest art treasures. There is also a monochrome series of similar reproductions from the great masters which sell at 2d. each, including envelopes. The Medici Calendars for 1916 are three-sheet calendars, with a colour reproduction after the great masters on each sheet, sold in envelopes at 2s. each.

The Medici Society takes all pictorial art for its province. Its Carol Series at 1s. each are reproductions of tempera paintings by R. Anning Bell, R.W.S., with old English carols. The Louis Davis Series, at 6d. each, are collotype reproductions from original drawings by Louis Davis, all of Christmas Nativity subjects.

Every Medici Christmas Card and calendar bears the Society's well-known trade mark. They are all printed in this country. One effect of the War is that it encourages the home production of these things. We are no longer swamped with the wishy-washy art cards and calendars "made in Germany." The Medici Society deserve support as they do aim at giving us something worthy of the name of Art.

"The Hudson's Bay Road"

MESSRS. J. M. DENT & SONS, LTD., have just published "The Hudson's Bay Road," by A. H. de Trémaudan, with thirty-two half-tone illustrations and maps. This handsome volume is doubtless one of the results of Mr. J. M. Dent's recent visit to Canada, in which he could not fail to be impressed by the fact that while there is plenty of territory to develop there is only one direction in which Canada can expand, i.e., northwards. From the Atlantic she has gone west to the Pacific. Probably the average British reader on this side of the Atlantic looks upon Hudson's Bay and its territories as a land and sea of snow and ice away to the north of the real rich Canada, with a few forts for the protection of the fur hunters. Sir Wilfred Laurier some ten years ago said: "I hope that I shall live to see a city at the terminus of the Hudson's Bay Railway. . . . It is not enough for us to confine our views to Canada, that is now settled we must look ahead, we must push northward as far as colonisation can go. I have great confidence that before many years are passed we shall see towns and villages on the shores of Hudson's Bay, as we see on the shores of Norway where people will be prosperously engaged in the lumbering business, the pulp industry, the fishing industry, the mining industry and others. This is what I hope Canadians will see ere long."

This book's purpose is chiefly to tell of the country along the Hudson's Bay Railway now under construction, of Hudson's Bay, the Mediterranean Sea of North America, and of the resources to be found in Manitoba's new territory, including the great inland sea which it borders. The illustrations, maps, and index all add to the value of a work which shows us how great and rich and varied is all this vast territory under the British flag, which until of late years has been thought of as a "Land of Desolation"; it reminds one of the way Russia is developing her immense sub-Arctic territories.

DR. GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM

Dr. Putnam's second volume of his very interesting Reminiscences was noticed in the "P.C." of Nov. 7

How the Girls are helping!

IN every direction one finds our women and girls doing useful work in a quiet way. We see them in uniform at the railway stations clipping and collecting our tickets, cleaning out the carriages, selling newspapers, minding bookstalls, and from the printers instead of Devils we get Devilettes, in a neat uniform, and so on all round. The editor of that very interesting weekly The Teacher's World (the October 20th issue is particularly good and well illustrated), had the good idea of starting a great National Thrift Competition to interest children in thrift, among other ways by asking them to suggest how children can help their country. Many amusing suggestions have been received, none more so, perhaps than the following from a Scottish lassie who, after reminding us of the number of posts that have been left vacant by enlistment says: "Into these breeches we must step." As they say when a judge makes a joke, "Cheers and laughter."

A novel Studio

THE Venetian Studio of Mr. Henry Woods, R.A., is described by Mr. James Greig in the very charming 1915 issue of The Art Annual (Virtue & Co.):—"It was once a kind of summerhouse attached to a crumbling palace that belonged to the Vendramin family. When Mr. Woods discovered this delectable pavilion it had two tenants, one a firewood dealer, the other a macaroni merchant. The landlord of the building was quite willing to let it to Mr. Woods if the latter could by fair means evict the undesirable occupants. This he managed to do at the expense of much forcible argument and the, to them, munificent bribe of fifty lire—forty shillings. Once in possession of the house, Mr. Woods soon transformed it into an ideal place for work. The floor separating the lower and upper rooms was removed, and the whole area turned into a studio with a glass roof looking north and running along the entire top of the building. He also introduced to Venice a new kind of studio, one made completely of glass, which he erected at the back in a strip of the palace garden which had been divided into tenements, cultivated chiefly as vineyards. This glasshouse serves as a winter studio, and enables Mr. Woods to obtain quite natural effects of light and colour. In summer days the setting is very beautiful, vine leaves and pomegranate boughs forming a green diapered girdle around this island studio within a mile of the Campo San Marco and a few steps from San Sebastiano and the Giudecca Canal."

Memoirs of the Duke de Saint-Simon

MESSRS. STANLEY PAUL & Co. have now brought out Vols. 3 and 4 of their fine and fascinating six volume English translation, abridged and with notes, of "The Memoirs of the Duke de Saint-Simon." In that period of the long reign of Louis XIV dealt with in these two volumes, the English reader will find additional interest, inasmuch as Saint-Simon has so much to say touching Marlborough and the defeats the French were continually supplied with by him. We sincerely hope that the publishers are finding—that even in such times as these there is a public to appreciate this fine English edition of one of the world's most famous books, admirably translated by Mr. Francis Arkwright—in fact, one forgets that it is a translation—and finely produced in every respect. In these entertaining pages Saint-Simon takes us very much behind the scenes at the Court of Versailles—to read his Memoirs is to understand the French Revolution. The wonder is that its outbreak was so long delayed. Why should any people support in luxury such a crew of aristocratic blackguards, male and female, as are depicted and dissected for us in the lively pages of this French nobleman?

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's New and Forthcoming Publications

The following are brief notes upon a few of the many interesting books in Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's new List:—

"Modern Austria: Her Racial and Social Problems, with a Study of Italia Irredenta," by Virginio Gayda. Translated by Zoë M. Gibson and C. A. Miles. Revised and enlarged edition.

"Denmark and the Danes: A Survey of Danish Life, Institutions, and Culture," by William J. Harvey and Christian Reppien. With a map and 32 illustrations. An up-to-date book giving a clear and reasoned insight into the social, economic and political life of one of the smaller yet progressing nations.

"A Woman's Experiences in the Great War," by Louise Mack (Mrs. Creed). With 11 illustrations. Mrs. Creed has actually visited the many places she writes about, and gathered her information at first hand, so her book is authoritative. The story lacks nothing in the telling. It gives a vivid account of the terrible early days of the War in Belgium.

"Russia and the Great War," by Gregor Alexinsky, author of "Modern Russia," &c. A book that dispels many of the wild notions about Russia that are rife in this and other countries. A valuable addition to the numerous books on the War.

"The Soul of Europe: a Character Study of the Militant Nations," by Joseph McCabe. Mr. McCabe's subtitle gives an accurate description of his work.

"German Conspiracies in America," by William H. Skaggs. With an Introduction by T. Andrea Cook. This is an account of German mercenaries in the American Revolution, German spies and propagandists, what they have done in America, from an American point of view by an American. The author is a native of that section of America which was permeated with examples of "German Methods," and is to-day impoverished and harried by their results. The author tells the story, with its authoritative facts, simply yet faithfully; it is an illuminative exposé of Germanism.

"Contemporary Belgian Literature," by Jethro Bithell. This volume shows the development of contemporary Belgian literature from its beginning about the year 1880. Both sections of Belgian literature, Flemish as well as French, are dealt with, and the book will be found to give a survey of the main aspects of the intellectual life of our brilliant Allies. There are ample quotations, especially of the poetry, so that the author's own judgment is fortified by some of the best work of the Belgian writers themselves.

"The Poems of Robert W. Service." Bound uniform in cloth. Mr. Robert W. Service has been called "the Canadian Kipling." The popularity of his poems may be judged by the many impressions that have been called for.

"The Victorians: a Novel," by Netta Syrett. A singularly attractive psychological study of a girl of the late Victorian period. Practically a clever story of the making of a modern woman. Miss Syrett has the opportunity of making sly digs at the womanly foibles of twenty or thirty years ago, and does so with evident relish.

MR. ROBERT W. SERVICE.

"Me: a Book of Remembrance." This novel is the story of a girl who starts out alone and inexperienced to make her own living. It is a remarkable human document, and tells what risks, dangers, failures, and successes meet an attractive girl who goes out alone and unprotected to work in the world of men.

"The Keeper of the Door," by Ethel M. Dell. Miss Dell has gained a deservedly high reputation for "The Way of an Eagle" and "The Rocks of Valpré," and her latest novel will add greatly to her fame as a clever writer. It is the sort of book that holds the reader from the first page to the last.

UNWIN'S "NATURE BOOKS"

"Sam Briggs, V.C.," by Richard Marsh. Sam Briggs was a little Cockney clerk who enlisted shortly after the War broke out, and who, by good conduct, gets his second stripe before being sent to the front. Here he has a series of adventures that surprise no one more than Sam Briggs himself, adventures not very extravagant nor impossibly heroic, but ringing very true. Sam's experiences are very diversified, and lead to his eventual promotion to commissioned rank. A very fresh and effective war story. Another book by Richard Marsh is "The Beetle: a Mystery."

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin has not overlooked young people and their requirements, and in Unwin's "Nature Books" we have a series of books beautifully illustrated enabling children to study for themselves the nature and habits of birds, animals and insects.

Another book suitable as a gift book for children is "Things," by Dolf Wyllarde, illustrated by B. M. Peirse and Charles Vane. This is not Miss Wyllarde's first excursion into the children's literary world, for she has contributed to Little Folks and the Girl's Realm. "Things" is written very simply, avoiding clever phrases and the tiresome humour of long words frequently offered to children, but really only suitable for grown-ups. It is a fairy-story woven into everyday life, and explains that puzzling feeling that many children have that even their toys and lesson-books have a sort of life of themselves.

"Chats on Old Silver," by Arthur Hayden, author of "Chats on Old Furniture," &c., is a practical guide for collectors and connoisseurs. It deals with the art of the silversmith from about 1660 to the nineteenth century, and is lavishly illustrated. A most useful feature is the illustrated tables of marks.

"Chats on Military Curios," by Stanley C. Johnson, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.E.S. With 80 illustrations. In "Chats on Military Curios" the subject has been treated in a generous manner, for there are chapters dealing not only with badges, medals, decorations, uniforms, and weapons, but also with armour, military prints, autographs of great soldiers, war postage stamps, war money, curios made by prisoners of war, &c.

"Lithography and Lithographers: Some Chapters in the History of the Art," by Elizabeth Robins Pennell, with a description and technical explanations of modern artistic methods by Joseph Pennell. A book of exceptional interest, written by experts, fully illustrated by half-tone plates with some specimens of photo-lithographs and a lithograph in colour.

"Chats on Japanese Prints," by Arthur Davison Ficke. This new volume provides a modern and comprehensive survey of the whole field of Japanese prints, from Moronobu to Hiroshige, fully illustrated, and with a large number of facsimiles of the signatures of artists. A separate section of biography, analysis, and comparison is devoted to the work of each of the great designers. To each of these studies is appended information as to the comparative rarity and desirability of each artist's work, together with suggestions as to value that should be of great aid to both the beginner and the advanced collector. A chapter is devoted to the consideration of the selection of prints for a collection, the detection of forgeries, and the repairing and preserving of prints.

Some S.P.C.K. Books Suitable for Gifts.

"The King's Double," by E. E. Cowper, is a stirring story of Cavalier and Roundhead, with plenty of fighting and thrilling adventures. The title gives a pretty clear indication of the story. There are several illustrations by Arch. Webb.

"The Siege of Mr. Johnson," by H. Louisa Bedford, illustrated by H. R. Millar. A story which tells how two youngsters laid siege to the heart of a crotchety old misanthrope, and won an easy victory.

"Mary's Meadow, and other Tales of Fields and Flowers," by Juliana Horatio Ewing. A new edition, with eight full-page coloured illustrations by H. V. Wheelhouse. Decorative title-page and end-papers. Mrs. Ewing's stories are never-failing in interest and popularity.

"The War Gifts: a Story for Children," by J. A. Staunton-Batty, with four coloured illustrations. A charming story by a popular author, showing how children learnt to help during the War.

"Dauntless Heart," by Mary Bradford Whiting. A story intended to show that the pressing problem of industrial unrest can only be solved by the might of love.

"Love and Loveday," by Mrs. Hobart-Hampden. A love story which every girl may read, and from which some it is hoped may draw profit.

"My Lord of Reading: a Tale of the Reformation," by Gertrude Hollis. A picture of English life in a monastic town during the dissolution of the religious houses.

"The Moulding of Marjorie," by Mary Bradford Whiting, is the story of an ambitious girl, who sets out to earn her own living as a typewriting clerk. It is the record of thousands of girls of to-day, and would be read with profit and pleasure by them.

"Three in a Bungalow," by M. F. Hutchinson, being the holiday adventures of three girls in the country. A most delightful way of spending a holiday.

"Anxious Audrey," by Mabel Quiller-Couch. A clergyman's little daughter, ashamed of her poor home and shabby surroundings, is taught that happiness does not depend on external things such as these.

"Finding Her Family," by Elsie Jeanette Oxenham. A story of the Yorkshire coast, and a trio of girls—Hazel, who finds her family and starts the Dolls' Pageant, Brenda from the moors, and Audrey, who finds and loses her sister, and takes the right way out of a difficult position.

"Plain Deb," by Lucy M. Parker. A story of the influence of Deborah—the "Bee" and "Honey" in daily life.

"The Mystery of Castle Veor: or the Spies in our Midst," by E. E. Cowper. An exciting story of secrets and danger on the south-west coast of England during the Great War, 1915.

"Netert the Egyptian: a Tale of the Time of Moses," by J. A. Staunton Batty. Netert was the daughter of the High Priest of Ptah, who was summoned by Pharaoh to withstand Moses. Rastetep, her lover, cast in his lot with the Hebrews. The story describes the influence of the plagues upon the minds of the more thoughtful Egyptians.

"The Adversity Plant: a Tale of the Chiltern Hills," by Mary E. Shipley, with many illustrations in black and white.

"Geoffey," by Amy Cripps Vernon. The story of a little boy who intends to help everyone when he is a man. Some of his plans are realised before he grows up.

"How Rhoda Went Abroad: a Story of a Missionary Exhibition," by and written by a well-known worker among boys.

"The Lazar House of Leros: a Tale of the Eastern Church in the Seventeenth Century," by the late Rev. J. M. Neale, D.D. A chapter in the heroic resistance of the Eastern Christians against the age-long tyranny of the Turks.

"The Sea Tigers," by the late Rev. J. M. Neale, D.D. A description of the struggle of a little community of early Christians with a band of roving tigers.

The S.P.C.K. annual volumes include "Our Empire," a handsome volume for children, with coloured frontispiece and hundreds of illustrations; "The Dawn of Day"; and "Golden Sunbeams."

Rare Cruikshankiana

MESSRS. KARSLAKE & COMPANY, 35,

Pond Street, Hampstead, London, have recently published in charmingly tasteful form "A Few Notes upon some Rare Cruikshankiana," by Albert M. Cohn, author of "A Bibliographical Catalogue of the Printed Works Illustrated by Cruikshank." Every Cruikshank collector should secure a copy of this dainty tit-bit from the Cruikshank menu—the number of copies is limited to 250, of which 225 are for sale; each is numbered, and signed by Mr. Albert H. Cohn, well-known as an enthusiast for the quaint and curious old book illustrator who may fairly be described as the Hogarth of the nineteenth century—a little Hogarth. The illustrations, almost all previously unpublished, include a portrait of George Cruikshank by Himself, reminding one of the side face side whisker portraits of Prince Albert; "Popping the Question," coloured by hand—it is as Mr. Cohn says, "a pleasing example of George Cruikshank's earlier and best style"—it is from a water colour circa 1830. One of the illustrations is a facsimile of the very scarce wood cut wrapper to the twenty illustrated parts of Dickens's "Sketches by Boz," that were issued as a new edition in 1839. Other illustrations are hand coloured copies of "A Cornish Wrestling Match," etched on copper by George Cruikshank in 1824, for an unpublished edition of Herbert's letters, and a hand coloured copy of another etching for the same unpublished work showing "A Scene on the Promenade at the Riverside near Greenwich." Curious in the picture of the Cornish Wrestling Match is to note the cricket pads on the wrestlers and the typical figures of John Bull among the spectators. Mr. Albert M. Cohn's text beams with enthusiasm for his subject, so naturally it is interesting. Speaking from the £ s. d. point of view he thinks that fine and perfect examples of George Cruikshank's work previous to 1850 will increase in value considerably; what he did after that period when he took to non-smoking and to abusing drink, has only a stationary or declining value.

ILLUSTRATION FROM "THE SIEGE OF MR. JOHNSON"
(S.P.C.K.)

Elizabeth Ken. Shows how an exhibition roused those who had given little thought to missions, and its effect on a girl whose life was in danger of being ruined by absorption in self.

"Only a Boy: or, How Vere got back the Diamond," by J. Merivale. The scene is laid in the bazaars of Indian towns, and in the Himalayas. The hero is a delightful schoolboy, who saves his father, a diamond merchant, from ruin.

"Queen Caroline," by A. S. Jackson. Tells of the adventures of a little girl, an only child, who has to spend the winter with a family of cousins while her parents are abroad.

"S. Winifred's Troop: Story of Boy Scouts," by the Rev. Edgar Rogers, M.A. Recounts incidents in the life of a troop of Church Scouts, founded on fact

BLACKWOODS' NEW BOOKS

THE FIRST HUNDRED THOUSAND

by SUB (IAN HAY)

Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons expect a very large demand for Ian Hay's great story of "The First Hundred Thousand." This account of Kitchener's First Army, its training and its fighting, has become famous in the pages of "Blackwood's Magazine," and there are thousands who will wish to retain in permanent book form the record which bids fair to become a classic of the Great War. It is hoped to publish the book on November 24th. The publishers will be glad to receive booksellers' orders before that date. The price of the book is 6/-.

ALSO TO BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY

Adventures of a Despatch Rider By Capt. W. H. L. WATSON. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The undoubted supremacy of "Blackwood's Magazine" in obtaining the best material in records of the War is now universally recognised. This book, which has appeared in the pages of the magazine, conveys the truest impression of the psychology of war in the guise of a most interesting account of the motor-cycle despatch carrier's life.

The Life of Field-Marshal Sir George White, V.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.C.I.E., O.M.

By the Rt. Hon. Sir MORTIMER DURAND, P.C., G.C.M.G. In two vols. Demy 8vo. Illustrated with Maps, Plans, and Portraits. 30s. net.

The Biography of "The Defender of Ladysmith" would be a work of the first importance among military chronicles, whatever might be the prevailing conditions at the time of its appearance.

The interest that it will arouse must certainly be heightened by the fact that we are now employing in a fight for national existence some of the lessons first taught us by the South African War.

Across Asia Minor on Foot By W. J. CHILDS. Illustrated. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

A book not only of great topical interest at the present time, but also of a literary and descriptive quality that suggests comparison with Kinglake. It describes the inhabitants and country of the ancient battlefields of classic times, where Turkey now fights for its last foothold in Europe. It contains over fifty illustrations.

FIVE BOOKS IN GREAT DEMAND

My Police Court Friends with the Colours

By ROBERT HOLMES, a Police Court Missionary and Probation Officer. Crown 8vo. 2s. net.

"A remarkable and a heartening book."—Sheffield Telegraph.

"Well worth reading among the multitude of war books for the freshness of its special outlook and its social suggestiveness."—Times.

The Rearguard By SYDNEY C. GRIER, With Frontispiece in Colours by A. PEARSE. Crown 8vo. 6s.

In the first pages of his story Sydney Grier puts in the mouth of one of his characters the motif of his new book. "The man goes on in front and the lady is like the rearguard . . . she helps to keep him safe."

"The Rearguard" tells of how Gilbert Berringer acquired a kingdom over the seas and in the heart of a woman. It is a tale of the Great Adventure and the victory won by the devotion and self-sacrifice of the woman no less than by the strength and courage of the man. Sydney Grier's many readers will cordially welcome this book.

The Great Tah Dope By "OLE LUK-OIE." Crown 8vo. 6s.

It is sufficient to say of this book that it is by the author of "The Green Curve," who is now famous also as "Eye-Witness" at the British Expeditionary Force Headquarters. "The Great Tah Dope" is very like "The Green Curve," only more so. At his best the author "is above everything exciting. There are story-tellers who make us feel that something is going to happen. It is a rare gift; Mr. Kipling has it in 'The End of the Passage,' and 'Ole Luk-Oie' certainly has it in some impalpable way of his own."—Times.

Nicky-Nan, Reservist By "Q" (Sir A. T. QUILLER-BOUCH), Author of "Hooken and Hunkin." Crown 8vo. 6s.

In this story "Q" returns to the scene of his former triumphs, Cornwall and its quaint people and ways. To those who love their "Q"—and who does not?—"Nicky-Nan" will make an irresistible appeal.

The Thirty-Nine Steps By JOHN BUCHAN. 1s. net.

As a real thrill—a tale of such breathless excitement as even to supersede the newspaper—"The Thirty-Nine Steps" can have few rivals.

A Note about 'Captain Desmond, V.C.'

The books in Blackwood's Series of Shilling Novels fully justify the title Popular, for their selling qualities are well known in "the Trade." Not the least remarkable of them is Mrs. Diver's first splendid story entitled 'Captain Desmond, V.C.' The sale of this book in all its editions has been phenomenal. Mrs. Diver has now revised and partially re-written her first work, and Messrs. Blackwood have pleasure in announcing that the twenty-sixth impression of the book, to be issued immediately, will be a much altered and greatly improved version. The demand for the new book is certain to be very great.

Wm. BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON

Messrs. Blackwood's Autumn Books

"The First Hundred Thousand, being the Unofficial Chronicle of a Unit of 'K (1),' " by Ian Hay, "The Junior Sub." Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons expect a very large demand for Ian Hay's great story of "The First Hundred Thousand." This account of Kitchener's First Army, its training and its fighting, has become famous in the pages of Blackwood's Magazine, and there are thousands who will wish to retain in permanent book form the record which bids fair to become a classic of the Great War. It is hoped to publish the book on November 24th.

"The Life of Field-Marshal Sir George White, V.C., G.C.M.G., &c., in 2 volumes, illustrated, and with maps, plans, and portraits, by the Right Hon. Sir Mortimer Durand, P.C., G.C.M.G. The biography of "The Defender of Ladysmith" would be a work of the first importance among military chronicles whatever might be the prevailing conditions at the time of its appearance. The interest that it will arouse must certainly be heightened by the fact that we are now employing in a fight for national existence some of the lessons first taught us by the South African War. Sir George White's career covers many of the smaller wars in which our Empire is constantly engaged, and it culminated in an event of the highest military importance. The Defence of Ladysmith, so magnificently sustained by Sir George White, held a position relative to the whole South African War somewhat similar to that of Warsaw in the fight between Russia and Germany. The biographer has wisely divided the Life into two portions, the first covering the Indian Mutiny, the Afghan War, Burmah Campaign of 1885-86, the Zhoib Expedition, and C.-in-C. in India, 1893-98; and the second, the South African War and his two final appointments as Governor of Gibraltar and of Chelsea Hospital. These two phases form respectively the first and second volumes.

"Diary of a Nursing Sister on the Western Front, 1914-1915." This is a story of splendid heroism and devotion to duty. The author has been in France from the beginning of the War, and her experiences on ambulance train and in field hospital under fire make an inspiring record of a poignant interest.

"Across Asia Minor on Foot," illustrated, by W. J. Childs. A book not only of great topical interest at the present time, but also of excellent literary and descriptive quality. It describes the inhabitants and country of the ancient battlefields of classic times, where Turkey now fights for its last foothold in Europe, and contains over fifty illustrations.

"My Police Court Friends with the Colours," by Robert Holmes, a Police Court Missionary and Probation Officer. During the last seventeen years Mr. Holmes has visited 16,738 men and lads in their own homes, having followed them from the Police Court after prosecution for breaches of the law. Thanks to a variety of means of help put into operation for their benefit by numerous persons, most of these were stayed in their evil course at its beginning. A very large proportion of these men have regained their position in Society, and, when War broke out, 1,267 of them answered the nation's call. In this book, which is really a "human document" Mr. Holmes places before their fellow-countrymen the brief biographies of seventy-two of these heroes.

"The Rearguard," with frontispiece in colours by A. Pearse, by Sydney C. Grier. In the first pages of his story Sydney Grier puts in the mouth of one of his characters the motif of his new book. "The man goes on in front, and the lady is like the rearguard . . . she helps to keep him safe." "The Rearguard" tells of how Gilbert Berringer acquired a kingdom over the seas and in the heart of a woman. It is a tale of the great adventure and the victory won by the devotion and self-sacrifice of the woman no less than by the strength and courage of the man. Sydney Grier's many readers will cordially welcome this book.

"Religion and Science: a Philosophical Essay," by John Theodore Merz, Ph.D., D.C.L., LL.D., author of "A History of European Thought in the Nineteenth Century."

"John Blaw of Castlehill: Jacobite and Criminal," by Christopher N. Johnston, K.C., LL.D. No romance gathers round the story of the murder of William Cairns, farmer, Nether Kinnedder, Saline, by John Blaw of Castlehill, Culross, in a Clackmannan inn on September 4th, 1767. But the crime has never been forgotten. Its tradition has come down and still hangs about Dunimarle, as Castlehill is now called. The evidence at the trial was not reported in the press, as that was not usual in those days, and a certain mystery has always surrounded the crime. But the full story was recorded in the books of Justiciary, where it has lain undisturbed for a century and a half. In resuscitating it—by permission of Mr. Crole, K.C., Clerk of Justiciary, and with the help of his Depute, Mr. Slight—has been incidentally found some unfamiliar things which illustrate the customs of the past. The record of the trial affords a vivid illustration of the procedure of the Courts in which Braxfield, Kames, and Eskgrove administered stern justice in the latter half of the eighteenth century. To make that picture complete, the record is given of the whole of the proceedings at the Justice Ayre at Stirling when Blaw was condemned, although this includes another short case which does not concern Blaw's crime. As the notes contain a good deal of biographical and genealogical information, a full index of names is given.

"The Ministry of Dr. John Macleod in the Parish of Govan." The seventh Macleod Memorial Lecture, delivered in Oatlands Parish Church, the third Sunday in Advent, December 14th, 1913, and subsequently expanded. By Roger S. Kirkpatrick, B.D., Minister at Yarrow.

"A History of Mediaeval Political Theory in the West," by Sir R. W. Carlyle, K.C.I.E., and A. J. Carlyle,

M.A., D.Litt.; Vol. 3, by A. J. Carlyle, M.A., D.Litt.

"Adventures of a Despatch Rider," by Captain W. H. L. Watson. The success of Blackwood's Magazine in obtaining excellent material in records of the War is now recognised. This book, which has appeared in the pages of "Maga," conveys an impression of the psychology of war in the guise of a most interesting account of the motor cycle despatch carrier's life, and will rank as one of the most finished literary productions concerning the retreat and advance of the British Army in France, and the winter campaign of 1914-15.

"The Great Tab Dope," by "Ole Luk-Oie." It is sufficient to say of this book that it is by the author of "The Green Curve," who is now famous also as "Eye-Witness" at B.E.F. Headquarters.

"Nicky-Nan, Reservist," by "Q" (Sir A. T. Quiller-Couch). "Q" has boldly made the War the background of his latest romance. With his characteristic mixture of high seriousness and quaint humour, he describes how the outbreak of war surprised a Cornish village and tested the quality of its inhabitants. The story is a humorous study of character, with the War deftly touched on as a revealing circumstance.

"Annora, a Story of the Nineteenth Century," by the author of "My Trivial Life and Misfortune," "Poor Nellie." It may be said of this novel, as was said of the same author's "My Trivial Life and Misfortune"—it is as if the author had lived her story ere she wrote it, and had written it at once to be avenged and to be relieved. She has the power of presenting real people.

"The Adventures of Cigarette," by John Roland. A really delightful story of the travels and adventures of Cigarette, and his youthful companion. There is a glamour about the personality of Cigarette. He is a philosopher, a roamer of the broad highways of the world, whose knowledge of men and things make him an attractive companion as we follow him and his devoted Bavarian companion across Europe. The novel has excitement as well as romance.

"Egypt, from 1798 to 1914," by Arthur E. P. B. Weigall. A series of very amusing, entertaining, and sometimes brilliant sketches of the men who "made" Egyptian history during the past hundred years.

"Practical Nursing," by the late Isla Stewart, Matron of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London; and Herbert E. Cuff, M.D., F.R.C.S. The book is one which is full of practical wisdom, the result of wide experience and thorough knowledge of the subject discussed. The collaboration between a medical practitioner and the Matron of a great Training School for Nurses has been productive of the happiest results, and it is not surprising that the constant demand for this admirable handbook necessitates the publication of new editions.

"The School Anthology of English Verse," edited by J. H. Lobban, M.A. Part 1, Chaucer to Burns; Part 2, Wordsworth to Newbolt; and in one volume complete.

Some of Messrs. Chatto & Windus's New Books

"When Christmas Comes Around," Stories of Children, by Priscilla Underwood, with Pictures in Colour by Jessie Willcox Smith. Miss Willcox Smith's picture-books for children have already won for themselves such a high place that a new example of her charming art is sure of an instant appreciation. In this new Christmas book the attractiveness of her previous work is fully maintained, while the reproduction of the original drawings has been carried out on a more extensive scale than heretofore.

"The Cruise of the 'Janet Nichol,'" by Mrs. R. L. Stevenson, with a map and 24 illustrations. This book is part of a diary kept by Mrs. Stevenson during the cruise which she and her husband took in 1890 among the South Sea Islands. Much of this material, which is copiously illustrated with photographs, has never been given to the public before, and it offers an authentic supplement to Stevenson's South Sea writings.

"Rosalba's Journal, and Other Papers," by Austin Dobson, with 6 illustrations. In this work the author of "Eighteenth Century Vignettes" continues his studies of that delightful period. Rosalba Carriera, the famous Venetian miniature painter who gives the book its title, provides Mr. Dobson with a perfect subject for his delicate pen portraiture. Other charming essays include those on Streatham Place, the Duchess of Portland, Lord George Gordon and the Gordon Riots, and the Early Years of Madame Royale.

"Forty Years of 'Spy,'" by Leslie Ward. With over 150 illustrations, in colour and monochrome, after portraits and caricatures by the author. Mr. Leslie Ward, for so many years famous as the caricaturist "Spy," has in this book drawn upon an inexhaustible fund of stories from his personal experience. His work, no less than his character, has brought him all through his life into contact with some of the most notable people of the age. He has portrayed them and he has caricatured them; he has had thrilling experiences while tracking the subjects of future caricatures; he has been clubman, artist, bohemian; and he has at the same time moved freely in Society, where his own talent and the artistic reputation of his father and his mother have made him welcome.

"The Ballet of the Nations," by Vernon Lee. With decorations by Maxwell Armfield. A satire on war. Under the veil of allegory the reader will not fail to discern a reference to the present world-wide struggle of the nations. But the application of the work is universal, and it will strongly appeal to all those who have learnt to probe beneath the surface of the militarist philosophy.

"Goldoni, a Biography," by H. C. Chatfield-Taylor. With 16 illustrations. Eight years ago Mr. Chatfield-Taylor wrote a book on Molière which was very cordially received, and which was acknowledged to be a work of the greatest utility and scholarship. Mr. Chatfield-

Taylor has now written a biography of Goldoni, who has been called the "Molière of Italy." This biography re-creates by the use of contemporary memoirs the general life of the time in which Goldoni lived, the life which he so greatly portrayed and satirised in his plays. It is the first book of its kind to appear in English; and to students of the Drama it will prove invaluable.

"The Surrey Hills," by F. E. Greer. With 28 illustrations in collotype and line by Elliott Seabrooke. A book about one of the loveliest districts in England, around which cling all kinds of associations, literary, historical, and social.

"A History of Babylonia and Assyria, from the Earliest Times to the Persian Conquest," by Leonard W. King, M.A., Litt.D., F.S.A. To be completed in three volumes; Vols. 1 and 2 are now ready.

"The Poems of John Keats," chronologically arranged, and with a preface by Sir Sidney Colvin, in two volumes, printed at the Florence Press. A sumptuous edition, most suitable for presentation.

"The Celestial Aftermath," by Cyril Scott, and "Songs to Save a Soul," by Irene Rutherford McLeod. Two books of poems possessing unusual merit.

"The Hound of Heaven," ten drawings illustrating the poem of Francis Thompson, by Frideswith Huddart.

"Behind the Scenes at the Front," by George Adam, Paris Correspondent of the Times.

Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons

Topical and Xmas Books

Among the many books published by Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons, may be noted the following:—

"The Romance of Old Belgium," by Elizabeth W. Champney, with original pen-and-ink drawings by Albert Chanler and numerous other illustrations, describes in story and legend, and with a wealth of pictorial illustration, many of the monuments which have now been marred or demolished by the invading Germans.

"The Golden Slipper," by Anna Katharine Green. The dominant figure in this series of detective stories is a young girl, Violet Strange, a detective, who has many problems to solve.

Another book on Belgium is "Belgium: Neutral and Loyal," by Emile Waxweiler; a spirited and unanswerable defence of Belgium against the German charge that she had abandoned her neutrality before the War.

A neutral's conclusions upon the responsibility of the nations concerned in the War will be found in "The Evidence in the Case," by James M. Beck, late Assistant Attorney-General of the United States. This is a discussion of the moral responsibility for the War of 1914, as disclosed by the diplomatic records of England, Germany, Russia, France and Belgium.

The automatic pistol is likely to oust the revolver in course of time, so "Automatic Pistol Shooting," by Walter Winans, should prove of great interest to those using these arms of precision. Mr. Winans is one of the best pistol shots in the world, and his book is thoroughly practical; it is also fully illustrated.

"America Fallen, a Sequel to the Great War," by J. Bernard Walker, is an attempt to show the American nation the fate that may befall it for its non-participation in the War. It is startling enough, at all events!

We reproduce an illustration from "Alfred the Great, 849-899," by Beatrice A. Lees; a fully illustrated book, giving all that is known about the Truth-teller, and possibly with greater detail and skill than has ever been done before.

"Memories of a Publisher," by George Haven Putnam, Litt.D., continues and completes the reminiscences in Major Putnam's "Memories of My Youth," published in 1914. The new volume of Dr. Putnam's memories covers the lengthy period of thirty years—from 1865 to 1895. In a series of appendices, Dr. Putnam prints letters which he has, during the past few months, brought into print in America and England, dealing with certain phases of the present War. A more extended notice of this book will be found on page 463 of our issue of November 6th.

The last three of Mrs. Florence L.

Barclay's books are "The Wall of Partition," "My Heart's Right There," and "In Hoc Vince: The Story of a Red Cross Flag." The latter would make an excellent substitute for a Christmas card.

"The Promise," by James B. Hendryx. A vivid narrative of the lumber camps of North-West Canada, of the work of strong men, of hardships undergone, and of dangers met bravely. A tale full of the exhilaration of the great outdoors, with a relief of wholesome humour, and a background of a deep and steadfast love.

"Cathedrals and Cloisters of Northern France," by Elise Whitlock Rose, with 225 photogravure and other illustrations by Vida Hunt Francis. Among the many places dealt with, we note especially the following: Verdun, Strasbourg, Metz, Nancy, Toul, Chalons-sur-Marne.

THE ALFRED JEWEL IN THE ANGLO-SAXON ART COLLECTION OF THE ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM, OXFORD

Found in 1693 at Newton Park, Somerset

From "Alfred the Great"

A book of special interest at the moment is "Alsace and Lorraine: from Cæsar to Kaiser," by Ruth Putnam. A cleverly written account of the two countries.

"One American's Opinion of the European War: an Answer to Germany's Appeals," by Frederick W. Whitridge.

"The Younger Generation," by Ellen Key. The book deserves the thoughtful attention of readers of all ages, because of the character of its recommendations and because of the opportunity it offers for intelligent guidance of the young.

"Memories and Anecdotes," by Kate Sanborn. A gossipy, delightful volume of reminiscences—the retrospect of a woman who is interesting in herself, and who attracted other interesting people. Among those who appear in her lively pages of "Memories" are: Henry Ward Beecher, William Cullen Bryant, Mark Twain, Emerson and Horace Greeley.

"In the Oregon Country," by George Palmer Putnam; with an introduction by the Hon. James Withycombe, Governor of Oregon. A record of open-air life in the Far West.

"The Mauve Library" is a series of novels of sentiment—fresh, happy and innocent. Each volume contains a frontispiece. The size is the same as the usual 6s. novel, although the stories are not quite so long. Readers of "The Mauve Library" can be sure of many delightful hours in charming company.

The "Heroes of the Nations" Series has been planned in the belief that the study of universal history should begin with representative men; that the characteristic qualities and achievements of states or peoples are most clearly exhibited in the biographies of those who have led their contemporaries in thought or action. No pains have been spared to enlist the services of experts and to ensure the maintenance of a high standard of historical scholarship. The series will be found of service even to advanced students, as epitomising the conclusions of modern research. But the authors have consistently provided for the requirements of the general reading public. The series now contains fifty volumes.

Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons also have a number of books of especial interest to professional nurses and others undertaking nursing, such as V.A.D. helpers, &c.

What may happen after the War

THE English especially—and the French to a lesser extent—are already busily engaged in an endeavour to gain a foothold that will assure them the bulk of the South American business after the War. The opinion is expressed by some that German manufacturers after the War will not be able to compete so strongly as regards price as they have been accustomed to, and the English base their thought of holding the markets more especially on this supposition. Mr. Kernan states that in cheap goods the Germans until now have been absolutely unbeatable. He states that in Buenos Ayres he observed some articles of German manufacture that were selling at retail at a lower price than they could be manufactured for in the United States. It is Mr. Kernan's impression that American goods will, as regards the factor of price, be able to compete successfully with English goods.—American Stationer.

Miss Ethel Sidgwick's new novel, "The Accolade," is the history of another group of the fictitious "Ingestre" family, to which belong the heroines and other characters of her last two books, "Duke Jones" and "A Lady of Leisure."

Trade Notes and News

MESSRS. CECIL PALMER & HAYWARD
write: "We have arranged with Mr.
William Bald to represent our interests in the North of England, Scotland and Ireland."

MESSRS. C. ARTHUR PEARSON advise us that on and after January 1st, 1916, their well-known series hitherto published at 1s. subject, will be issued at 1s. net.
Any orders now in hand if completed by December 31st, 1915, or sent in time to despatch by that date, will be supplied on the old terms, after which the customary rates for net books will be charged.

MESSRS. T. & T. CLARK, of Edinburgh, inform us that they have decided to make certain alterations in the prices of their publications, and, in the case of "subject" books are taking this opportunity of adopting the net system wherever that is practicable. The change will take effect as from January 1st, 1916.
In every case the new net price will be lower than the present "subject" price.

BOOKSELLERS who have had experience of its utility will be glad to hear that Messrs. Barnicott & Pearce, of Taunton, are publishing as usual their excellent "General Book Catalogue," including books just published or forthcoming.
It is classified and up to date. We have had to print its title in ink along the back to read from the top down, although there is plenty of space for it to have been printed with the title on the side. It costs no more and is indispensable in a work of reference.

MESSRS. CROSBY LOCKWOOD & SON beg to announce that, owing to increased costs of production, and the further extension of the literary contents of "The Engineer's Year Book," the proprietors are compelled to make the price of the forthcoming 1916 edition 15s. net, in place of 15s. subject. This indispensable annual, which is now in its twenty-third year of publication, more than sustains its reputation of reliability and usefulness to the up-to-date engineer in practice in whatever branch of the profession he may be engaged.

Letters to the Editor

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.

Books Wanted for our Troops

DEAR SIR,—You will know the writer as a constant advertiser in your columns for books wanted. This is also an application for books wanted, but this time I want them from my confrères for nothing, which at first sight reads rather unreasonably. But I would mention that for nearly a year past I have been acting as Honorary Representative for Sussex for the Camps' Library, of which Sir Edward Ward (the newly appointed Director of Voluntary Effort) is the Chairman and the Hon. Mrs. Anstruther, the Honorary Secretary.

This organisation is doing a very great work in supplying books to the various units at home and abroad.
Since the beginning of the war, books have been sent to the troops in India, Egypt and the Persian Gulf, and a constant supply of about 70,000 books and magazines goes out every week to the Dardanelles and France. We have also sent out about 170,000 novels to the Camps in England as well as a great number of magazines. We have now become the distributing depot for the Post Office scheme, by which books and magazines can be handed over the counter at the nearest Post Office and come to us free of charge. The books are sorted and repacked and sent to various organisations approved by the Admiralty and War Office for supplying the prisoners of war in Germany, hospitals and hospital ships, as well as the entire Army.

And now I wish to appeal to booksellers generally to look through that portion of their stock of old novels, magazines, and such of that "light reading" that makes them feel worse every time they look at it by reason of the time it stops with them in these times, and to send all they can afford, either direct to the Camps' Library at 45, Horseferry Road, Westminster, London, S.W., or handed over the counter of their nearest Post Office unwrapped and unaddressed; or if preferred, send to me at 1, Duke Street, Brighton, for sorting and despatch. I have myself exhausted all my own stock of the kind.

Apologising for trespassing on your valuable space and trusting you will be able to find room for this letter somewhere.—Yours faithfully,

J. M. MORTON,

1, Duke Street,
Brighton.

[We hope Mr. Morton's appeal will bear fruit. We have sent a good many books and periodicals to the Front and find they are greatly appreciated.—Ed.]

Admirable Action of a Publisher

DEAR SIR,—I am a bookseller in a university centre, and received a communication from Messrs. The Cambridge Press the other day to the effect that they had consigned to me a parcel for one of the colleges, which order had been sent direct to them from this particular college, with a request to deliver same.
The publishers at the same time informed the authorities of the college that the books were despatched and would be supplied through me. I think this an admirable action worthy of emulation by publishers throughout the country.—
Yours faithfully,

A PROVINCIAL BOOKSELLER.

Henry G. Bohn

SIR,—In your notice of Dr. Putnam's book you quote that he says Henry G.
Bohn, whose guest he was at Twickenham, had the bad manners which an Englishman with money was allowed to

Notices of Books

From The Aldine Publishing Co., Ltd.—"Revolvers and Pistols, and How to Use Them," by Frank Bonnett. A shilling book profusely and well illustrated, describing these weapons of precision to the minutest degree. The .45 Service Pattern revolver naturally has much space devoted to it, but the author finds room for every description of pistol or revolver from the Derringer to the .45 Webley self-loading military automatic pistol. Even the air pistol and duelling pistols are not neglected. Chapters are given upon How to Shoot, The Care of Arms, Ammunition, &c., and if this book could be read by all who possess pistols or are about to do so, many accidents would be avoided.

From Messrs. J. Baker & Son.—"Echoes from the Psalms," by Marcus S. C. Rickards. A volume of poems each of which has been inspired by a text from the Psalms is surely unique and that Mr. Rickards has compassed the unique is a point in his favour. Unfortunately, his verse rarely stands the tests usually applied to poetry and relies for merit chiefly upon its undoubted piety.

From Messrs. John Bale, Sons & Daniels, Ltd.—"A Practical Manual of Tuberculosis for Nurses," by L. T. Burra, M.D. Oxon. Dr. Burra brings a specialised knowledge of tuberculosis and a long practical experience of many methods of treatment to the compiling of his manual. The book is thoroughly up-to-date, is clearly written and contains much sound advice to be passed on to patients about to leave the sanatorium.

From Messrs. W. Dawson & Sons, Ltd.—"Paul Withnell: A Lancashire Idyll," by A. W. King. Unpretentiousness and sincerity mark the course of Mr. King's narrative and lift it above the work of many better-known authors. Paul Withnell comes of the farmer-cum-weaver stock peculiar to the north country moorlands. The sturdy honesty and piety of these people is well and truly drawn and the robust mental outlook of Paul himself springs from the orderly, hard life of his youth with its evenings spent either in the night-school or in listening to the reading aloud of really good literature in the home ingle-nook. The period is the time of hand-loom weaving and although the incidents are often unusual they are quietly and convincingly handled.

From Messrs. Forbes & Co., Chicago.—"Cream Toasts," by Fred Emerson Brooks. Another booklet of short verses couched in the form of toasts is now added to the favourite "Buttered Toasts" from the pen of the same writer. The new verselets are as apt as those in the former volume, and touch many topics of social interest with the humour or sentiment that helps towards conviviality.

From The Garden City Press, Ltd., Letchworth.—"The War and What After," by Raymond Unwin. Dismissing armies and navies in a few hurried phrases that will set on edge the teeth of fighting men, Mr. Unwin pats England on the back and so arrives at his main subject. An International Union is his chief hope for the future, a Union which shall support a Hague Tribunal strong enough to enforce its decisions. How we can introduce it on a beaten Germany, the feeling of brotherhood with ourselves which the attempted formation of such a Union will necessitate, is a point untouched by Mr. Unwin.

From "Geographia, Ltd."—"The Daily Telegraph Large Scale and Complete War Map of the British Front." This latest map to be issued by the Daily Telegraph is the eleventh of its kind since the outbreak of war. The scale is 1½ miles to the inch, and the place-names prominent in the recent fighting are easily to be discovered.

From Messrs. Ginn & Co.—"Elements of Algebra, Part II," and "Plane Geometry, Parts I and II," by G. St. L. Carson, M.A., M.Sc., and David Eugene Smith, Ph.D., LL.D. Nothing marches more steadily with the times than methods of teaching school subjects. Even algebra is succumbing to the general demand for work that shall interest the pupil and with this modern object in view Messrs. Carson and Smith have compiled their text-books. They are extremely suitable for school work, being simple, lucid, suitable for examination preparation and as attractive as possible.

From The Iris Publishing Co.—"Soldiers of Tsar," by Julius West. The raciness of journalism permeates Mr. West's impressions of Russia. In a succession of entertaining chapters he relates his experiences whilst travelling in a war-ridden country and his numerous conversations by the way with all kinds and classes of the population. The result is a better understanding of Russian ways and habits of thought on the part of the reader than could be obtained from many books of more weight or recognised importance. Illustrations by Jean Claireau add interest to the volume.

From Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd.—"Guide to the Reports, Evidence and Appendices of the Royal Commissions on Sewage Disposal," by Bertram Kershaw, M.Inst.C.E., M.Am.Soc.C.E., F.R.San.I., F.G.S., Engineer to the Commission. The Royal Commission on Sewage Disposal dates as far back as 1898 and its investigations since that date have now been classified and the results tabulated. The present book has been compiled by Mr. Kershaw and serves as a guide and directory to the contents of the various Reports.

From Mr. John Lane.—"Looking for Grace," by Mrs. Horace Tremlett. If Mrs. Tremlett has not written a very profound story, full of philosophical reasoning and immense erudition, she has written something which at the present time is much better—a narrative combining humour, brisk insight, and an apt capability for arranging her characters to the best advantage. The reader will never feel a dull moment from commencement to finish. Moreover, the story has to do with war topics, and in the course of events playfully satirizes some of the more prominent foibles of the day. The plot turns on the fact that in the papers of a deceased officer a sum of five thousand pounds is found unaccounted for. It has gone to someone named Grace—which is not the name of the officer's wife—and that is all that is known. Immediately, on the instigation of the jealous widow, a hue and cry is raised, and some very humorous complications result. How the matter is eventually cleared up we don't mean to tell. Possibly "Looking for Grace" is an unfortunate title; it may lead to misapprehensions.

From The Same.—To the uniform, handsomely appointed edition of Anatole France's works, edited by Frederic Chapman, Mr. Lane has now added, in one volume, "Crainquebille, Putois, Riquet, and other Tales." Though scarcely distinguished by the delicacy and fine insight observable in some of the earlier works, they have yet an ample sufficiency of the master's power to make them most delightful reading. We take it that "Crainquebille," being placed in the van, is held to be the best of the series, but there are other stories that equally rivet the attention. The translation has been done by Winifred Stephens.

From Mr. Erskine Macdonald.—"Masques and Poems," by Edmund Casson. Two masques: "A Masque of King Dunmail" and "A Masque of Poetry" occupy the greater part of Mr. Casson's volume of poems. Both were written for performance in the garden of Greta Hall, and, fitly enough, Southey forms the central character of the second masque. The masques show their creator as, if not a great poet, at least a writer of scholarly attainments and poetical imagination. Several of the shorter poems have appeared in the Westminster Gazette.

From The Same.—"Meadow Flowers," by Dorothy E. Stevenson. Miss Stevenson has written a little volume of poems which show a feeling for rhythm and an abundance of pretty thought. Her tiny poems of eight or ten lines sing well, but she has an unfortunate habit of spoiling a good verse by a trite line and her sense of rhyme is not faultless.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—"The Sluice-Gate," by Arthur Green. Mr. Green's poetry is not of a very high order, nevertheless its religious flavour may procure for the volume entitled "The Sluice-Gate" a circle of admirers. All the poems are short and some of them are suitable for recitation at a Sunday School party.

From the Same.—"Poems and Sonnets," by Harold Bell. Among our minor singers, Mr. Bell ranks high. His art is polished and exceedingly pleasant; and if his emotion touches no deeps, his mood is always companionable. Some of the short poems, such as "Serenade" and "The Lotus-Eaters," are obviously yearning to be set to music.

From Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"The Empire's Honour." A Musical War Masque for Young People by the Hon. Mrs. Gell. A simply mounted masque utilizing twenty-seven characters and dovetailing several well-known national airs with its musical scheme.

From The Newspaper Publicity Co.—"Character Reading from Handwriting," by Grapho. A little book which should be eagerly read by amateurs desirous of acquiring a popular drawing-room accomplishment. Numerous examples are supplied and the art of deducing traits of character from the written signature is clearly described and explained.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—"A Russian Manual for Self-Tuition." Russian is now included in the scope of "Trübner's Language Manuals," and like its fellow volumes falls under the able editorship of Mr. J. H. Freese, M.A. The Russian manual contains a concise grammar with exercises, reading extracts with translation appended, and a wide vocabulary.

From the Same.—"Germany in Defeat: a Strategic History of the War (First Phase)," by Count Charles de Souza and Major Haldane Macfall. The purpose of this book is to give the "man in the street" a clear, non-technical view of the "more profound significances of the war as a whole," so that he may be able "to grasp its strategic aims and acts and results." In this the authors have succeeded admirably. Much light is thrown upon many hitherto obscure or only partially understood events, and the authors make out a very good case for the statement in the introductory note that "Germany was defeated at the Marne." The book is a distinct and welcome addition to the literature of the war, it is written by acknowledged experts and can be read with much profit, not only by people of average intelligence but by students of strategy in war. Many clear maps elucidate the text where necessary.

From The Potter-Sawent Publishing Co., 22, Gray's Inn Road, W.C.—"Hell Rock," by Frank W. Dodd. A somewhat startling book "exposing German submarine trickery," and said to be founded on fact. We cannot hint at the plot without giving its secrets away, so must be content with saying that it provides a number of thrills and ends very happily.

From Messrs. Charles P. Sisley, Ltd.—"The Buffs" and "The Northumberland Fusiliers." To the "Stories of the Regiments" series are now added the breezy and inspiring histories of the East Kent Regiment, affectionately known as "The Buffs," and the Northumberland Fusiliers. The little volumes are cleverly written and are furnished with illustrations of deeds of derring-do.

From the University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—"Teaching: Its Nature and Varieties," by Benjamin Dumville, M.A., Lond., F.C.P. Mr. Dumville is Lecturer on Education in one of the L.C.C. training colleges and his book is primarily intended for the guidance of school teachers. Except for the purpose of providing illustration, separate branches of teaching are not touched upon: the aim of the writer being to enlighten the would-be teacher on the inner nature of his art. To be able to direct intelligently the minds of pupils is the keystone of the profession, a keystone which Mr. Dumville does his best to enable each reader to supply for himself. The book is one which should not be missed by any student.

From Messrs. T. Fisher Unwin, Ltd.—"Fighting the Fly Peril," by C. F. Plowman and W. F. Dearden, M.R.C.S. Eng., L.R.C.P. Lond., D.H.P., J.P. With an Introduction by A. E. Shipley, Sc.D., F.R.S. The fly question is nowadays a household topic and advice from experts is both desired and expected by the heads of families. Mr. Plowman and Mr. Dearden have addressed themselves to this new public in their book on "The Fly Peril" and much of what the joint authors have to say should prove useful to the individual crusader. The reader cannot help realizing, however, that root-and-branch work can only be undertaken by Town and Urban District Councils, who have it in their power to destroy the pest in its breeding-places.

From the Vir Publishing Co.—"The Billy Sunday Book," by William T. Ellis, LL.D. "Billy Sunday," otherwise the Rev. William Sunday, D.D., is one of the most popular evangelists in America. His cheery, forceful personality and burning, homely language have reached congregations throughout the length and breadth of the States. In the present volume Dr. Ellis sets forth the main facts of Sunday's life and gives many extracts from his sermons. The result is a vigorous and live testimonial to the value of combined homeliness and enthusiasm in the work of reaching the masses.

From Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd.—"In Father Gabriel's Garden," by Elsa Schmidt. Fourteen devout stories are woven around fourteen flowers, each of them plucked from the garden of a Dominican priest. The stories are chiefly suitable for child readers.

From the Same.—"The 'Summa Theologica' of St. Thomas Aquinas." Part II of the First Part. Literally Translated by Fathers of the English Dominican Province. The instalment of St. Thomas Aquinas' "Summa Theologica" issued in the present volume comprises the lengthy Treatises on Law and Grace. They are capably and fully translated.

From the Same.—"Sister Gertrude Mary: A Mystic of Our Own Days." Extracts from her diary from the French of Canon Stanislas Legueu, translated by a Nun of Saint Bride's Abbey, with a Preface by Dom Bede Camm, O.S.B. Sister Gertrude Mary died in 1908, having inspired by her devout life a book called "Une Mystique de nos Jours," which became very popular among French-speaking Roman Catholics. Extracts from her diary are now translated into English, showing the continued elevation of soul and singleness of devotion which earned for her the title of mystic.

From the Same.—"Popular Sermons on the Catechism," from the German of Rev. A. Hubert Bamberg; edited by Rev. Herbert Thurston, S.J. Volume 2: The Commandments. Roman Catholic readers will welcome the second volume of Father Bamberg's sermons. They are trenchant, intimate, simply phrased, and especially suitable for home reading.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular (Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS. How Mr. Karslake can give such a valuable book for 21/- we do not know." The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection. KARSLAKE & CO., 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, London, N.W.

WHEN PAN PIPES

A Romance of Love and Life in the "Early Thirties"

By MARY TAYLOR THORNTON

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt.

Coloured Wrapper 6/-

 It is with pleasure the Publishers make above announcement because it fulfils their own opinion, and the opinion of several others who read the MSS., that the authoress is likely to prove a "real success." The book is a happy one, full of tender emotion and beautiful thoughts, and will appeal to all lovers of pure and graceful fiction.*

The Bookseller says: "We are glad to congratulate the Publishers on their good fortune in securing WHEN PAN PIPES. The romance is most skilfully and ingeniously managed with an unusual charm and fascination of its own. It is sure to prove widely popular, and we shall all anticipate with great expectation the authoress's next story."

The Gentlewoman says: "The story is fresh and fragrant, and a pleasant change from the overworked plot of sex question and morbid realism."

How to Learn French and Read the Day's News

ONE of the most interesting journalistic enterprises in connection with the war is the publication in this country since the fall of Antwerp of an important Belgian newspaper.

When Antwerp fell into the hands of the enemy The Standard offered the hospitality of its columns to the conductors of the great Antwerp journal, that it might be able to maintain continuity of publication—so important to a newspaper; also that Belgian refugees in this country, among whom are many thousands from Antwerp, should not be deprived of all news of their homeland, of their compatriots, or of their army. In the columns of La Métropole are published all army promotions and other official announcements which appear from time to time in the Moniteur Belge.

Founded twenty-two years ago in Antwerp, the commercial capital of our gallant little ally, it was the second morning paper to be published in that city. From the first its conductors realised the importance of a complete and trustworthy service of financial, commercial, and shipping news. By this means it speedily acquired a leading position in Belgium, and its circulation even extended across the French frontier to the great manufacturing towns of Lille, Roubaix, and Tourcoing, Paris, and also Holland.

The newspaper was the first to awake to the German menace, which was particularly noticeable in Antwerp. Adopting a strong national policy, La Métropole speedily incurred the enmity of the German interests. At a meeting of the various German societies which flourished in Antwerp, it was branded as "not responding to German wishes." The sequel was soon seen. The greater part of the German business announcements and advertisements were withdrawn from its columns. On the other hand, our contemporary, by its spirited and independent policy, gained still more rapidly in Belgian favour, for the traders of Antwerp, great and small, had already begun to feel seriously the effects of German competition.

When war broke out, La Métropole published under the title "Before the War" a series of articles setting forth the dangers and methods of the pacific invasion of Belgium by the Germans, supported by incontestable proofs of the hostile intentions of our foe towards the country whose independence it had solemnly agreed to maintain and defend.

Such independence and loyalty were not to go unpunished. When the enemy entered Antwerp La Métropole was made to feel the measure of their hate. Its offices and all that they contained were destroyed utterly by fire. It was honoured even by a special air raid. A Zeppelin, flying very low, dropped incendiary bombs, which missed our contemporary's property, but destroyed that adjoining, and thence the fire spread.

The last number of the journal to be published in Belgium was dated October 7th, 1914, a little over two months after the outbreak of war. In that issue the editor stated that it was the last which would be printed in Belgium, but added that arrangements for publication elsewhere would be made. That publication The Standard assured then and assures now.

The destruction of our Antwerp contemporary's offices and plant was thus referred to by the Rheinische Westphälische Zeitung:—"The premises of La Métropole of Antwerp have been destroyed. May this journal never rise again from its ashes." When the journal did rise from its ashes in the office of The Standard, the Kölnische Zeitung was unable to disguise its chagrin. Its comment was:—"La Métropole continues to discharge its venom in London."

Thus is it that our Belgian contemporary appears daily with The Standard until such time as the enemy is driven from the soil of Belgium and the Lion of Flanders once more floats over the citadel of Antwerp.

It is unnecessary to point out what a blessing this delightful proof of the entente cordiale has proved to Belgians in this country; also to scores of thousands of British families the appearance daily of all the more important news of the war in French and English in the columns of that fine British institution the London

"Catalogue of Christmas Books"

THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION

Some Opinions on it from Booksellers:

MR. E. A. WALFORD, Banbury, writes:—

"Catalogues to hand, and are very satisfactory."

THE CRAVEN STATIONERY CO., Settle, write:—

MR. EDWIN STORY, York, writes:—

"... very pleased with get-up. Hope result will be good for the whole trade."

MESSRS. A. R. WAY & CO., Swansea, write:—

"... congratulations upon the get-up."

Standard has proved a great and useful boon. There are not many people now living who were born before The Standard, which appeared in the year 1827 as an evening paper.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO., will issue on November 24th, a new book by Mr. Stephen Graham, entitled "The Way of Martha and the Way of Mary." It is a study of the religion of Russia, and it forms the last of a set of volumes which started with "A Tramp's Sketches" and was continued in "With the Russian Pilgrims to Jerusalem" and "With Poor Emigrants to America."

Dr. Walter Leaf has recently completed a volume in which he shews what information regarding the birth of Hellenism can be obtained from the Homeric poems. The work will bear as title "Homer and History," and will be published immediately by Messrs. Macmillan & Co.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. will shortly publish a book entitled "With Botha in the Field." The author, Mr. Moore Ritchie, was one of General Botha's bodyguard, and he describes both the rebellion in British South Africa and the campaign in German South-West Africa. The book will be very well illustrated from photographs and plans.

Mr. Horace G. Hutchinson will shortly publish, through Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., a book entitled "From Doubt to Faith." It is an attempt to help the agnostic in his doubts and difficulties, and is a very simple record of the means by which those problems were solved and faith in Christianity reached by one who had long been an agnostic, and is written in the hope that the arguments and thoughts which have helped one across the dark river of doubt may be of service to another.

The authoritative biography of Lord Strathcona, upon which the well-known Canadian historian, Mr. Beckles Willson has been engaged since his lordship's death, is announced for publication early in December by the House of Cassell.

At the price of 6d. net Messrs. Geo. Philip & Son, Ltd., have published a fascinating little quarto atlas with 16 coloured plates containing 52 maps and plans to illustrate "Scripture History." In view of the fact that the British Empire is so intensely interested in all these Near Eastern lands, Egypt, Arabia, Asia Minor, the Balkans, it is doubly valuable to have this illuminating atlas. On the covers is given some useful descriptive text. In the time of Tiglath Pileser—whose name would have made his fortune as a modern patent medicine man—some 700 years B.C., Cyprus (which we offered to Greece the other day) was called Chittim. One probably knew this in school days, but probably few could remember it. We are fighting in and for those old Bible lands, and, as we said before, this makes this beautiful bit of map-making and printing in colours specially attractive.

Messrs. Constable have arranged to publish within the next fortnight an elegy entitled "In Honour," from the pen of an unnamed but well-known author, who has dedicated it to the Mothers of England in the belief that it will afford them some comfort in their bereavement. It is claimed for this poem that "it consists mainly of metres interspersed with lyrics which in every case continue and sustain the thought and feeling, and it follows every phase of the War, all its sorrows and all its splendour, striking a note both of faith and doubt in relation to it."

BUCKINGHAM PALACE

TO MY PEOPLE.

At this grave moment in the struggle between my people and a highly organised enemy who has transgressed the Laws of Nations and changed the ordinance that binds civilised Europe together, I appeal to you.

I rejoice in my Empire's effort, and I feel pride in the voluntary response from my Subjects all over the world who have sacrificed home, fortune, and life itself in order that another may not inherit the free Empire which their ancestors and mine have built.

I ask you to make good these sacrifices.

The end is not in sight. More men and yet more are wanted to keep my Armies in the Field, and through them to secure Victory and enduring Peace.

In ancient days the darkest moment has ever produced in men of our race the sternest resolve.

I ask you, men of all classes, to come forward voluntarily and take your share in the fight.

In freely responding to my appeal, you will be giving your support to our brothers, who, for long months, have nobly upheld Britain's past traditions, and the glory of her Arms.

George R. I.

"The Story of Islington and Finsbury" is a charming little volume which booksellers in Islington and Finsbury should make known to their customers. It is the first volume in Messrs. T. Werner Laurie's "Local History Series," and is compiled by W. V. Mingard; there are fifteen exceptionally good illustrations from old engravings. Islington used to be the most picturesque of suburbs. We are specially glad to have a picture of "Colebrook Cottage," Islington (now No. 64, Duncan Terrace), as it was where Charles Lamb passed five of the happiest years of his life, and "found endless enjoyment in the quiet life and sylvan scenery of the locality." Mr. Laurie ought to have a great success with this little series.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. have just published Vol. 2 of their superb four-volume 4to work on "British Birds," written and illustrated by A. Thorburn, F.Z.S. We have never seen anything better than these pictures in colours, which show no less than four hundred species of British birds. Of course, many of the birds are called British because they have been seen two or three times, but probably they were driven here by stress of weather. All the same, they are most desirable aliens, and Mr. Thorburn shows us them, and all our British favourites, alive, flying, or singing or feeding or nesting. They are not like stuffed glass case birds. It is very interesting to find Messrs. Longmans publishing great six-guinea art works like this in the midst of a terrific war, just as they published great works such as Daniel's "Rural Sports" when Britain, under Nelson and Wellington, fought triumphantly against almost all Europe, and was extending the foundations of her world-wide Empire.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin is publishing at the end of this month "The Way of an Eagle," in a new dress. It is the shilling edition in handsome form, bound in Yapp at 3s. 6d. We agree with Mr. Unwin that it is rather pretty, and that it is interesting to find that people are buying shilling novels in an expensive binding. It would add too much to the cost to print the title in gold from the top down, along the back, but would it cost any more to do it in the same style as the side? We think not. It would only be extending the block a little, and one impression would do for both back and side. We have suffered so much loss of books and loss of time from blank backs to books that we lose interest in all such books. Here is just one instance: In 1883 Elliot Stock published a charming little work entitled "Shakespeare as an Angler," by the Rev. H. N. Ellacombe, M.A., which has been out of print and scarce for years. It was bound in vellum with no title on the back. We have a copy somewhere among hundreds of other books, but have vainly looked for it, and recently had to buy a secondhand copy, on which we have had to write the title in ink.

On November 22nd, Mr. Unwin will publish Mrs. Steuart Erskine's book: "Anna Jameson: Letters and Friendships, 1812-1860." Also a second impression of M. Gregor Alexinsky's "Russia and the Great War." It is a striking study by a Russian democrat of the Russian attitude towards the war and of the relation of the war to the prospects of liberty in Russia.

Mr. Sidney Webb contributes an Introduction to an interesting book on "Village Government in British India" by Mr. John Matthai, which Mr. Unwin will publish on November 22nd.

Messrs. John Long announce for publication on Monday next the following "A German Prince and His Victim," from the Memoirs of Madame Pauline Panam ("The Beautiful Greek"); with 16 portraits and illustrations; "The Blows of Circumstance": new novel by Beatrice Kelston, and "The Romance of Princess Arnulf": being an intimate personal record of a Royal Family. Anonymous.

Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd., announce the publication in January next of an important volume dealing with British incomes and property, by Mr. J. C. Stamp, B.Sc., of the Inland Revenue Department.

In their uniform edition of Loti's Works, T. Werner Laurie Ltd., are publishing "Jerusalem," by Pierre Loti, illustrated in colours by John Fulleylove.

T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are just publishing "Home-Made Toys for Girls and Boys," by A. Neely Hall, author of "Handicraft for Handy Boys." It is a veritable gold-mine of suggestions for home-made toys, each one of which has been carried out successfully many times. Home-made toys have an increased value over purchased ones in the pleasure and practical experience gained in producing them.

The Book Trade and the War

More than one thousand three hundred of the staff of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son have joined the Army or Navy since war broke out.

The late Mr. Wm. Dawson, of Edinburgh

THE death took place on the 7th inst., at his residence in Edinburgh, of Mr. William Dawson, one of the directors of John Menzies & Co., Ltd. Mr. Dawson entered the service of the firm as a boy in the year 1867, and passed through all grades up to the appointment which he held at the end. He was regarded with the highest esteem by all who came in contact with him, and as most faithful in all his dealings with his company, and with the whole of the book trade and publishers in its connection.

The late Mr. James Andrews, of Epsom

THE death occurred on Monday, at the age of 76, of Mr. James Andrews, of the firm of L. W. Andrews & Son, stationers and booksellers, High Street, Epsom. The deceased gentleman was well known to those in the bookselling trade, with which he had been connected for fifty years. He came of an old Epsom family. Both his father and grandfather were builders at Epsom, and his father was also postmaster at Epsom. When his father died the widow was appointed postmistress, and before Mrs. Andrews' death a daughter, Miss Andrews, was appointed postmistress. In all, the family had control of the post office work of the Epsom postal district for fifty-nine years. Mr. James Andrews was one of the most prominent public men at Epsom. He was for sixteen years a member of the old Local Board, and for several years chairman. On his retirement he was presented by the townspeople with a cheque and an illuminated album. He was for a long period, and up to the time of his death, a school manager and a trustee of various charities. He filled many offices from time to time, and was one of the hon. treasurers of the Epsom Parish Church Rebuilding Scheme. He was a well-known Surrey Freemason. For thirty-two years he was registrar of births and deaths at Epsom, and was stamp distributor until the earlier part of this year. Some years ago he read a most interesting paper on "Reminiscences of Epsom" before the members of the local literary society, and afterwards from Lord Rosebery, who was a personal friend of Mr. Andrews, he received: "What an interesting lecture that is of yours. I hope you will give another when I can come. I did not know of this one. Meanwhile I hope it will be published as a pamphlet." It was published in book form, and Lord Rosebery wrote: "Your book is charming. I have already gone through it again. Thanks a thousand times." Mr. Andrews was held in the highest respect by all classes of the community.

A Warning to Booksellers

BOOKSELLERS and others are warned against selling the novel entitled "The Rainbow," by D. H. Lawrence, as the publishers have been fined and the work condemned to be destroyed as obscene. Mr. Muskett, representing the Commissioner of Police, said that if booksellers or other tradesmen were found dealing in them they would run the risk of being prosecuted. In reply to the magistrate it was stated that the book had not been used at the public libraries or circulated by Mudie or Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son. Sir John Dickenson said he was glad to hear that, but it was only what he would have expected. Evidently this is a case where the library censorship has done a public service and thoroughly justified its existence. We understand that it was by an oversight that the book came to be published, and that all booksellers and librarians who have copies should at once return them to the publishers.

Printers of "Waverley"

Sale of Historical Scottish Firm

MESSRS. SPOTTISWOODE & Co., of New Street Square, have acquired the historical Edinburgh printing house of Ballantyne, Hanson & Co. The Scottish firm ordinarily employ about 700 hands. It is expected that the plant will be removed to London. Ballantyne, Hanson were Sir Walter Scott's printers, and the press which printed "Waverley" is one of the relics in the firm's counting-house.

The removal of the important business will be a very serious blow to the Edinburgh printing industry, which has recently increasingly felt the competition of the new works established near London for the book printing trade. The War has hit the Edinburgh printers severely, for sea carriage is delayed and freightage increased, in addition to substantial advances in wages.

Some of Mr. John Murray's Reminiscences

WHAT a delightful book Mr. John Murray could give us is shown by the few stories he told about notable men in his lecture the other evening at the Central Theatre of the Young Men's Christian Association. The lecture was reported in all the papers. We take one or two extracts from the long report in The Standard.

Mr. Murray told an amusing story of Gladstone. When he bade goodbye to him on one occasion at Hawarden he found the venerable statesman lying prone in bed, with his feet on the pillow and his head where his feet should have been. He had a shawl round his shoulders, and was holding a book in one hand and a cup of coffee in the other. Mr. Murray expressed the view that Gladstone's "Life" was written too soon, and therefore there were a great many things that could not be said.

When Dr. Schliemann, the famous Greek scholar, wrote his book on his explorations in Greece—a subject in which Gladstone was greatly interested—the statesman was asked to write a preface. He expressed his readiness to do so on one condition, which was that if any dispute arose between him and Dr. Schliemann regarding it, it should be referred to two umpires, one a scholar and the other an archaeologist. A dispute did arise over Gladstone's translation of the Greek word "Kranos." Gladstone said it meant "bronze." Schliemann said "No," and was clearly irritated. When it was referred to the umpires they decided against Gladstone, but the "Grand Old Man" would not change his view, and the word remains as he wrote it in the preface.

When Mr. Murray's father died Gladstone called at Albemarle Street, and in the course of conversation the name of Sir Robert Peel came up. Mr. Murray remarked on the great pains Sir Robert took to revise his big speeches in the House of Commons, and produced the original copy of one pasted in a book with a newspaper report corrected and added to copiously before the revised version was issued as a pamphlet.

"Do you really mean to tell me," said Gladstone, "that Peel revised his speeches to such an extent? I am astonished. I wonder how Peel reconciled this with his conscience! I don't think I ever did such a thing in my life." "Shortly afterwards," commented Mr. Murray, "on going through my father's papers I found that Mr. Gladstone's speech on the Irish Disabilities Bill was dealt with in exactly the same way!"

Mr. Murray said that in his view of books generally biography is of higher importance than any, that the two greatest biographies in the world are Boswell's "Life of Johnson" and Lockhart's "Life of Scott." He thought that if educated people were polled they would say the three greatest works outstanding from all others are the Bible, the Prayer Book, and Shakespeare.

"The Rearguard" is the title of Mr. Sydney Grier's latest novel, which Messrs. Blackwood publish.

CASSELL & CO., Ltd., La Belle Sauvage, London, E.C.

Messrs. Cassell's Juvenile Books, 1915

Cassell's Children's Annual (seventh year of issue). Considerable changes and improvements have been carried out in Cassell's Children's Annual this year, so as to make it still more attractive. These changes include the addition of eight beautiful three-colour plates printed on special art paper.

Chums, 1914-1915. This volume of Chums, produced whilst the greatest War in history is raging in Europe, is as good as, if not better than, usual. It contains war stories, but is not unduly overweighted with them. Chums is, as always, a perfectly sane, level-headed and essentially British production, preaching the gospel of fair-play and clean sportsmanship. Every story is worth reading, and every picture worth looking at. As a matter of interest it may be recorded that six of Chums regular contributors are now actually in the Fighting Line.

The British Boy's Annual. Excellent stories of the Great War are the special features of this year's volume of The British Boy's Annual. There are thrilling stories of land battles and exciting adventures, powerful stories of war at sea, of mine and submarine, of motor bike, of Zeppelin and of aeroplane. There are also interesting articles bearing on the War.

The British Girl's Annual is more than usually attractive this year. The main feature is a long complete story by Dorothea Moore, entitled "Philippa of England," dealing with the experience of a little English girl stranded at a school in Germany at the outbreak of the War. She escapes by a troop train into Belgium, and has many exciting adventures before she reaches home. There are other stories by popular writers, articles on novel entertainments and how to make and do things, and a play for home acting.

The Girl's Realm Annual Volume. The Girl's Realm has well maintained itself during war time, and the present volume is one of the best that have been issued. There are three serials—by Dorita M. Fairlie Bruce, Ethel M. Heddle, and Morice Gerard—as well as a host of short stories, whilst the articles are such as to appeal particularly to girls of from sixteen to thirty.

Little Folks Christmas Volume. The Christmas volume offers great variety to its young readers. The little ones will find plenty of dainty, amusing colour pictures and verse. Girls will thoroughly enjoy the exciting school serial, "Pippa at the Priory," while the adventures of "Shasta of the Wolves," told by Olaf

Baker, will hold the interest of all. As usual, Little Folks has several plays and recitations, and a great number of short stories—stories of animals, fairies, war, school, home, and adventure.

"My Book of Best Fairy Tales," selected and edited by Charles S. Bayne, editor of Little Folks. This handsome volume provides a good collection of fairy tales and contains a comprehensive selection from Grimm, Andersen, Perrault, and the "Arabian Nights." In addition, all the old English tales that are at all suitable for children have been included. The tales machines, gives a full account of the Zeppelin and other airships and of the leading types of aeroplanes. It also explains some of the difficulties the airman has to overcome, tells how an aeroplane is built, records the leading events in the recent progress of flight, and gives a graphic description of some of the great feats performed by British aviators during the Great War.

"The Boy's Book of the Sea," by Eric Wood. The sea has always had a fascination for boys, and this new book is a recital of the romance and heroism of peace and war which are linked with it. The author has obtained first-hand information of many stories hitherto unpublished, and also tells some of the stories of the Navy's part in the Great War.

"The Scarlet Scouts," by D. H. Parry, author of "The V.C.: Its Heroes and their Valour," "Britain's Roll of Glory," "The Death or Glory Boys." An exciting story of the siege and fall of Liège and the part played in its defence by the Scarlet Scouts of Belgium.

"The Strange Girl from the Sea: a story of 1804," by E. E. Cowper. The advent of "Miss Smith" into the peaceful lives of the four Fane sisters is followed by a gradually deepening atmosphere of mystery round the Grange. The discovery that Miss Smith is a dangerous spy, one of Napoleon's paid agents, the abduction of Georgina and the thrilling events that lead to her discovery and rescue are related in a graphic manner.

"Septima, Schoolgirl," by Dorothea Moore. Septima has many difficulties to encounter in her school life, and gets into trouble and disgrace upon more than one occasion, but her sunny disposition and frank, straightforward manner carry her triumphantly through all her trials. We leave her at the end of her first term, popular with both mistresses and girls, with a happy school life in front of her.

"For Bonnie Prince Charlie," by Escott Lynn. This is a story of the Jacobite Rebellion of 1745, and is full of the romantic charm and fascination of the period.

"The Twinkletoes" Series. Stories by May Byron; pictures by Ernest Aris. A new and attractive series of dainty little books for children. The stories are original and full of the movement that little children love. Each contains twelve full-page colour illustrations and every page is decorated by thumbnail vignettes in black and white.

One Shilling Picture Books, full of stories, pictures and verses, interesting and amusing. Just the thing to read aloud to the little ones in the half-hour before bedtime.

BRISTOL BIPLANE. From "ALL ABOUT AIRCRAFT" (Cassell)

have been carefully revised, and in some cases entirely rewritten, so that they may be quite simple for young children to read and understand.

"All About Aircraft," by Ralph Simmonds. New edition. Aviation has taken such a prominent part in the War that this book is bound to be popular among boys. It tells the history of flight, how ballooning developed, how the early aviators experimented with both the dirigible and with heavier-than-air

JOHN LANE, THE BODLEY HEAD, VIGO STREET, W.

Some of Mr. John Lane's New Books

"A Book of Bridges." Pictures by Frank Brangwyn; text by W. Shaw Sparrow. Containing 36 colour plates and 36 line drawings. Devotees of Mr. Brangwyn will remember that paintings and etchings of bridges have held an important position in his art for about a dozen years. Bridges have been as attractive to him as they were to Turner, and he has chosen those that belong to historic associations and to the thronged traffic of social life.

"A Painter of Dreams," by A. M. W. Stirling, author of "Coke of Norfolk." With numerous illustrations. These various biographical sketches are connected by links which fashion them into one consecutive and singularly attractive whole.

"An Englishman's Recollections of Egypt," by Baron de Kusel (Bey), sometime English Controller-General of Egyptian Customs. Baron de Kusel has been closely connected with Egypt for nearly twenty-five years, having gone out in 1863 to join a mercantile firm, but later entering the customs, he rose by his own energies to the head of that department. His account of the Khedive Ismail is considerably more favourable than that of most English writers about Egypt, and he is sympathetic about his downfall. Baron de Kusel was in charge of the Egyptian Customs at the time of the revolt of Arabi Pasha, and he took an important part in the events of 1882, his account of that time being extremely interesting. He seems to have known everybody of any importance connected with modern Egypt, and shows an able grasp of the situation there. He is a good linguist, and understands the East thoroughly. As it is clear that he knows what he is writing about, his book is a valuable contribution to the literature of modern Egypt; and the Epilogue, dealing with the present difficult situation there, makes the book of particular interest at the present time. The volume is admirably illustrated.

"Carillons of Belgium and Holland: Tower Music in the Low Countries," by William Gorham Rice. With 32 illustrations. The secret of the attractiveness of the Low Countries is complex and difficult to grasp, but the author of this book believes that a clue to its comprehension lies in a knowledge of the distinctive music of the numerous bell-towers. This music is made by sets of bells called "carillons," which are attuned to intervals of the chromatic scale; they are many in number, and hang fixed so as not to swing. The bells are usually connected with a keyboard worked by a "carillonneur." In this book, Mr. Rice also describes the beautiful towers which contain the carillons, and since many of these are within the war area, the book will be particularly interesting at the present time. It is now also something of a record since some of these towers have not escaped damage, one of the most beautiful being at Ypres and another at Mons. Moreover the book is unique, for the Assistant Keeper of the British Museum wrote to the author, "I know no work on carillons"—and it was this that convinced Mr. Rice of the need for such a work.

"A Book of Belgium's Gratitude." In recognition of the help and hospitality given by the British Empire and of the relief bestowed by the United States of America during the Great War. With nine illustrations in colour and 24 in black and white. Among the thousands of refugees who have received help and hospitality from the British Empire are many of Belgium's most distinguished authors and artists, and their gratitude has found spontaneous expression in this volume, which is of national interest.

Mr. John Lane has published many books of poems. The following are selected with a view to their additional interest at the moment.

"Songs from the Trenches," by Capt. Blackall. Captain Blackall wrote many of these poems while actually at the Front, and his fellow officers were so delighted with them that the O.C. ordered some of them to be printed and distributed among the men in the trenches. Some of them, moreover, were set to music, and have actually been sung at the Front.

"War Poems and Other Translations," by the Earl Curzon of Kedleston.

"Panama and Other Poems," by Stephen Phillips. With a frontispiece in photogravure from an etching by Joseph Pennell.

"Belgian Poems: Chants Patriotiques et Autres Poèmes," par Emile Cammaerts. With English Translations by Tita Brand Cammaerts and a portrait in photogravure by Vernon Hill. During the past thirty or forty years there has been a renaissance in Belgium of art and literature, and at the present time she has three poets of the very first rank—Maeterlinck, Verhaeren, and Cammaerts, and they have not remained dumb under the curse of the German oppressor.

"Drawn Shutters" (poems), by Beatrice Redpath. The author of these poems is a young Montreal lady, who has recently made her debut in literature with marked success. She is a daughter of the late Mr. Peter Peterson, of Montreal, who was for many years chief engineer of the C.P.R.

"The Marionettes' Calendar." Rhymes by Stephen Leacock; drawings by A. H. Fish. The calendar is published in two forms, as an engagement book, in which a picture and a verse fall to the engagement page of each month in the year, and as a hanging calendar, with a verse and illustration for each month.

"Morals for the Young," by Marcus, with 50 illustrations by George Morrow, and a foreword by William J. Locke.

"The Path of Glory," by Anatole France. French Text, with English translation by A. R. Allinson. Uniform in size with the collected works. Written by Anatole France for the benefit of French disabled soldiers. With a portrait of Anatole France in photogravure, and other illustrations.

"The Life and Letters of Sir John Henniker Heaton, Bt.," by his daughter, Mrs. Adrian Porter. With illustrations.

Mr. John Lane's books of topical interest at the present time include:

"Bosnia and Herzegovina," by Maude M. Holbach. With 48 illustrations from photos by O. Holbach. In a sense the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria may be said to have led up to the present War, and a description of those countries and their condition previous to the annexation has topical interest. Maude M. Holbach is well-known as a writer on the Near East, and had special facilities when visiting those countries to acquire an intimate knowledge of them. This book is a companion volume to "Dalmatia, the Land where East meets West," also by Maude M. Holbach, with 50 illustrations from photographs by O. Holbach.

Mr. Stephen Graham has long acquired the reputation of being one of the very few English authors who write about Russia with understanding and sympathy. His works have probably been the cause, in part, of the increasing interest of the public of this country in Russia and the Russian people, and in Russian literature, and he no doubt has helped to pave the way to that friendship between the two countries which the present War has cemented. His books, therefore, should appeal to a very wide public. They include "A Vagabond in the Caucasus"; "Changing Russia"; and "Undiscovered Russia," all fully and well illustrated.

Future of "Printer's Pie"

MR. ARTHUR CROXTON informs us that the publication on behalf of the Printer's Pension Corporation and allied charities of Printer's Pie and Winter's Pie (which, in conjunction with the late Mr. W. Hugh Spottiswoode, he started and assisted to edit until this year) will be continued, and that he is relinquishing his directorship in favour of Mrs. Spottiswoode, who will conduct the publications in future. In this way, it is hoped that the name of Spottiswoode will be permanently associated with the annuals.—The Times.

The Duke of Marlborough in the Trenches

It is curious to note how history repeats itself. In the excellent new "Life of the Duke of Marlborough," by Edward Thomas, just published by Messrs. Chapman & Hall, we read on page 197:—"Marlborough secured his communications by bridges over the Scheldt and Lys, and began the siege of Ghent, while Eugene covered it with the rest of the troops. The weather was cold and foggy, and frost delayed the opening of trenches, and froze the canals. Marlborough got wet feet every day in the trenches and a cold and sore throat." But he got Ghent, and every other place he besieged, and won every battle he ever began.

Books from Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd.

"Back of the Front," by Phyllis Campbell, with an introduction by W. L. Courtney, M.A., LL.D. As Mr. Courtney says in his introduction, "it is a very pathetic, straightforward, and interesting record of certain poignant experiences undergone by a Scotch girl, Miss Phyllis Campbell, when she was nursing French and British wounded during the opening months of the Great War. In the book before us the authoress very evidently gives a picture of the impressions she gathered at the time—very vivid and unforgettable impressions, printed on a retentive brain during months of poignant suffering and strenuous and self-sacrificing service. It is the merit of Miss Campbell's book that it is full of pictures. She makes us see the little town and the forest through which the soldiers pass, and the trains which came back with their loads of wounded. We get to know the men and the women by whose side she worked and whose gratitude she earned by her devotion. And the horizon is always lighted by ruddy fires, and the air is perpetually stunned by the ominous sound of approaching battle. The very atmosphere is tense with apprehension and suspense. Only five miles separated the nurses from the oncoming Germans in their desperate rush on Paris. Only by this slight interval was their safety won."

"Smith's Week," by R. S. Warren Bell. This is a fine school story, full of humorous incidents, by the well-known author of "Tales of Greyhouse" and other popular boys' books. It is a book about a boy, "Smith," who is a public school prefect suddenly plunged into a world that is strange to him; a British youth with the usual British qualities, including a usefulness with his hands, who, confronted by difficulties, tackles them with the resolution that distinguishes the best of our race. From first chapter to last the story goes with a swing. In the opening chapter "Smith" has just left Greyhouse School, without, apparently, having learned to do anything but box, and even this was not self-evident, for "to look at Smith you wouldn't have thought he'd got it in him, for he was decidedly on the small side, with nothing showing through his clothes to suggest the terrific punch he had cultivated with such success." He secures, however, a mastership at Hill House School, in Downshire, and the story of his adventures in this responsible post takes up the remaining chapters of the book. The story is thoroughly wholesome in its tone, and will appeal to all lovers, old or young, of school stories. Many boys, we hope, will have their hearts gladdened this Christmas by receiving this book as a gift.

"The Boys' Illustrated Book of the War," second edition. The object of the editor ("The Captain") of this handsome quarto volume has been to produce an inspiring, informative, and interesting story of everything British boys want to know—and should know—in connection with the Great War. The book covers a wide range of subjects: what the War is about, the forces in the field, the Navy and its work, war beneath the waves—submarines and torpedoes, some gallant deeds of the War, the war in the air—acrobats and airships, modern big guns and what they can do. Accompanying the articles are excellent illustrations from photographs and pictures. The editor dedicates the volume to all British boys—of whatever age—and certainly such a fine book should be recommended by booksellers to all customers desiring a boy's Christmas gift book.

MISS CAMPBELL

"Our Boys' Book of the Navy."

This is another fine volume, quarto size, of a similar style to the above. It tells all about the British Navy, its work as the sure shield of the British Empire, and describes the life of the sailor. The editor points out what a revolution in our Navy has taken place during the last hundred years. The "wooden walls" have been replaced by those of steel; sails have been superseded by steam; wireless telegraphy now instead of signalling by flags; fighting yardarm to yardarm and boarding are known no more, for the modern fighting ships wage their battles at any distance from 7,000 to 18,000 yards—from 4 to 10 miles. He describes in detail exactly what the British Navy, the product of the last hundred years of naval evolution, is now, its size, constituents, its duties and methods of discharging them, and the life of the sailors who man the ships and have made them so terribly efficient. Excellent illustrations are a feature of the book. Every Briton is proud of the British Navy, and every British boy should know something about that Navy. Messrs. Newnes in this volume give all the facts in a thorough and interesting fashion, and we hope that their enterprise in publishing this truly educational book will be rewarded by large sales.

Other new books from Messrs.

Newnes are:—

"The O.T.C. and the Great War," by Captain Haig-Brown, with an introduction by Colonel Sir Edward Ward, Bart. A full record of the foundation, organisation, and personnel of the Officers' Training Corps, with collotype and other illustrations, and the names of some 16,000 officers who have been gazetted since August 4th, 1914.

"The Story of the Royal Scots," by Lawrence Weaver, with an introduction by the Earl of Rosebery. Written in a vivid manner, with battle plans, maps, photographs, and coloured plates.

A series of authentic biographies of leading Statesmen:—

"David Lloyd George," by Herbert du Parcq. A record of facts in the life and career of the Minister of Munitions.

"Herbert Henry Asquith," by Harold Spender. A scholarly and interesting history of the life of the Premier by an authoritative writer.

"Sir Edward Grey, K.G." The only life-story ever published of His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, by the author of "The Real Crown Prince."

"Winston Churchill," by A. McCallum Scott, M.P. A concise and complete life of the arduous "Winston" by one who is well equipped with material for his interesting subject.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION,
 57 and 59, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.

The Sunday School Union and Pilgrim Press Publications

Young England.—Vol. 36. A splendid gift-book for boys, profusely and excellently illustrated. Among the contents are two first-class serial stories: "The Mysterious Jewel," a tale of adventure in Furthest China, by K. M. Eady, author of "The Secret of the Fire Mountain," &c., illustrated by John F. Campbell; and "The Big House in the Wood," a school story, by F. L. Morgan, illustrated by Rex Osborne. There are also numerous short stories of school life, sport and adventure in foreign lands and a series of football and cricket articles, by front-rank players (with portraits). Prominence is given to thrilling incidents of the Great War, and there are special articles by experts on the Navy, the Army, and the Air-Craft Service. Full information on Boy Scout work, hobbies, boys' life brigades, stamp collecting, photography, gardening, natural history, engineering triumphs is given, interspersed with illustrated humorous verse. The volume is illustrated by well-known artists, with many full-page drawings, and a coloured frontispiece, entitled "Held Up!" an encounter in the Canadian woods, from a special painting by Edgar A. Holloway.

The Child's Own Magazine. This is the eighty-second annual volume of one of the oldest of nursery favourites, full of charming stories, poems, prize competitions, puzzles, &c., and very well illustrated. It also contains a serial story, entitled: "The Cousins from London," by Maurice Hardy, author of "The Cottage in the Forest," with illustrations by Rosa C. Petherick. Among the other contents are short stories by Sheila, Marion Isabel Hurrell, M. W. Pitt Lewis, Maribel Thomson, and a host of shorter tales and articles dealing with travel and adventure, games and toys, fun and fairyland, people of far-away lands, pet animals and birds, Sunday evening talks on Bible subjects, verses suitable for juvenile recitation, the editor's letter box, prize competitions, and clever pictorial puzzles.

"Nature's Wonderland," by W. Percival Westell, F.L.S., author of "Bird Studies," &c. Illustrated with over 30 photographs direct from nature. Modern Sunday School experts tell us that the "nature talk" in the Sunday School, when given in the right way and spirit, is a valuable means of religious expression. Mr. Westell has written the series of essays which the book contains in the hope that they will provide useful assistance to teachers when mapping out lessons for their classes so that the marvellous truths of nature may be used to adorn a tale and to illustrate a moral truth. The author is an accurate student and observer of nature, and all teachers, whether in day or Sunday schools, will be inspired and helped by his graphic chapters.

"Model Making for the Sunday School," by Chas. W. Budden, M.D., with over 100 photographs and diagrams of models made for the Hoyleake Congregational Sunday School Museum. Expression work is one of the most fascinating activities of the graded school, and in the older grades it often takes the form of model making. In this fully illustrated and practical book, Dr. Budden shows teachers the class of model that scholars delight to make, and gives instructions for making them with lucidity and skill.

"A Troublesome Trio," This is a new girls' story by Annie Beatley, a charming story of three undisciplined but lovable orphan nieces suddenly thrown on the hands of a young village school-mistress. The trouble which their training and control involved, and the happy consequences which eventually came of so unpromising a charge, make delightful reading. Four full-page illustrations are given.

"Notes on the Scripture Lessons, 1916." This well-known text-book is edited by J. Eaton Feasey, a practical teacher and educationist, familiar with both Day and Sunday school conditions and problems, and is stimulating and suggestive. New methods of treatment are adopted for the morning, international and primary lessons. The volume contains necessary and valuable introductory matter, complete notes for teachers of the morning lesson, the international lesson surveyed from the expository, illustrative and practical point of view and graded for juniors and seniors; and the primary lessons prepared by a primary expert. Illustrations, two coloured maps and indexes are included.

"Pocket Notes on the International Lessons, 1916," by W. D. Bavin. These are just outline lessons, compact, suggestive and thoroughly practical. This booklet is a convenient size for the vest pocket.

"Peloubet's Select Notes for 1916." This well-known series of notes on the international lessons is as usual very complete and well illustrated with maps and plates.

The Motto Cards for 1916, issued by the Sunday School Union are excellently printed from new designs in colours and gold on deckle-edged cards. They are in two sizes and published at prices which place them within the reach of all Sunday schools and teachers.

The Sunday School Illustrated Almanack for 1916, is also printed in colours and comprises a calendar, list of lessons, a text for every day in the year, a large centre panel, "The Promised Crown," reproduced in colours from the original painting by E. Stuart Hardy, and appropriate verses in panels. The size is 18 in. by 27 in. Both Motto Cards and Almanack are designed and printed in Great Britain.

The Library Miscellany

We are glad to see that enterprising journal, the Library Miscellany, published in the interests of the library movement in India, is not to die after all, as will be seen from the following quaint notice by its publisher, Mr. B. M. Dadchauri, B.A., Mandavi Road, Baroda. (The subscription is 4s. per year, post free.)

OUR GRATITUDE.

Having strained itself seriously by what the Dial (the foremost literary journal of America), called the "heroic venture," of printing its matter in three languages, and by the unusual enterprise of giving a large number of high-class illustrations, prepared by the well-known Bombay Art Printing Works, the Library Miscellany was on its deathbed. But a touch of H.H. the Maharaja Sayaji Rao Gaikwar, the patron-saint of literature, has brought it to life again.

Words fail us to give an adequate expression to our sense of gratefulness to the illustrious saviour of the Miscellany.

Literature and the movement to create book lovers and readers in India owe a great debt of gratitude to H.H. the Maharaja of Baroda. Librarians throughout the world ought to support this attempt to introduce Free Libraries into India. This issue contains an illustrated account of the Mehsana Library Exhibition—the first exhibition of the kind in India; also, we are glad to say, a scathing indictment of German "Kultur," as exhibited at Louvain.

MESSRS. RAPHAEL TUCK, in spite of the War, have brought out a good and varied assortment of the Christmas and New Year cards, calendars, &c., for which they are famous. We understand that they are all made in this country. The most interesting are what they call "Royal Christmas cards by gracious permission." One of these, for instance, shows us Queen Matilda, daughter of the Count of Flanders and the beautiful and beloved wife of William the Conqueror, working on the famous Bayeux Tapestry describing her husband's exploits. This picture is reproduced from the original Christmas card in the possession of Her Majesty the Queen. The artist appears to be Henry Owen. The King's Christmas card is a delightful picture by B. F. Gribble of Drake's flagship, the immortal Revenge (built of oak which grew where H.M.S. Crystal Palace stands) attacking the Grand Armada. The Prince of Wales' card is also nautical, and very effective. Her Majesty Queen Alexandra's card shows Queen Margaret of Scotland praying for the victory of the Scottish army. A welcome Christmas box is undoubtedly Raphael Tuck's series of coloured pictures from "Alice in Wonderland," arranged to be cut out and pieced together—the figures of course include the Dodo, the Mad Hatter, the Queen of Hearts, &c. A volume which will give delight in the nursery is "Father Tuck's Annual," fully illustrated in colours and black and white. "To the Front" is the title of a series of cards which Messrs. Tuck have brought out for those who wish to send cards to friends and relatives at the Front. Their new series of picture post cards will be also very welcome.

[The one we referred to was "The General Book Catalogue." We are sorry to see that Mr. Pearce prints the title on his excellent "Newest Book Catalogue" upside down on the back—at least it is upside down except from one point of view, i.e., when it is on a shelf and you are standing to the right of it.—ED.]

H. G. Bohn

SIR,—In 1864 I called upon a gentleman of the name of Bohn at York Street, Covent Garden, the same house as Messrs. Geo. Bell & Sons were at afterwards. I asked for Mr. Bohn, and the gentleman said that it was the first time for many years he had heard his name pronounced correctly, for, said he, "they will insist upon calling me Bone, and I am not bone." I also said to him—for I found him very kind and a thorough gentleman—that I had heard from my father that he was born in Holland, and he said, "That was so." Although a Devonshire name, my father was born in Holland, the son of John Quick, a bookseller, who was employed by a London house to buy old books in Holland, and who married the daughter of a bookseller, J. Vandenburg, who kept a shop at Charing Cross.—I remain, sir, yours respectfully,

W. M. R. QUICK.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Edward Arnold.—"At the Door of the Gate," by Forrest Reid. Many novels of the present day deal with the fascinating study of adolescent manhood. Among novels of this kind "At the Door of the Gate" must rank high. Richard Seawright is a boy with an almost supernatural—or subhuman—streak in his composition. He evinces Pan-like traits of sensitiveness and callousness and his relationships with his fellow creatures are constantly jarred by the ungovernable forces of his nature. From a youth of moodiness he emerges into a manhood which he himself hardly understands, marries the wrong woman and closes a period of tragedy by causing the death of his brother. The book concludes with a curious but convincing scene in which, beaten to earth on a mountain side by a heavy rainstorm, Richard suddenly sees his own nature in its true light. The secondary characters of the book are three women whose lives are mingled with Seawright's. Each, and especially that of the mother, is drawn in strong and clear outline, and takes her place as an integral part of a finely composed piece of work.

From Messrs. A. & C. Black, Ltd.—"Beginners' Regional Geography: Asia," by J. B. Reynolds, B.A. Mr. Reynolds deals attractively with the continent of Asia in the brief manner suited to little folk. Coloured illustrations add to the charm of the volume.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—"Russia and Democracy," by G. de Wesselitsky. With a Preface by Henry Cust. This short survey of German work and influence in Russia is published on behalf of the Central Committee for National Patriotic Organisations. It is evident that, whatever else the War may bring about, it has already signed the death warrant of the German commercial exploitation of Russia. Readers of Mr. Wesselitsky's book will be amazed at the extent of German influence in Russia before the outbreak of hostilities.

From Mr. Charles H. Kelly.—"Souls of the Brave," by E. W. Walters. A vision of Christ comforting the souls of heroic men and women is described by Mr. Walters in his well-known manner. The vision is divided into nine brief chapters, the whole forming a short pamphlet.

From Mr. John Long, Ltd.—"The Mormon Lion." Chapters from the Secret Memoirs of David Ford. Brigham Young has been exposed many times; it is perhaps hardly necessary to add anything to his indictment nowadays. David Ford, moreover, has nothing new to add to our knowledge of the apostle of polygamy. His story of an unsuspecting man and maid who, after being caught in the toils, ultimately escape, makes good melodrama. The many and varied folk met with in Salt Lake City are well drawn, and the whole tale provides as good an inimical picture of Mormon life as has been penned by any writer.

From the Same.—"Honour in Pawn," by H. Maxwell. Here we have depicted the life of members of a thieves' aristocracy. Mrs. Fortescue and her brother steal masterpieces of art and sell them to unscrupulous millionaires. It is a delicate business, veiling with social graces the basest of social treacheries. The unscrupulous pair engage as decoy a girl previously detected by one of them in a peculiarly mean theft, and the girl Nancy becomes the objectionable heroine of "Honour in Pawn." The hero, Sir Roger Singleton, is little more than a peg on which to hang the fortunes of the unsavoury trio, and we refuse to believe that his influence caused Nancy's character to alter so radically as H. Maxwell would have us believe. There is a smart police court scene which forms good light reading.

From the Same.—"The Despot," by Ellen Ada Smith. This is a curious and rather unreal story, but it shows true talent, and it grips the attention throughout. The reader is introduced to a few lonely people inhabiting tenements in Dicker's Buildings, at Westminster. Among them are an actress, a mental specialist, an unsuccessful author, a dress-maker, and a woman of independent means. They are a curious and unconventional lot; but more curious still is their landlord, a sentimentalised and engaging man, named Joceline. All the opening chapters, indeed, are sentimentalised; and it is not until the character of Manderson, the mental specialist, is unfolded, that we come into an atmosphere of reality. He is a creature of great will power, of dominating personality, of deep and eager intelligence; he is great in everything, save in the unscrupulousness with which he seeks to benefit the human race. He compels many people into his service, and carries with him consistently the feeling of tragedy. Those who like fiction out of the ordinary run will find much to appreciate in this strange but fascinating book.

From the Same.—"The Driving Force," by George Acorn. "Like father, like child," is the favourite motto of Mr. Fortune, wealthy philanthropist; and, in order to turn his saying into a proven theory, he watches and takes notes of the careers of half-a-dozen East End slum children. To the children he is a Providence who saves them from the sharpest stings of poverty, through the agency of one "Mr. Richards," a man who has dedicated his life to the service of the poor after having been cast out of his father's house for a youthful offence. The characters and development of the two children, Margaret and Dick, supply Mr. Acorn with material which he turns to excellent account, and his descriptions of life in slum streets, its high lights and miseries, render his book notable.

From the Same.—"The Dual Identity," by C. Guise Mitford. A good detective story in which an innocent London bank clerk becomes possessed of a modest fortune and at the same time entangled in a complicated intrigue. There is of course a murder at the outset and immediate wrongly placed suspicions of Scotland Yard. Part of the development of the plot takes place in a lonely North Country district where an eerie atmosphere is successfully created and held. The secret of the criminal is well kept and the reader is made to feel that the final happiness of the ex-bank clerk has been truly earned.

From the Same.—"Never in Doubt," by Nat Gould. The last novel of Nat Gould is as vigorous and wholesome as any of his earlier books. He weaves his plot around two rich brothers, good fellows both of them, and by arranging that one shall have made his fortune in the Northern Territory of Australia, contrives to include a good deal of unusual and vivid incident. The heroine is a real Nat Gould woman, sweet, sane and forceful, and her shady father and brother provide the nearest approach to villainy in the story. Of course there are equine characters equal in importance to their human friends. Three fine descriptions of closely contested races should please the most exacting reader.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—"Faith and Work," compiled by Earl Brassey. Earl Brassey's compilation is a war book in the sense that the whole of the proceeds of its sale are to be devoted to War charities. In any other sense war is given a wide berth, the extracts from famous writers which go to form the volume being mainly devout and most of them soothing in character. The contents are classified under three heads—Faith, Revelation, and Infinite Character of Man—and the numerous authors drawn upon include Matthew Arnold, the Brontës, the Brownings, John Bunyan, Chateaubriand, Froude, Tom Hughes, Gladstone, Maeterlinck, and Mrs. Humphry Ward.

From the Same.—"Reflections of a Non-Combatant," by M. D. Petrie. A few of the hours that we give to recreation cannot be better spent than in the company of Mr. Petrie. Taking the stand that war will only end when a feeling of international justice reigns supreme, he judges the clash of nations below that standard by the temper and motives actuating the conflict rather than by their barbarous or humane methods of conducting warfare. From such high ground he discusses diplomacy, treaties, patriotism, democracy and neutrality in their relation to war. He is always clear and philosophical, and his chapters make engrossing reading.

From the Same.—"Lychgate Hall," "Wild Wheat," and "Dorset Dear," by M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell) are three volumes in a cheaper re-issue of the novels and tales by this gifted writer. Originally published about ten years ago, they have met with very considerable success, and in this cheaper form should appeal to a wider circle of readers than ever. They are just the books that one can give to a friend, especially if he or she be a lover of country life or nature study. They are clean, and wholesome and have a distinct charm of their own.

From Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co., Ltd.—"How to Save a Big Ship from Sinking, even though Torpedoed," by Charles V. A. Eley. Under this (in view of past events) somewhat astonishing title Mr. Eley has written an extremely interesting book, and one that should be studied by all who have to do with ships, especially those concerned in their design and construction. To a mere layman the author appears to have made out a very good case, and we hope those in authority will not hesitate to adopt his suggestions if they are practicable. Briefly, Mr. Eley's theory is this: equip a vessel with a sufficiency of powerful pumps, so that no matter what the damage by collision or torpedo or mine, providing one set of engines at least can be worked the ship can be kept afloat. He reviews in detail the sinking of H.M.S. Victoria twenty years ago, and the Titanic, and states that in the latter case about £1,000 spent upon pumps would have saved the vessel. It certainly seems a reasonable proposition, that if water entering a ship (e.g., the Titanic) at the rate of about 300 tons a minute can be pumped out again as quickly as it enters, the ship cannot sink, and the author gives figures showing that at comparatively insignificant extra cost, compared with the outlay on the Titanic, ten times the amount of water entering the ship could easily have been dealt with. He also applies his ideas to battleships, and pictures H.M.S. Tiger, one of our latest battle cruisers, riddled below the water line with 2,000 12 in. shot holes, and yet keeping afloat, or even torpedoed in four different places with holes each 15 ft. by 10 ft. well below the water line, and yet not sinking! The submarine menace would exist no longer. Mr. Eley is no crank and we hope his suggestions will receive the earnest consideration they deserve.

From the Same.—"The Allies," by J. England, edited by E. J. Patterson. An exciting story of the adventures, during the first two weeks of the War, of four chums—an English boy, a Russian, a French, and a Belgian. It tells how they fought the Germans on their own account, how they helped to capture whole companies of the enemy, how they detected spies, and how they apparently made themselves a confounded nuisance to the military authorities. We may expect the Germans to quote this book in order to prove their charges of violation of the rules of war against the Allied armies! For upon their own confession these precocious youngsters as civilians break most of the canons of international laws, and think as little of ambushing Uhlans as they do of fighting in the trenches in Red Cross uniform.

From the Same.—"We are French," by Perley Poore Sheehan and Robert H. Davis; introduction by Sir Gilbert Parker. This ultra-sentimental tale is strangely attractive. It relates how an old Zouave is summoned from his native village to Paris, in order to have conferred upon him the Cross of the Legion of Honour; the incident is slight, and the single episode seems barely sufficient for a short story. But, by surrounding the central characters with a halo of patriotism, and by adopting a simple and vivid style, the authors have contrived a book which contains all the elements necessary to ensure popularity.

From the Same.—"Italy and the Italian People." To the Nations of the War Series, Mr. Redmond-Howard now adds the volume dealing with Italy. It contains a brief history of the country, both in ancient and modern times; describes the manners and customs of its people; analyses its constitution; and dips successively into religious, political and literary matters. The book is competent, and may be recommended to the many readers whose knowledge of our latest ally is superficial.

From The University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—"Piers Plowman: Prologue and Passus I." B-text. Edited by C. M. Drennan, M.A. Lond. and Camb. An annotated edition of Langland's deathless poem, intended for use by university students and the upper forms of public schools. There is a long explanatory introduction, the notes are full and clear, and a good glossary is appended.

From the Same.—"A First Course in Engineering Science," by P. J. Haler, B.Sc., A.M.I.Mech. E., A.I.E.E., and A. H. Stuart, B.Sc., F.R.A.S. The treatment suggested in Circular No. 894 of the Board of Education has been followed in the compilation of Messrs. Haler and Stuart's little book; and also the needs of the examination in Mechanical Engineering, Division I, Grade I, of the City and Guilds of London Institute. Experimental work predominates in the teaching and students should find the manual clear and helpful.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular (Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable 'Book-Auction Records.'" How Mr. Karl can give such a valuable book for 2/- we do not know. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection. KANS-KE & CO., 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, London, N.W.

A FRENCHMAN'S THOUGHTS ON THE WAR

In this book M. Sabatier first shows how the country people he knows in the Cevennes have regarded the French entente with Britain and the recent entry of Italy into the war; he then deals with the spiritual revolution which the war has caused in France, with the attitude of the school teachers and the churches, and with the question of Alsace, showing how the Alsations have been faithful to France. In conclusion, he discusses the bearing of the war on the future of civilisation.

British and American Publishers and the Australian Market

It will be remembered that the suggestion, afterwards withdrawn, that British publishers should boycott American publishers who attempted to deal direct with Australia in selling American editions, was resented in America—in fact, the New York Publishers' Weekly said if such action were carried out it would amount to "deliberate unfriendliness."

In the latest issue of the Publishers' Weekly to hand, dated November 6th, 1915, we find the following letter from Messrs. Constable & Company:—

"ENGLISH PUBLISHER DEFENDS ACTION OF ENGLISH PUBLISHERS REGARDING AUSTRALIAN RIGHTS ON AMERICAN BOOKS

"London, September 1, 1915

"Editor, The Publishers' Weekly,

"We very much regret your suggestion of 'deliberate unfriendliness' of English publishers in your article of August 14th. The co-operation suggested is only put forward as a means of maintaining our position. We think no one here has described it as 'deliberately unfriendly' of America to entrench herself against competition from this country behind a double line of trenches—one called 'manufacturing clause,' and the other 'import duty on imported printed matter.' You only do what you consider best in your interests without any 'deliberate unfriendliness' to anybody else. For years British publishers have been building up an increasing business in Australia. Recently there have been many attempts to take this from them. We wish to improve our position in our British markets and to keep what we hold.

"We do not quite understand your reference to the author's rights. The suggestion is not prejudicial to American authors. Surely an American author will make what he considers the best arrangements he can. If he thinks it in his best interests that the whole British Empire should have access to his books, he will arrange this, either himself direct with the British publisher or through the American publisher. Australia is only a portion of the British Empire. The whole matter will adjust itself without any great trouble or complication. But please do not think that there is any intention of 'unfriendliness,' deliberate or otherwise. No publisher here thinks it deliberately unfriendly when an American publisher tries to insist on the Canadian rights of an English book going ipso facto with the United States rights. We must all, both in America and in Great Britain, try to look after our own interests and the interests of authors, but we are none of us therefore 'unfriendly.'

"CONSTABLE & COMPANY LIMITED."

In an Editorial the Publishers' Weekly thus refers to Messrs. Constable's letter, which certainly had a good effect.

The Editor of the Publishers' Weekly says:—

"We are glad to print a letter, delayed in transmission, from a leading and representative English house, protesting in a friendly way against our use of the phrase 'deliberate unfriendliness' in characterizing the organised action by English publishers in respect to American books in the Australian market. The disclaimer of unfriendliness is welcome, as American authors, no less than American publishers, would regret anything like an organised boycott, such as the action of the meeting seemed to indicate. We have never defended, but have consistently opposed the manufacturing clause as a condition of American copyright; and if American authors and publishers could have themselves decided this point there would not have been such a clause. The import duty on books, originally in some measure 'protective,' has been reduced of late years. It has been a well-founded boast of Great Britain that it has neither manufacturing clause nor import duties, and it is to be regretted that English publishers, acting as such, should introduce the restrictive spirit into publishing relations with other countries. To hold that no part of the British Empire is to be dealt with in this respect to book publishing, except through an English publisher, is to go a good way in this direction. The question of Canadian rights has always been a moot point to be dealt with by individual contract; and we do not recall that the American publishing trade by deliberate action in organised meeting has ever laid down the law that it will not handle books of an English author unless the Canadian market is included. The letter of Messrs. Constable makes the distinction between 'self-interest' and 'unfriendliness' which we are glad to note, but the present war is a direful example of the danger that self-interest, when carried to its logical extreme, easily merges into 'unfriendliness.' We hope, therefore, that our English brethren will call the boycott off and deal with the Australian market, as with the Canadian market, under individual contract, in the best interests of the English-writing author and the English-reading public, whatever be the author's nationality."

As we have already said, and we are glad to say it again, the boycott idea has been dropped; as our contemporary points out, it is a game two can play at, and it is a game which inevitably leads to 'unfriendliness.'

Notes and Announcements

MR. PHILIP W. SERGEANT has completed his edition of the celebrated Paul Morphy's "Games of Chess," and Messrs. Bell announce it for publication early next month. A careful selection of 300 games has been made, and these have been comprehensively analysed by Mr. Sergeant in the light of the best international criticism. The book also includes a new biography of Morphy by Mr. Sergeant.

Probably no war book is more eagerly awaited than Ian Hay's "The First Hundred Thousand," the fascinating chronicle of the training and the first achievements of Kitchener's Army, which, in its serial form, has largely helped to make the past year the most brilliant period in the long history of Blackwood. The publishers announce the book for the first week of December, and add the gratifying information that Ian Hay will recommence his monthly narratives as "The Junior Sub," in the magazine in January.

Surely Mr. Wm. Heinemann's new edition of "A Christmas Carol," by Charles Dickens (6s. net), is going to be one of the most popular of the season's books, for is it not illustrated by Mr. Arthur Rackham? It is—and most charmingly so. Does not Marley's Ghost on the frontispiece, remind you of the German Emperor?

The Society of SS. Peter and Paul announces many new publications, including a volume of war stories, entitled "The Gods of Prussia" and "The Lay of St. Odille," the latter being illustrated by Martin Travers, and printed in colour. The Society also announces the opening of a Christmas exhibition at No. 1, Church Street, Kensington.

The late Mrs. Percy Dearmer was one of a noble band of women who, despite the very greatest personal danger, went out to Serbia to assist in the work of nursing the sick and the wounded. There she laid down her life. Some of the letters which she wrote during this period of her career have been collected, and, supplemented by a memoir of their author from the pen of Mr. Stephen Gwynn, are about to be issued in a small volume. The book will bear as title "Letters from a Field Hospital," and will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co.

His Majesty the King and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales have honoured Mr. G. Valentine Williams by accepting copies of his recently published book, "With Our Army in Flanders."

"French for the Front," a short cut to the French language (price 3d.) has been issued by Messrs. E. Marlborough & Co. at the special request of many of our soldiers who had found the method adopted for learning sentences and phrases in rhyme of the greatest service to them. The preface of the author explains more fully the origin and purpose of the booklet. An excellent idea well executed.

Mr. Erskine MacDonald is making a feature for gift purposes and Christmas uses of "The Little Books of Georgian Verse," which now run to twelve titles, and "The Twentieth Century Poetry Series," which includes volumes by Eva Gore Booth, Gilbert Thomas, Edmund John, E. Cecil Roberts, Theodore Maynard and Arthur Thrush. To the volume by Mr. Maynard (who since its acceptance has entered a Dominican monastery), Mr. G. K. Chesterton has contributed a characteristic introduction. Another booklet about to be published is "The Mystic Arsenal," "wherein are stored the things of the Spirit that are the Munitions of Peace," compiled for daily use from all creeds and languages (with an introduction) by E. Crosby Heath. Mr. Erskine MacDonald is also issuing a collection of War Poems and Sonnets, by Alfred Williams, the Wiltshire poet, whose fame was established by his "Songs in Wiltshire" and "Poems in Wiltshire," published several years ago.

A work on "The Rise of Rail-Power in War and Conquest, 1833-1914," by Edwin A. Pratt, to be published shortly by Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd., traces the use, or the proposed use, of railways for the purposes of war and expansion from the earliest days of their introduction down to the outbreak of the war of the nations in 1914. It shows that the first suggestions in regard to such use were made in Germany in 1833, and that already in 1842 there was published a detailed scheme for covering Germany with a network of lines which would enable her to carry on war on two fronts, with France and Russia, at the same time.

"With My Regiment from the Aisne to La Basse," by a Platoon Commander, is the title of a new war book which Mr. Heinemann will publish shortly.

On November 29th Mr. Unwin will bring out Miss Dolf Wyllarde's "Things," a book for children. There are illustrations by Lady Peirse and Charles Vane.

M. Paul Sabatier's striking lectures recently delivered at Bedford College, London, attracted much attention. They are now to be published in volume form by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin under the title "A Frenchman's Thoughts on the War."

By the death of Mr. Booker Washington, the head of the Tuskegee Institute, the negro race has lost its most distinguished member and a great pioneer of education. Booker Washington's remarkable autobiography, "Up from Slavery," was first published in England by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, who also brought out "The Story of the Negro," a study of negro development by Booker Washington and another distinguished negro, Dr. Dubois. A brief account of Booker Washington's career is given in Mr. G. Holden Pike's book, "From Slave to College President," published some years ago by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

A second edition of Lord Eversley's book, "The Partitions of Poland," is now in preparation. Lord Eversley is devoting his profits from this work to the Fund for the Relief of Polish Victims of the War. A first instalment of profits has already been sent to the Fund.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. have got out for the advertisement of their new novels neat little four-page circulars with portraits of the authors. We have before us four, viz., of "Midsummer Magic," by Walter Bamfylde; "When Pan Pipes," by Mary Taylor Thornton; "Nymphet," by John L. Carter (Littlehampton is a paradise for children, and this is about a charming child in that paradise), and "Cleopatra, a Gipsy," by Arthur F. Wallis. The circulars, we are glad to see, all contain forms on which you are requested to order the books from your bookseller.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. have got out an attractive illustrated "List of Devotional and Religious Books" suited for use at the season of Advent and in time of war.

With 35 illustrations, and printed at the Chiswick Press, Messrs. Ellis, of 29, New Bond Street, are to publish in a very small edition, "Extracts from the Diaries and Correspondence of John Evelyn and Samuel Pepys Relating to Engraving," with Notes thereon by Howard C. Levis.

A new book by M. Anatole France is bound to arouse a great deal of interest, and when it is a book specially written and sold for the benefit of French disabled soldiers the event is doubly important. Such is "The Path of Glory," which Mr. Lane will publish next week. The French text is given, with an English translation by A. R. Allinson, and there are illustrations.

Booksellers' Provident Institution

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors, held at Stationers' Hall, on Wednesday, November 17th, the sum of £95 11s. 8d. was granted for the relief of members and widows of members, and the receipt of the following donations was reported:—

Henry Kleinau, Esq. . . £2 2 0
Messrs. Francis Nicholls,
White & Co. . . £2 2 0

Mr. C. J. Longman presided at the meeting, and there were also present: Messrs. J. R. Blade, L. Carrdus, J. Cooper, J. Foster, A. W. Gatfield, J. W. Harden, F. J. James, W. H. Jelpke, G. H. Johnson, W. A. Kelk, A. S. Lewis, W. Longman, A. W. Mills, A. W. Nott, A. J. Sabin, E. Shallis, F. W. Smith, and G. C. Sole.

National Book Trade Provident Society

Oxford Branch

A MEETING was held on Wednesday, November 17th, in the large room, 50, Broad Street, when Mr. D. Nicol Smith, Goldsmith's Reader in English, gave an interesting address on "Samuel Johnson and His Booksellers," Mr. B. H. Blackwell in the chair.

Referring to Johnson's undergraduate days at Pembroke College, the "nest of singing birds," where he did not always do what his tutors expected, nor had too high a respect for them, yet was always a loyal son of Oxford and looked back with great affection to his Alma Mater, "we all know him," said the lecturer, "in the pages of Boswell, we know him as a member of the Literary Club, but we will look at him, if we can now, in the company of the booksellers with whom he was so closely associated." In the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the two occupations of publishing and selling books were regularly combined. The publisher was a bookseller, and the bookseller a publisher, and the first instance of the use of the word "publisher" occurs in 1740, at the beginning of an edition of Swift's "Gulliver's Travels." Johnson's publishers were many, but the lecturer confined his remarks to those with whom he was more particularly associated. Mr. Nicol Smith, following the example of Chaucer's "Clerke of Oxenforde," and being as glad to learn as to teach, elicited information from his audience on some questions relative to the condition in which books were issued in earlier days, and the great diversity of their bindings. The local secretary, Mr. H. S. Rowles, proposed a very cordial vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was seconded by Mr. F. S. Thornton, and carried with acclamation.

Society of Old Friends

ANNUAL DINNER

THE annual dinner of the Society of Old Friends was held at the Adelaide Galleries, Strand, on Friday, November 19th, when the President, Mr. W. J. Barwick, presided over a record attendance. In every other respect, too, the function was in advance of previous dinners. The speeches were excellent and the musical programme provided by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Frank House, high though previous standards of excellence have been, was without doubt the best he has ever put before the members. The guest of the evening was Mr. Charles Garvice, the popular novelist, whose health Mr. Barwick proposed in an admirable speech. Mr. Garvice, he said, had never sullied the English language by any of the improper moral decadent productions which were a disgrace to English literature.

Mr. Garvice in response said that the proudest title they could confer upon him was that of an honest workman. "Call me that," he added, "And you may dispose of your knightships and baronetcies where you will."

Mr. T. McDonald Rendle proposed "The President."

Mr. Barwick responded in a humorous speech.

After other toasts had been honoured, the health of the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Frank House, was proposed by the President, who paid a well-deserved tribute to his ability in organising the entertainment. The toast was most affectionately received.

"The Way of an Eagle"

So great has been the demand of the trade for the new shilling edition of Miss Ethel M. Dell's popular book that Mr. Fisher Unwin has been obliged to increase again the printing order.

The publishing day is December 1st, and booksellers should send their orders at once to ensure delivery by that date. We give an illustration of the striking wrapper design.

"Winter's Pie, 1915"

THAT ever-welcome annual, "Winter's Pie," was published on Monday, the 22nd inst., and it will undoubtedly come as a cheery gleam to those on active service, in hospitals and camps, or at home.

In this issue appears Mr. W. Pett Ridge's appreciation of the late Mr. W. Hugh Spottiswoode, accompanied by a copy of his latest portrait. "Winter's Pie" is published by the Sphere and Tatler, Ltd., and obtainable at all booksellers and bookstalls, 1s. net. A capital pie in every way, and we congratulate Mrs. Sylvia Spottiswoode, the editor.

Votes for Commercial Travellers' Schools

WE shall be much obliged to any of our readers who have votes for the Commercial Travellers' Schools, if they can spare any, if they will give them for William Amos, aged 7, son of Mrs. W. A. Amos, of 34, Park Road, Bromley, Kent, whose late husband travelled for Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Messrs. Chapman & Hall, and for Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons' New Books

"Black Beauty," by Anna Sewell, illustrated by Lucy Kemp-Welch, with 24 colour pictures and many line decorations. The story of "Black Beauty" itself has become a great favourite with all people, but perhaps it has never been so beautifully illustrated as in this edition. The pictures by Miss Lucy Kemp-Welch, who is so well known for her pictures of animals, and of those of horses in particular, are inspired by the real affection which she has for Black Beauty—indeed, many of the studies for the character of Black Beauty are taken from her own black charger presented to her by Sir Robert Baden-Powell. The book is very well bound and printed, and the entire get-up so attractive as to make it an excellent presentation volume.

"The Appeal of the Picture," an examination of the principles of picture making by F. C. Tilney. This book is the outcome of the experience of a painter who throughout his practice has made it a rule to examine the whys and wherefores of both the moral and material aspects of his art. The resulting, thoughts and considerations have been put to practical test during some fifteen years in which Mr. Tilney has been engaged in art-teaching and art-criticism. These critical and educational activities have been chiefly directed towards two entirely different classes of students—the scholar of the art school, and the student of artistic or pictorial photography. It is from both these classes that picture-makers come, and it is to both these that this book will be useful.

"Schools of To-morrow," by John Dewey and Evelyn Dewey. Profusely illustrated and supplied with explanatory illustrations, Mr. and Miss Dewey's book on educational methods describes in full the various ways of carrying out model theories of education in many experimental schools in the United States. The extreme usefulness of comparing practice with precept will be evident to all teachers, among whom should be found many to profit by the conclusions drawn in the present volume. The basis of the U.S.A. experimental schools has been the teaching of Rousseau, and never have the axioms of the master been more closely applied. To teach the child the development of the needs of the moment rather than to prepare him for the needs of a future which he may never realise seems a sensible proposition, as undoubtedly it is one of exceeding agreeableness to the child himself.

"War Thoughts of an Optimist," by Benjamin Apthorp Gould. Mr. Gould is a Canadian, with all a Canadian's love of freedom. The articles gathered together in his book all voice his love of liberty and his belief in democracy. Germany is to him the enemy of the welfare of mankind, and as for the German-American—"there is no such person." No man can be both a believer in Germany and a believer in America, says Mr. Gould, and he goes on to state that the German-American myth has been created by a few pro-German papers in order to frighten President Wilson! The reader must judge for himself whether this view is purely individual or is typical of Canada as a whole.

"In Pastures Green," by Peter McArthur. A series of essays on different aspects of Canadian farm life, written with the dry humour generally supposed to be characteristic of the United States. Packed as the volume is with closely set print, the reader will reach the end all too soon, for a wealth of entertainment is to be drawn from its pages—the savour of the apple-pit, the secret of the woods, the excellence of food in a dry, frosty air, &c.

Two New Books from Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

"Our Indians at Marseilles," by Massia Bibikoff; translated by Leonard Huxley; with an introduction by Maurice Barrès, de l'Académie Française. With fifty page illustrations. Mlle. Massia Bibikoff, a pupil of Detaille, the celebrated battle painter, had the good fortune to receive permission to sketch in the Indian camps, when our contingent reached Marseilles in September-October last year. At the same time, she kept a diary describing her experiences, the most notable of which was her reception by the Maharajah of Jodhpur, who had brought over his own men at his own expense. M. Maurice Barrès, the distinguished Academician, was so much pleased with this work on seeing it in MS. that he offered his own article on the Indian troops as an introduction.

"In Brief Authority," by F. Anstey. The fantastic vein so successful in "Vice Versa" is relied upon to supply the main interest of "In Brief Authority." The Wibberly-Stimpsons are suburban social climbers with a household containing a governess of aristocratic blood. An antique fairy pendant sold by the governess to Mrs. Wibberley-Stimpson causes the whole party to be transported to Märchenland, where the pickle manufacturer's family essays the rôle of royalty with conspicuous failure. Ultimately deposed in favour of the governess, the family are rushed swiftly back in the fairy stork car to their suburban home, where war has changed the whole social outlook. The book is brightly and humorously written.

Messrs. John Walker & Co.'s Diaries and Calendars

MESSRS. JOHN WALKER & CO., LTD., so famous for their admirable pocket diaries of all kinds, which are the perfection of such things, have for this Christmas and for 1916 brought out attractive novelties, for which, we understand, they are already having a large demand. With charming floral border designs by Miss Hester Walker, we have two "As You Pass Along the Way" calendars for 1916—twelve fine quality 10½ by 7½ white cards, attached by a silk cord through eyelet holes in each card; on each card is a selection from the very popular poems of Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, also a calendar for the month, printed in two colours, and with six different ornamental floral borders designed by Miss H. M. Walker; the designs are dainty and delicate, making the calendar very appropriate for a lady's boudoir or bedroom. The cards are put up in a card envelope. The same cards are also put up to hang from a ring, the cards held together by leather corner covers.

Another novelty of this firm is a series of six calendars mounted on strong cardboards, 6½ by 12 ins.; the calendar is on the lower quarter, and the upper three quarters have very clever reproductions in colour of original drawings by Miss H. M. Walker, showing heads of representatives of the armed forces of the

By ETHEL M. DELL.

Cloth, with picture wrapper, 1/- net

The publisher has just given the sixth printing order for 50,000 copies, and the book is not yet on the market.

As an indication of the enormous demand for this book, one big wholesale house, in placing their order, stated that it was the largest they had ever given for a new shilling novel.

The publishing day is Wednesday, December 1st, and if you desire to increase your original order, please do so, by return, otherwise, owing to transport difficulties, delivery cannot be guaranteed.

'The Way of an Eagle,' by Ethel M. Dell, is a record breaker at one shilling. The smallest retailer in the kingdom can easily sell this book, and trade terms are liberal.

NOTE.—Posters, Showcards, and Illustrated Folders are at your disposal.

T. FISHER UNWIN, Ltd.

Messrs. Nelson's Christmas Books

"A Book of the Sea," by Archibald Williams. With two coloured plates and numerous illustrations. This book deals with ocean depths, tides, currents, temperatures, waves and winds; marine surveying; shore protection; icebergs; marine chronometers, compasses, and sounding machines; lighthouses and lightships; buoys; lifeboats and life-saving apparatus; divers and diving; salvage operations; the removal of wrecks; the world's fisheries, including whaling; products of the sea; curious fish and ocean monsters; shells and shell-fish; and sea-birds. Chapters are devoted also to anchors; submarine cables; motor boats; the carriage of perishable cargoes; sailing and yacht-racing; and many other interesting subjects. The book is copiously illustrated with photographs and diagrams, and eminently suitable as a boy's gift-book.

"The Chartered Company: A Tale of Cailthorpe College," by Harold Avery, illustrated and handsomely bound. Just the book to give to boys, and girls also, for a prize or gift-book. Mr. Avery thoroughly understands schoolboys and writes just the kind of school story that they delight in, and this his latest is one of the best he has written.

"The Little Rajah: A Tale of Hidden Treasure in India," by Mrs. Hobart-Hampden, author of "The Taming of Tarn," &c. The volume contains full-page illustrations in colour, and is bound in green cloth. This delightful Indian story breaks new ground. Besides being full of adventure, it gives young readers a peep into the life of a Native State in our great dependency. When the story opens Major Carnac, having been appointed Resident to the Court of Drind in Central India, takes up his abode with his wife and two children at the Residency; from that moment to the end of the story strange and thrilling adventures and experiences happen to the Little Rajah, Frieda Carnac and her twin brother Michael. We feel sure that the young people for whom it is written will not be able to leave this book until the mysteries have been unravelled and the plot cleared up.

From "The Children's Bookshelf" series we have four delightful little volumes, most artistically got up; each volume contains eight large coloured plates; the reading matter suitable for children is in large, clear type; the coloured picture covers are very attractive.

"The Words that He Spake: Nine of Our Lord's Parables told for Children," by Roy Dawson, M.A.

"The Pillar of Fire: The Story of Moses and his Times," by Roy Dawson, M.A.

"Ivanhoe," by Sir Walter Scott, retold for Children by Elizabeth Hardie.

"What Katy did at Home," by Susan Coolidge. (Abridged.)

"Santa Claus Story Book: A Budget of Good Things for Little People." A volume to give joy to the nursery folk, bound in picture boards, containing stories, verses, and, most important of all, gether "The Jolly Book" is a budget of good things which will make winter evenings and rainy days positive seasons of delight.

"The Chummy Book," with twenty-four large coloured pictures and more than two hundred black-and-white illustrations. "The Chummy Book" is a jolly book for younger children. The stories and verses, though simpler in form and expression than in "The Jolly Book," are brimful of interest, and every one of them may be read by a child who has acquired the elements of reading. The type is large; the pictures are profuse; the subjects of the stories are extremely varied, and several of them have a war interest. The publishers assert that there is no young children's annual published which can compare, in character, contents, and general production, with "The Chummy Book." The nursery will welcome it with acclamation.

"Golden Fairy Tales." This handsome volume in red cloth, with coloured picture on the front cover, is one of the new double-volume editions of some of the books in the very favourite "Golden River" Series; it contains many well-known and popular fairy tales, among them, "Hansel and Grethel," "The Goose Girl," "The Golden Goose," "Little Snow-white," and eight others from Grimm, and "The Ugly Duckling," "The Constant Tin-soldier," "The Storks," and four others from Hans C. Andersen. It is well illustrated throughout with full-page coloured pictures and numerous illustrations in black and white.

"Whittenbury College." A Girl's School Story, by Alice M. Chesterton. A handsome prize or gift book, nicely bound and illustrated in colour. The story is brimful of incident and school-girls will revel in it. At Whittenbury College girls are thoroughly instructed and trained in domestic work, and taught that to cook, do housework, look after babies, do gardening, &c., well, they must train for it and pass exams. as they would for any other profession. There are all sorts of girls at the College and their characters are well drawn.

"The Last of the Giants." A story of Arctic Canada, by Tom Bevan, illustrated in colour. Jim Hutchinson and his friend Rob intend to explore the wonders of the Arctic plains, but on the first day of their journey Jim meets with an accident, and has to give up. He persuades Rob to join him in another expedition, and they go north from Slave Lake to Bear Lake, encountering dangers and adventures—exciting enough to please the most exacting school-boy.

From "THE LITTLE RAJAH" (Nelson)

for these very young people, plenty of illustrations in black and white, and several full-page pictures in colours.

"The Jolly Book," with twenty-four large coloured pictures and more than two hundred black-and-white illustrations. Once more this well-established annual is jollier than ever, and may be presented to boys and girls in the fullest confidence that it will give them unalloyed pleasure and happy and profitable recreation. Every variety of children's story is presented; humour abounds in prose, verse, and picture; war stories and sketches are included; and there is not a page from cover to cover that lacks interest. PARKSIDE WORKS, EDINBURGH.

Xmas Books from Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co.

"The Wonder Book," a picture annual for boys and girls. A handsome crown quarto volume, bound in cloth gilt, with over 300 illustrations. This year's issue fully maintains the high standard set by its predecessors. In accordance with the aim of the publishers, there are presented for the delight and entertainment of little folks, good pictures, stories and verses. The 12 coloured plates are very artistic, while there are 300 other illustrations in tints in the text. At a moderate price "The Wonder Book" will take a lot of beating as a Christmas present for little ones.

"Our Soldiers and Sailors: The Empire's Defenders in War and Peace." A well written and fully illustrated volume dealing with life in the British Army and Navy, and the defence forces of the Empire generally, and giving a wealth of information on matters of great interest to all. "Our Soldiers and Sailors" comprises two volumes of the well-known "Wonder Book" series, namely, the "Book of Soldiers" and the "Book of Ships." These books having met with as much acceptance from the general public as from the young people for whom they were primarily intended, the combined volume is issued in response to the demand for a less juvenile style of binding.

"THE WONDER BOOK"

"The Wonder Book of Empire," a fine book, crown quarto in size, cloth gilt binding and containing over 300 illustrations, including 15 plates in colour and a specially drawn map of the British Empire. It tells all about the lands under the Union Jack and the people who live in them and is full of interesting facts, stories and pictures.

"The Wonder Book of Animals." All children who love animals, and there are not many who do not, will hail this handsome volume with delight. Nature-study in all its branches is wisely encouraged in our schools, and this book can be recommended as a fascinating adjunct for home study. The services of some of the leading naturalists of the day have been enlisted, and amusement and instruction are so interwoven that, while it can be said there is not a dull page in the book, it is equally true that there is not a useless one. The "Book of Animals" is suited to children of all ages and contains a multitude of excellent illustrations including many plates in colour.

Margaret W. Tarrant. A handsomely bound book with pictorial wrapper and end papers. This collection of the old favourite rhymes and jingles, including over 400 pieces, is sure of a warm welcome in the nursery, Little Jack Horner, Tom Tucker, Old King Cole, and their illustrious company all being very daintily presented.

"Fairy Tales," with 48 full-page plates in colour, by Margaret W. Tarrant, a companion volume to the "Book of Nursery Rhymes." Here again are all the immortals

"FAIRY TALES"
(Ward, Lock & Co.)

—old yet ever new—Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, The Sleeping Beauty, Puss in Boots, Jack the Giant-Killer, the redoubtable Bluebeard, and a host of others. The text has been carefully edited in such a way that the youngest child can understand it. The binding is similar in style to that of "Nursery Rhymes."

"Lord Roberts, K.G., V.C." by Captain Owen Wheeler. As a gift book for boys of all ages this story should have a large sale, but it will also appeal to a much wider public; for long after Lord Roberts' deeds as a soldier have lost all but historical significance his character will remain as an example, and in times of crisis as a challenge to the manhood of Great Britain and the Empire. The book is fully illustrated with portraits and drawings which depict the battle-history of the British Empire during a period of sixty years.

"LORD ROBERTS," by CAPT. WHEELER

New Books from Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson

"The Scout Annual" for 1915. This volume contains upwards of 1,000 pages of stories and interesting and instructive articles and is very fully illustrated. Among the serial stories are: "A Son of the Line," by Christopher Beck, a very exciting railway yarn; "Dreadnoughts of the Dagger," by Robert Leighton, and "For King and Country," by Percy F. Westerman, two stories of the Great War; "Rabeh's Hoard," by Herbert Strang, a tale of adventure in Africa; "The Quetacotl Treasure," by Pennington Cross, telling of a boy's adventures in South America; "Farradale's Fag," by Harold Dorning, a story of a school mystery; and "Sam Sutton's Scouts," by E. Le Breton Martin, a powerful scouting yarn. Many other shorter stories are given, while the articles include the Chief Scout's weekly message, famous deeds of famous regiments, bravest deeds of the war, and competitions. The volume is very well bound in red cloth and would make an excellent gift book for boys between the ages, say, of eleven and sixteen years.

WRAPPER OF "HOW TO LOVE"
(C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.)

"How to Love, the Art of Courtship and Marriage," by Walter M. Gallichan. The scope of this book is indicated by the title. We give an illustration of the coloured wrapper.

"The Modern Light Car: How to Drive, Maintain and Repair it," by the author of "The Modern Motor Cycle." A simple manual for the owner-driver, phrased in non-technical language, planned to reduce his expenses and render him independent of professional assistance. The information given is exceedingly practical and complete.

"The Nameless Island," by Percy F. Westerman. This capital adventure story, by the author of "The Young Cavalier" and other boy's tales, is brimful of life and incident. It relates the doings of some up-to-date Robinson-Crusoes, wrecked on a nameless island in the South Seas. A number of full-page illustrations are given.

A fine presentation edition of Sir Robert Baden-Powell's popular book, "My Adventures as a Spy," has also been prepared by Messrs. Pearson. For this edition the work has been thoroughly revised and new material added. It has coloured frontispiece, four half-tone illustrations, and new sketches by the author.

THE WONDER BOOK SERIES

Picture Volumes for Boys and Girls. (Uniform with the "Wonder Book.")

Picture Boards, 3s. 6d. Handsome Cloth Gilt, 5s. 12 Coloured Plates. 264 Pages. Nearly 300 Illustrations.

The Wonder BOOK OF EMPIRE

It may safely be said that everyone who turns these pages will be amazed at the wealth of interest, entertainment and instruction, and will close the volume with A NEW SENSE OF PRIDE in the Greatest Empire that the world has seen. It undertakes the duty to the coming generation of making them acquainted with their glorious heritage, and teaching them something of their fellow-citizens and of the countries in which they dwell.

The Wonder BOOK OF SOLDIERS

All children love soldiers. This handsome volume tells all about them: how they live, how they work, how they fight.

The Wonder BOOK OF SHIPS

Tells in simple language all about the great liners and warships, and is crowded with pictures that make an instant appeal to all who love the sea.

The Wonder BOOK OF RAILWAYS

This book is intended first of all to entertain, but in entertaining it instructs. It has scores of interesting, chatty articles about engines, signals, tunnels, etc.

The Wonder BOOK OF ANIMALS

This is not merely a picture book or a story book, or a natural history book, but a blend of all three, with many entertaining and instructive features.

Two Charming Colour Books for Children

Messrs. A. & C. Black's Latest Books

"Royal Palaces and Gardens," painted by Mima Nixon. Introductory Essay by Dion Clayton Calthrop. Containing 60 full-page illustrations in colour.

Miss Mima Nixon's book on "Dutch Bulbs and Gardens," published in 1909, will be remembered for its rich colour rendering of those famous bulb farms and gardens. The publishers consider themselves fortunate in being able to present this new series of pictures from her brush, revealing the spaciousness and richness of many world-famous gardens, including some which are seldom open to the public. Mr. Dion Clayton Calthrop has written for the book one of those essays which never fail to give pleasure to his readers.

"Plant-Life," by the Rev. Charles A. Hall, F.R.M.S. Containing 50 full-page illustrations in colour by C. F. Newall, and 24 page illustrations from photographs. A handsome gift book by an authority upon a subject of never-failing interest. The illustrations are remarkably fine.

A book that commands attention is "Belgium," by L. Edna Walter, B.Sc. A.C.G.I. Foolscap 8vo., containing 24 full-page illustrations from photographs. This is in the "Fascination" Series.

A book about the regiments which are making history such as the world has never known is sure of a ready welcome, and in "The Story of the Highland Regiments," by Frederick Watson, we have, told in simple but glowing words, a record that is only surpassed by men of these self-same regiments now fighting for King and Country. Allan Stewart has supplied 8 full-page plates in colour.

"Austria-Hungary," by G. E. Mitton; "Bulgaria," by Frank Fox; "England," by Frank Fox; "France," by Gordon Home; "Italy," by Frank Fox; "Switzerland," by Frank Fox, are volumes in a new series of "Colour Books," each containing 32 full-page illustrations in colour. "Cornwall" in the same series has the text written by G. E. Mitton, with 20 illustrations in colour by G. F. Nicholls.

The "Artist's Sketch Book" series, 12 volumes each dealing with a town such as Cambridge, Oxford, Paris, London, &c., edited by Martin Hardie, A.R.E. Square demy 8vo., with artistic cover bearing a label designed by the artist, containing 24 reproductions from pencil drawings. The latest volume is "The Zoo," by A. W. Peters.

For a friend interested in the noble art of billiards one cannot choose a better book than "Billiards," from the pen of such expert players as Tom Reece and W. G. Clifford; 84 photographic reproductions of various strokes are included.

A book of topical interest just now (one might almost say of permanent interest), is Frank Fox's "Balkan Peninsula," with its 32 page illustrations from photographs.

A delightful book for presentation is Chas. Kingsley's "Heroes," and Messrs. Black's edition, with 8 full-page illustrations by Sybil Tawse, is well worth attention.

A good book for a boy would be "The Renegade," by John Finnemore, with illustrations by Allan Stewart; or "The Secret Seven," by Warren Bell; both can be well recommended. Mr. H. M. Brock has illustrated the latter.

"The Spirit of the Allied Nations": a series of Essays by Paul Studer, M.A., Professor of the Romance Languages in the University of Oxford; Alexis Aladin, ex-member of the Russian Duma; Paul Hamelius, D. ès L., Professor of English Literature in the University of Liège; J. H. Longford, B.A., Professor of Japanese in the University of London; R. W. Seton-Watson, D.Litt.;

From "OTTOMAN WONDER TALES"
A. & C. Black)

Sidney Low, M.A. Balliol College, Oxford, Lecturer on Imperial and Colonial History, King's College, London University, edited with an Introduction and Appendix, by Sidney Low.

Books suitable for children of various ages are:—"Wonder Tales of the Ancient World," by the Rev. James Baikie, F.R.A.S., containing 12 full-page illustrations in colour, by Constance Baikie. "Tales from the Poets," selected and arranged in prose by W. J. Glover, containing 8 illustrations in colour by Miss Sybil Tawse; "Ottoman Wonder Tales," translated and edited by Lucy M. Garnett, containing 12 full-page illustrations in colour, and specially designed title-page and ornaments by Charles Folkard; and "Finn and Samoyad (Life and Legends of Other Lands), The Bear Hunters of the North," by L. Edna Walter, B.Sc., A.C.G.I., containing 8 full-page illustrations in colour.

A new book by a well-known humorous writer is "Psmith, Journalist," by P. G. Wodehouse. Large crown 8vo, cloth, containing 12 illustrations from drawings by T. M. R. Whitwell. Mr. Wodehouse has made quite a name for himself already and his latest book is quite up to the standard of the others.

"The Adventures of Teddy Tail of the Daily Mail," told and pictured by Charles Folkard. Teddy Tail needs no introduction; he has thousands of friends all over the country, and his appearance in the columns of the Daily Mail has met with approval from children of all ages. Mr. Charles Folkard's imagination has found opportunity for full play in the creation of this, the most amusing of all mice. The adventures in every case contain that little touch of fantasy that so appeals to the mind of the child. The large, clear pictures with the amusing text will prove a joy to all children, and to those who have so far not had an opportunity of making the acquaintance of this amusing mouse, to say nothing of his dear friend, Dr. Beetle, the book will prove a delightful surprise.

Two more colour books are "London Water- Colours," and "Surrey Water- Colours," by Sutton Palmer.

Mention must be made of the "Peeps" series, small volumes, fully illustrated in colour and with many illustrations in the text. The volumes are: "Peeps at the Canadian Pacific Railway," by Frederic A. Talbot; "Peeps at South America," by Edith A. Browne; "Peeps at the World's Children," by L. Edna Walter, B.Sc., A.C.G.I. "Peeps at Alsace and Lorraine," by A. W. Holland; "Peeps at Postage Stamps," by Stanley C. Johnson M.D., 16 pages of reproductions from selected specimen stamps.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind,
and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books,
from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included.
The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow
and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular
(Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable
"Book-Auction Records." How
Mr. Karslake can give such a valuable book for 2/- we do not know."
The Clique says:—"It is the best,
bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books
has ever had." Send a postcard for
a part on inspection. KARSLAKE

Child's Book of the War

TELL ME ABOUT DADDIE & THE WAR

All children are interested in the War.

Here are two volumes specially written for them by a popular writer of children's stories, and Illustrated.

Volume I. begins with the "Scrap of Paper" incident and ends with the Battle of the Aisne.

Volume II. continues from the story to the Battle of Neuve Chapelle.

All the thrilling incidents on sea and land are correctly described in just the manner which is sure to hold the child's interest, and convey a clear history of this War, which parents would find very difficult and wearying.

- I. Belgian Playmates.
 - II. More Belgian Playmates.
- By NELLIE POLLOCK.

With Coloured Frontispiece and four Wash Drawings in each, by CHARLES FOLKARD and G. P. CARRUTHERS.
Size 6½ in. by 5 in., Cloth with Coloured Wrappers, 1s. 6d. net each.

Glorious Deeds of the Australasians

MR. ANDREW MELROSE has just published at the popular price of 3s. 6d. net, with a map and thirty-two illustrations, "Glorious Deeds of Australians in the Great War," by E. C. Buley, author of "Australian Life in Town and Country." It is one of the best of the books about the War which have appeared, and we hope and feel sure that our friends the booksellers, in all parts of the Empire, will recommend it to their customers. For the whole Empire is proud of the splendid reply which Australasia made to the call to arms and of the splendid deeds of her sons on sea and land. This fascinating little work describes the gathering of the Anzacs from their homes spread over the vast area of Australia and New Zealand, their embarkation and transport to Egypt, their landing at Anzac Cove in Gallipoli, and as much of their fighting as the "powers that be" have permitted to appear in print in this country. The real story has yet to be told, but we at least know that no finer fighters have ever appeared on any battlefield—no finer in every sense of the word—than the men of our Australasian Army and Navy. When we have seen their wounded in London, we have felt a very earnest hope that they have felt at home here, that they know how their efforts are appreciated here, and also that they know that if all that we should like to do for them has not been done it is simply because there is hardly a family in the Old Country which has not felt the strain of the War. It is, therefore, very gratifying to find that Mr. Buley, the author of this work, is able to say, after interviewing some hundreds of wounded Australians in London hospitals, he has not met with one who "has not taken occasion to mention the great kindness shown by the people of Great Britain": many of them asked him to mention this. "Their thankfulness has been so spontaneous and they have been so profoundly touched, that I have ventured to refer to it." In addition to the accounts of the land fighting, Mr. Buley gives us the best account we have seen of the Australian cruiser Sydney's search for and destruction of the Emden, and of the clearing of the Pacific and the capture of the German Colonies; and of the formation of the Australasian Army and of her young Navy—a splendid shoot from the grand old tree.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD announce for early publication, in two fully illustrated volumes, "The Life of Field-Marshal Sir George White, V.C." by the Rt. Hon. Sir Mortimer Durand, P.C., G.C.M.G. The biography of "The Defender of Ladysmith" will be eagerly welcomed.

The forthcoming "Life of Lord Strathcona," by Mr. Beckles Wilson, which Messrs. Cassell announce, will, it is hoped, finally dispel the web of mystery which has long enveloped the career and personal antecedents of a great Empire builder.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., have this week published their new greatly enlarged edition of that fascinating book Sir Sidney Lee's "Life of Shakespeare." The type has been re-set. We have found it to be a complete refutation of the idea that our supreme national poet was ever neglected by his own countrymen, and really discovered in Germany. It is not only a biography of the poet and his family, but also a key to his works, and a bibliography of them.

The translation of Dr. Anton Nyström's book, "Before, During, and After 1914," will shortly be published by Mr. Heinemann with an introduction by Mr. Edmund Gosse, C.B. Dr. Nyström's account of the circumstances and the political ambitions that led to the outbreak of the war is quite one of the best.

"Chapel," by Miles Lewis, which Mr. Heinemann will shortly publish, is said to be a first novel of extraordinary promise. It is a tale of Welsh family life in the Cardiff district.

The most interesting book we have read about the splendid Russian Army is, undoubtedly, "Day by Day with the Russian Army," by Mr. Bernard Pares, just published, with maps and portrait, by Messrs. Constable. Mr. Pares was the official British observer with the Russian Armies in the field, both last year and this; it is written with such modesty as regards his own work, and such enthusiasm for the Russian soldiers of every grade, that its perusal deepens one's faith in Russia and in victory. If we could, we would send copies to every British regiment and warship.

Mr. Eveleigh Nash has just published in the shape of a 6s. novel a dozen stories of crime under the general title of "The Crime Club." It is the joint production of Frank Froest, Member of the Victorian Order, late Superintendent Criminal Investigation Department, New Scotland Yard, and George Dilnot. Judging from the English we should guess the book to be written by the latter, an American, and edited by the former English detective chief. Of course we should be more intrigued, to use a silly expression which ought to damn any novel in which it is used, if only the English expert in crime detection had written the book, as one feels his name is on the title page chiefly to impress the reader that this is the genuine thing. Anyway and anyhow, we can recommend this collection of twelve stories to the booksellers, not only as a book to sell but one which they will find it amusing to have a smoke over quietly after business—it kept us up till past midnight. The new “no treating to drink” order will evidently handicap our criminal investigation department; all the same, it does not seem to be an all-square thing for chiefs of the British Secret Service first to warn a poor devil of a “plug” that what he says will be used in evidence against him, and then combine to make him drunk to get his secrets, while they partly pretend to drink. It seems almost as questionable, from an ethical point of view, as the brutal American “Third Degree” mental torture business.

“The Printed Book: its Origin and Development” is the title of a most interesting lecture which was given recently by Miss Frances Commin before the St. Albans and Hertfordshire Architectural and Archaeological Society. Miss Commin is a sister of our friend the well-known Exeter bookseller, Mr. James G. Commin. Miss Commin is second Mistress at St. Alban's High School, and is very much interested in history and bibliography. As the president of the Society said, the lecture was both charmingly written and charmingly delivered. We hope to refer to it again later on.

In two handsome demy octavo volumes, well illustrated, Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. have just published a most interesting historical biography by Mrs. Edith E. Cuthill, F.R.H.S., entitled “The Scottish Friend of Frederick the Great.” The “friend” of the great Prussian King was George, Baron Keith, tenth and last Earl Marischal of Scotland. We call it an historical biography as it is much more than a life of the “Old Lord Marischal”; it gives us some attractive sidelights on the Courts of Europe in the great Frederick's period. George Keith was one of the great adherents of the Jacobite cause, who, after sacrificing everything and risking his life for his Prince, was at last compelled by the dissolute conduct of Charles Edward to throw him over, but not before he had for years been mixed up with the fortunes or misfortunes of the Young Pretender. It also gives us much interesting correspondence which Keith had with Frederick, with Rousseau, Voltaire, Hume, and notably with his more famous brother, General Keith, one of Frederick's best Field Marshals. This correspondence between the brothers is not brilliant, but has a charm of its own. Carlyle, in the greatest of all biographies, has a few references to the subject of this biography. “An excellent, cheery old soul, honest as the sunlight, with a fine small vein of gaiety and ‘pleasant wit’ in him. What a treasure to Frederick at Potsdam in the coming years, and how much loved by him (almost as one boy loves another), all readers would be surprised to discover.” Well, here it is all very ably and fully discovered for us. Mrs. Cuthill makes no hero of her subject; in fact she admits, so far as any remains are concerned, he was a failure; but the reader will welcome these particulars—admirably presented to us—of the varied and not uneventful life of a man who was the friend of Frederick yet never flattered him, and who well deserved Carlyle's description of him as “honest as the sunlight.” It is curious to find General Keith in one of his letters to his brother complaining how he is “anxious for peace, for my health can no longer sustain the fatigues of war, especially . . . as we are forced each campaign to run after so many neighbours from one end of Germany to the other.” There is much that is romantic in the history of these two Keith brothers, scions of one of the proudest families in Scotland, and this fine work ought to be welcomed north of Tweed and by Scots wherever they may be.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons will publish shortly two new books on the war, “The New Europe,” some essays in reconstruction, by Arnold J. Toynbee, and “War and Self-Denial,” by Hartley Withers.

That wonderful paper The Teacher's World, which is the official organ of so many thousands of those who are training our future men and women of the Empire, is doing good work in trying to get teachers to buy books instead of borrowing them. In its issue for November 24th it describes a special new competition for scholars, the subject being, “Which is the Greatest Book in the World?” On November 17th The Teacher's World published a list of some hundred books which it recommends to teachers who wish to follow “the story method” in geography.

We are informed by “Geographia,” Ltd., 55, Fleet Street, that they have now produced seventeen of the Daily Telegraph War Maps, and hope to complete the first twenty before Christmas. These fine maps deserve the success they have obtained under the patronage of the great Daily Telegraph. By the way, Daily Telegraph War Map No. 13 of the British Front has taken the place of No. 11.

Messrs. George Allen & Unwin are fortunate in being able to announce a book to contain a selection of the unpublished papers, &c., left by M. Theirs dealing with the years 1870-1873.

A new and popular edition of “Praeterita” is to be issued by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., the Ruskin publishers, on December 6th, under the title “The Autobiography of John Ruskin.”

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., have just published, at 1s. 6d. net, a most useful little work, viz., “Lessons in Russian, a First Graduated Course: Alphabet, Sounds and Letters, Orthography, Calligraphy Exercises and Notes,” by M. B. Karrachy-Smitt. “The notion prevails somewhat widely that Russian is an extremely difficult language to learn, but this is far from being the case if one gets over the obstacles of learning and using a new alphabet.”

Messrs. Blackwood are publishing shortly another fine narrative of life at the Front in “The Diary of a Nursing Sister on the Western Front, 1914-1915.” It tells the story of some of the chief battles of the war from the point of view of the “just afterwards” on the lines of evacuation of the wounded, and its intimate detail gives a wonderfully vivid picture of what lies between the casualty in the firing line and the permanent hospital. Full of enthusiasm for the uncomplaining heroism of the wounded, the book is also an unconscious tribute to the cheerful devotion of our nurses in continuous toil, difficulty, and discomfort, and frequent personal danger.

Under the title of “A Syrian Love Story,” Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce the immediate publication of a new volume of sermons by Dr. Paterson-Smyth, the rector of St. George's, Montreal.

Messrs. Mothuen have just published Mr. Arthur Ponsonby's “Democracy and Diplomacy: A Plea for Popular Control of Foreign Policy.”

Mr. B. H. Blackwell, of Oxford, hopes to publish in the course of a few days an English-Serbian Phrasebook, with easy Grammar, compiled by Louis Cahen and Nevill Forbes, Reader in Russian and the Slavonic Languages in the University of Oxford, price 1s. net. This book is designed specially for use by our men in the Balkans.

A new work by the Rev. Arthur Chambers, entitled “Our Self after Death,” is to be published shortly by Mr. Charles Taylor, of 22 and 23, Warwick Lane, London, E.C.

Mr. John Grant, of Edinburgh, sends us a copy of his “Catalogue of latest purchases of remainders and new books,” at greatly reduced prices. It is intended for the trade only, and is an admirably arranged and fully detailed list.

It must have required a good deal of thinking over to produce such a fine Christmas Number as the Sphere gives us this year. It is so good that it is sure to be out of print very soon. Thousands of copies will be needed to send to our men who are “at the Front,” on sea or land.

Mr. Unwin will bring out on December 6th, Mr. Richard Marsh's last novel, the proofs of which were passed only a week or two before the author's death. The title is “Sam Briggs, V.C.” Sam Briggs was a little Cockney clerk, who enlisted shortly after the war broke out. Richard Marsh's numerous admirers will be glad to hear of this story of the war by him.

An extremely interesting and useful little illustrated book about the Army will be published next week by Mr. John Lane. It is called “The Way they have in the Army,” and the author is Mr. Thomas O'Toole, himself a soldier, at present recovering from a wound received in the trenches.

A Naturalist in Madagascar

"A Naturalist in Madagascar: a Record of over Fifty Years' Intimate Association with the Natives and Study of the Animal and Vegetable Life of the Island." The author is James Sibree, F.R.G.S. Messrs. Seeley, Service & Co., as is usual with them, have made the book just what such a book should be, a fine demy octavo, with over fifty good illustrations and three maps, well printed by the Riverside Press, Ltd., Edinburgh, on good paper for the eyes and hands, so the 400 pages are not so heavy as many books half the size. In his account of more than a thousand miles of travel in Madagascar, Mr. Sibree continually introduces us to something strange and interesting. In fact, we must admit we had no idea that the enormous island—it is over 1,000 miles long—was half so interesting. The wild scenery, the birds, beasts, serpents, insects, and most curious of all, the natives, are all described in such an entertaining and cheerful manner by Mr. Sibree that after taking it up to read a chapter or two we were obliged to go all the way with him, and at the end felt very much obliged to him for his book, which is charmingly dedicated to his wife, who has accompanied him in so many of his travels, his constant companion in Madagascar, and faithful helper in all his work for forty-four years.

The author was told by white men that there are plenty of fish of all kinds in Madagascar, and the natives would take the copper kettle for fish stories, judging from one they planted on Mr. Sibree. It is of a sea fish called the Hamby, described as being "as long as a man's arm and as big round as a man's thigh, with a dorsal fin like a brush, and a liquid about it sticky, like glue, and when it fastens on to another fish from below, with this brush, the fish cannot get away, but is held fast." On account, so they told him, of this glue pot and brush peculiarity, "when the natives catch one they confine it in a light cage, which they fasten in the sea, feeding it daily with cooked rice or small fish, and when using it they tie a long cord round its tail and let it go, following it in a canoe. When it fastens on a fish they pull it in and secure the spoil."

This is as good as another story which the Madagascar natives told Professor G. F. Scott Elliot about the Indris lemur—one of the missing links in the chain of human life. The natives told the professor never to throw a spear at the lemur; he would catch it and throw it back, and it never missed in its aim!"

But to return to Mr. Sibree's work. We had marked pages to quote but the whole book is worth quoting, and all we can do is to repeat the recommendation with which we began. The author is a naturalist traveller and missionary, after the order of Dr. Livingstone, i.e., a proper sort of missionary; but this work is almost wholly concerned with natural history and travel.

Two New Books from the Oxford Press

MR. HUMPHREY MILFORD has recently published a new volume, "Pulpits, Lecterns and Organs in English Churches," by the Rev. Dr. Charles Cox, F.S.A., in the "Church

PULPIT AT HANNINGTON, NORTHANTS

(Oxford Press)

Art in England" Series, the general editor of which is Mr. Francis Bond, the well-known authority. All the books in this series are compiled with great care and accuracy, and this new volume fully maintains the high standard set. The greater part of the letterpress is devoted to the subject of pulpits; but full accounts are also given of lecterns, hour-glasses, reading-desks and organs and organ cases. The pulpit of mediæval days was evidently intended to take a prominent part among the fittings of a church, for the best of sculpture and carving was usually employed in its construction. This is vividly demonstrated by the excellent illustrations in the book. The interesting subjects of hour-glasses and lecterns are treated in a much fuller fashion than is usual, fine examples being shown also by numerous illustrations. We reproduce one of the illustrations from this most interesting, informative and comprehensive book.

From "A Naturalist in Madagascar"
(Seeley, Service & Co.)

"The Compleat Angler" (Walton and Cotton), with an Introduction by A. B. Gough, and Notes by T. Balston. In addition to the pleasant account of the famous little book and its authors, by Mr. A. B. Gough, this excellent edition is noteworthy by reason of the fifty pages of Notes by Mr. T. Balston, who, as it were, perambulates the work, and every now and then makes a note of something or other. For instance, if Walton mentions some person, e.g., Sir Henry Wotton, we are told briefly who he was. Under the heading, "Salmon are in Season," the present close times are given, but unfortunately incorrectly. The great bulk of the notes are useful, and often give uncommon information—the dock-grub is not a beetle-grub, but the grub of a handsome moth. We have kept them from A to Z of their existence. Mr. Balston says he does not know what part of the feather "the whirl" is—probably it is a misprint, as "herl" is meant. A note on p. 358 gives a wrong definition of case-worm or caddis-worm, as the may-fly does not make a case. Lovers of Walton will thank Mr. Gough for his pleasant appreciation of the author and his work, though they may not quite agree with some of his conclusions.

Some new Gay & Hancock Books

A VERY fine Christmas gift book for children is "The Story of Prince Ahmed and the Fairy Perie Banou." The fairy tale is, of course, from "The Arabian Nights," while the get-up of the book is most attractive. It is fully illustrated by Charles Robinson, with five three-colour plates and other line decorations in two colours.

Messrs. Gay & Hancock are also publishing immediately a new and revised edition, with notes on pasteloid painting, of "Life and Nature Studies," by Hume Nesbit. This new edition is illustrated with four three-colour plates and thirteen line illustrations.

A third volume is "More Belgian Playmates," by Nellie Pollock. This is a continuation of the story of the great War for children, commenced in Miss Pollock's popular book, "Belgian Playmates," published in the autumn of last year. The present volume covers the period from the Battle of the Aisne to Neuve Chapelle. It contains a coloured frontispiece and four half-tone illustrations by Charles Folkard.

Dr. Cook writes that he nearly froze to death climbing Mt. Everest. We had no idea winter had set in so early in Brooklyn.—Columbia State.

"The Flying Girl"

The late Mr. Richard Marsh's Latest Book

A SAD interest attaches to the new bright and interesting story, "The Flying Girl," as the author, Richard Marsh, died suddenly, just before it was published by Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co.; and his son was killed in action just after it was published. There have been many books in which the new human art of flying is brought in to add to the interest, but we doubt if in any of them the flight into this new field of fiction is so well sustained as in "The Flying Girl." The time of the story is that when the Daily Mail was doing this country such splendid service by its offers of great prizes for the first great flight round our Islands. If the Government had helped the D.M., instead of hindering it, we should have had such a fleet of airships as would have made German invasion of our air and place in the sun an impossibility. The hero and heroine of this aerial romance learn to fly together and to fall in love together, and together win the great prize. How they do it is told in a style which is almost worthy of Jules Verne at his best. When over a quarter of a century ago, Verne was delighting us with his wonderful account of submarines and airships, the Times said his stories were "terribly thrilling and absolutely harmless." If not exactly terribly thrilling, "The Flying Girl" is thrilling—and it is also absolutely harmless, and we can recommend it. As her lover's uncle says to the heroine: "While there are women in England who can bear themselves with such confident courage as you clearly do, there can be nothing very wrong with the men; my nephew is very fortunate in his passenger." On p. 580 Mr. T. Fisher Unwin announces a last book by this popular author.

From Messrs. Allen & Unwin

"OBLOMOV," by Ivan Goncharov. Translated from the Russian by C. J. Hogarth.

(Allen & Unwin)

The Russian classics are one by one receiving translation into English. "Oblo-mov" is, we are told, one of the greatest of these and is a study of a perfectly new type in Russian fiction. Indeed, Ilya Ilyitch Oblo-mov is a strange gentleman. He lies in bed utterly devoid of the will power necessary to arise, and builds castles in the air, planning hosts of fine actions which his inertia prevents him from accomplishing. An immensely energetic friend at length succeeds in stirring the lethargic figure and Oblo-mov gets out of bed, takes a journey, marries and dies. The slight action takes place in the concluding chapters, all the foregoing being occupied by a searching and exceedingly clever analysis of Ilya Ilyitch's state of mind. Mr. Hogarth, excepting for the occasional use of un-English phrases, has done the work of translation well.

"Nights in Town," by Thomas Burke. The charm of London by night—that is, pre-War London—has moved many of our writers to panegyric. Mr. Thomas Burke is a whole-hearted lover. In riches and in poverty, in Kensington and in Limehouse, Clapham and Piccadilly Circus, in opera, music-hall and cinema, and in tramping the streets, he spends his paradise of nights, and with vivid phraseology dilates upon and describes his experiences. His book is more than an entertainment, for it abounds in knowledge of humanity and a clean and wholesome love of men and women.

"German War Proclamations in Belgium." The original title of this booklet is "Arrêtés et Proclamations de Guerre Allemandes," and is the only part of the publication to receive translation. To the large number of our people sufficiently familiar with French, these proclamations will prove of the most profound interest.

A MATTER WHICH AFFECTS MANY MILLIONS OF PUBLICATIONS A YEAR.

Should the Title along the Back of a Book or Magazine Read from the Top of a Book Downwards, or from the Bottom Upwards?

A

A is supposed to show copies of magazines or thin books in a pile on a table or counter or shelf, placed flat one on the other.

B

B is supposed to show copies of magazines or thin books in a pile on a table or counter or shelf, placed flat one on the other.

To illustrate books standing upright on a shelf.

Our view is that a title should be printed to read along the back of a book or magazine from the top down because when placed face up, singly or in a pile, on a table or counter or shelf, the title is in the position shown in Fig. A, viz., the CORRECT POSITION for reading it. Very often a cloth-bound book has no title on the front lid, so it is doubly important to have it as in A.

If the title is printed as in B to read from the bottom upwards then the title is always UPSIDE DOWN when the book or magazine is lying on a table or counter or shelf, either singly or in a pile.

When standing in a row of books on a shelf, as in C, it is not so material whether the title is upside down or downside up. It is a question of the relative position of yourself and the book. If you want to find a book in a shelf of books you usually begin with the first book, the one on the extreme left, and run the eye along the books from left to right? Obviously the correct position walking from left to right is that the title should read from the top down, as in 2 and 4 of Fig. C. Having come to the end of the shelf, if there is more than one you can read the titles placed upside down as in Nos. 1 and 3 more easily as you walk from right to left along the front of the bookcase; but we think the safest plan, to be sure not to overlook the book you want, is to look at each in its proper sequence, and as numbered, and we have never yet seen books on a shelf numbered otherwise than from left to right, whether the numbers show or not. If there are ten books in a row, and four rows in shelves, one over another, then, for instance, the first book in Row 3 must be No. 21—it would be the proper position, for instance, of Vol. 21 in a 40 vol. edition of Scott. Therefore, although, as we admit, not so material as in the case of A over B, the advantage of printing the title to read from the top down is greater even in the case of C than if it is printed to read from the bottom up.

 We would direct the attention of our readers to the letter from Mr. Arthur J. Hawkes, Librarian of the National Library of Wales, and beg them after carefully considering this really important question to see if they agree with his argument in favour of printing the titles from the bottom up on the backs of books, or with those we have for so many years advocated and have attempted to illustrate with diagrams on this page. Of course, if the back of a book is wide enough we prefer the title put on in perpendicularly as in all 6s. novels and in the majority of books. The question refers only to narrow cloth, or leather, or paper-bound books, and magazines and pamphlets, of which MANY MILLIONS ARE PRODUCED ANNUALLY AND IN ALL COUNTRIES. It will be seen it is an important question.

An English edition of Stendhal's "De l'Amour"

MESSRS. DUCKWORTH & Co. have just published an English translation of a famous book, i.e., Stendhal's "On Love." Stendhal—whose real name was Henry Beyle—was born in 1783 in France, at Grenoble, the place whence come, in little, long, narrow sacks, the finest walnuts in the cleanest of shells, the nuttiest and best-flavoured that come into our market. Over the walnuts and the wine—if you can afford wine in these pinching war times—is the time to read Stendhal's curious anatomy of love. This claims to be the first complete translation of the work in English; it is very well done by Philip Sidney Woolf and Cecil N. Sidney Woolf, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, who have added an interesting introduction and useful notes. A good index would have been most welcome. It is a pity that Stendhal, who studied "Love" from every point of view, ancient and modern, did not know of that magnificent example of married love which is recorded in the "Laudatio Turiae," first discovered and published by Mommsen in 1863. If all the circumstances are considered it seems to us to be the noblest example of a woman's love and unselfish devotion to a man in all the world's history, and to prove that Roman life cannot fairly be judged by the way Tibullus, Ovid or Propertius painted love, or even Juvenal. From her literature the world has got an idea that sexual immorality is the rule in France, whereas the great majority of the French nation are as moral as any other—this war has proved it. Stendhal has things complimentary and uncomplimentary to say about the England he knew a century ago. We wanted to quote his almost grudging compliment to the beauty of a bevy of young English women he saw at some entertainment, but, alas! there is no index and a ten minutes search has been fruitless. However, somewhere he tells us he was so blinded by their perfect beauty that he hardly dared to look at them; not even in Italy, he says, had he seen such perfection. This was a compliment to be proud of, because this Frenchman, one of Napoleon's officers, had made a life study of the women of Germany, Italy, Spain, and his own country, and written the best analysis of Love, in all its ramifications, in any language. Stendhal looked on men and women as equals—as equal halves and whole only when living one life together.

"The Koran" at the Front

A GLASGOW EDITION WELCOMED BY OUR MOSLEM TROOPS.

HAVING been attracted by a brief review in a London paper of the miniature edition of "The Koran," published by Messrs. David Bryce & Son, Glasgow, Mr. Alfred Ezra, of 10, Mount Street, London, recently bought 3,000 copies of the little book, and had them distributed among Mohammedan soldiers in the British Armies. The reception given to the gift is described by Mr. Ezra in the following interesting letter to Messrs. Bryce:—

October 16th, 1915,

DEAR SIRS,—You will be pleased to hear that the mite "Korans" have been a huge success with our Mohammedan soldiers, and nothing I have given the men has been appreciated half so much as these exquisite little books. On receiving one, the man will stand up, put the book over his head and touch each eye with it, and then kiss the book with reverence. They nearly all wear them round their necks, and say that this protects them from all harm. I am sure it must be most gratifying to you to hear that your books have been so much appreciated.—Yours faithfully,

ALFRED EZRA.

Copies of the miniature edition of the "Gita," produced by the same firm, have been distributed by Mr. Ezra among our Hindu soldiers, who have received it with equal gratitude.

It may be recalled that a few years ago a copy of the Glasgow "Koran" was brought home from Mecca by a Central African pilgrim, and was purchased by a British official in a town in Northern Nigeria.

Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son's November issue of their list of second-hand books contains, in addition to some thousands of titles of modern novels, no less than 1,212 titles of miscellaneous books. It should be useful to booksellers, librarians and book collectors.

The Position of the Letters in a Title along the Back of a Book, &c.

DEAR SIR,—Having seen during the last few years constant reiteration of your view that a book lettered perpendicularly along the back should be lettered from the top downwards, covered by the assertion that this is the correct method of perpendicular labelling, from the bookseller's point of view, it seems desirable to put the librarian's view before you.

Your contention that when a number of such books are put on a shelf in a pile the right way up, the lettering on the back would be upside down if run from bottom upwards, seems a trifle thin, inasmuch as this is the wrong way to put books on a shelf. This method of shelving may be of convenience to the booksellers, but surely the ultimate destination of a book is the library, private or public, and to me as a librarian the system is anathema.

Books in libraries (and the majority of those in booksellers' shops) are usually shelved erect on their lower edges, so that if a book is perpendicularly labelled from the top downwards the same gymnastic process described by you, Mr. Editor—that is of climbing a ladder and standing on one's head—is necessary in order to read the title if the book is shelved anywhere higher than the chin. On the contrary, a book labelled from the bottom upwards can be read quite easily whether it is on a floor shelf or on one twelve feet high (presuming good light) by taking a side view from the right—the natural and habitual method.

After many years of experience as a librarian I have, therefore, no hesitation in asserting that perpendicular lettering from the bottom upwards is the correct way of labelling thin books.

It is a pleasure to find that some publishers still consider the ultimate destination of a book as of more importance than the temporary convenience of the bookseller. To meet the requirements of the bookseller in regard to cloth-bound books it is only necessary for the usual temporary paper wrapper to be labelled in the manner you demand. Of course, cheap paper publications, such as sixpenny novels, do not matter, as when such books are worthy of preservation they will generally be rebound by the owners.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

ARTHUR J. HAWKES.

The National Library of Wales,
Aberystwyth

[The ultimate destination of a book may be some library, public or private, but, after all, and before all, books are intended to be used. On another page we have endeavoured to show that there are more and stronger reasons for printing a title as we say it should be printed than in the upside down way (on books, &c., too narrow to have it in the usual perpendicular way) even from the librarian's point of view. We think the expression "perpendicular lettering" used by Mr. Hawkes may be a little misleading, as the position of the letters is horizontal simply because there is not space to print them in the ordinary perpendicular way. We do occasionally see a title printed perpendicularly on the back of a thin book one letter over the next one, thus :—

|---|---------------|----------------|------|
| A | ADAM | as we think it | ADAM |
| D | instead of | | |
| M | should be, or | | |

as Mr. Hawkes wants it. Mr. Hawkes makes a statement which may be all right in theory, but which does not work in practice: he says the proper way to look for a book on a shelf is to "take a side view from the right—the natural and habitual method." As we have endeavoured to show elsewhere, it is not so very material whether the title is printed from top down or from bottom of the back upwards when the book is on a shelf—as in golf, it depends on your approach. We do not know how big the book shelves are in the National Library of Wales, but we presume they are pretty big, and no mortal could stand directly facing every book at the same time, hence it follows that he must approach from right or left and that depends on the position of the door he enters by. Suppose Mr. Hawkes mounts a ladder in the middle of a great set of shelves, he has thousands of books to the right of him and thousands to the left, he can as easily read those titles printed from the top down as he can those printed from the bottom up; in one case he turns his head to the books to the right of him, in the other to the left. But is it axiomatic among librarians always to "take a side view from the right"? It seems a very one-sided view to take, if Mr. Hawkes will pardon the suggestion.—ED. P.C.]

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular (Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable 'Book-Auction Records.'" How Mr. Karlake can give such a valuable book for 21/- we do not know. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection. KARSLAKE & CO., 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, London, N.W.

Queer Tales of "Editions"

Eight "Editions" out of 500 Copies

ANYTHING which is prejudicial to the reputation of publishers deserves attention, and for this reason we reprint a letter signed "Bookman" which appeared in The Times Literary Supplement on December 2nd, 1915. We need not remind our readers that some years ago the Publishers' Association issued as a suggestion to its members rules for the use of the word "edition," and for the use of the word "impression." We know that there is in the case of many publishers a strong feeling against giving the public, and competitors, exact details as to the number of copies sold, and for obvious reasons. What are we to think of the story told to "Bookman" by a publisher's manager? If it is true it is very discreditable both to the publisher and to his manager as well as to the author; if it is not true—and we take the liberty to say it does not carry conviction on the face of it—then it is to be regretted that such a reflection on publishing should be given out to the world.

"Bookman" writes to the Editor of The Times Literary Supplement thus:—

"TO THE EDITOR OF The Times."

"SIR,—An incidental reference in your current edition to the astonishing number of 'editions' of a pre-war book reminds one of the ambiguous use, on the increase in recent years, of the term 'edition.' Frequently the word is used for 'reprint,' a new 'edition' really being applicable only when material alteration or addition has been made to the text. But a second printing is often described as a 'second edition' when not even a printer's error has been corrected. It is very unlikely, when a book is said to have reached its twentieth 'edition' (sic), that twenty editions of that book do exist.

"The term 'reprint' is the more correct description in most cases, but, while it may impress the public, the use of even this more exact description is neither reliable nor informing. Publishers of experience and repute like Messrs. Methuen and Mr. John Lane, recognising this, have taken us into their confidence with the now familiar 'first thousand,' 'ninth thousand,' 'fiftieth thousand,' &c., a practice that should be universal if readers are to be told anything at all about the sale of books. A propos of the vague use of the term 'edition,' a young publishing firm made a dazzling showing of third and fifth and higher editions a few years back. Their last edition was published some time ago, so there is no harm in quoting the manager, who said, when asked how it was done, 'Well, you see, we follow the example of the evening papers' (it was before the more definite 'noon' and '6.30' labels), 'and begin with a third and jump to a fifth edition. And to satisfy a vain author we have made eight "editions" out of a first printing of 500 copies. We had a first edition all right—a first edition is more essential to a book than to an evening paper—but after the first 150 we called each succeeding fifty an "edition," stopping the machines to add the suitable legend. It really did amount to eight printings, if you prefer that term to "edition"!'"

It is the fact that this is published in The Times that gives it importance.

Jonathan to John Bull

THE following extract is from a letter just received by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin from Major G. H. Putnam, the American publisher, and champion of copyright and all that is right:—

"NEW YORK,

"November 24th, 1915.

"I am very busy this autumn, in addition to the work in my publishing office, in giving lectures explaining to the public that England and her Allies are fighting in behalf of civilisation and in behalf of the interests of the United States. I am also doing work in the National Security League for the purpose of arousing the opinion of the country in regard to our own national defences. The safety of the United States depends upon the success of the English Fleet, and while we can depend upon this Fleet, we ought to be ready to do our part and to contribute our share in such defence.

"GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM."

Ever since war broke out Major Putnam has taken this strong line, and we in this country are not in a position to realise what it means for an American, educated in Germany, with life-long friendships and business relations there and with Germans in America, to take this bold stand, and many other American publishers and journalists have done the same. It was for this reason that we said we were glad that a matter which threatened to interfere with the smooth and friendly relations between British and American publishers had been dropped. As we are informed by the President of the Publishers' Association that nothing in the nature of a boycott or unfriendliness was intended, we regret, by having used the word boycott, to have appeared to endorse the view that the Americans took when they used it. The fact is, the word has come to cover almost anything in the nature of protection, active or passive, as well as more serious actions.

Notes and Announcements

It was hoped by Mr. Murray to publish this year's "Navy League Annual" on or about Trafalgar Day, but owing to unforeseen difficulties in the preparation of particulars of enemy navies, the publication of the volume has had to be postponed. Every effort is being made to issue it shortly, and it is hoped that it may be in readers' hands well before Christmas. Its contents will naturally be of very particular interest in this year of War.

A very interesting number is the American "Christmas Bookshelf," the Christmas No. of the Publishers' Weekly, which is to hand. It is fully illustrated, and contains many publishers' advertisements and notices of books.

Mr. Murray is issuing at once a practical manual on "Field Gunnery," which has been prepared by Lieut. Donald A. Macalister, of the R.G.A. As the author says, in his preface, "the pith of the whole art of field gunnery is the application of common sense controlled by regulations laid down in Field Training Manuals." This book should prove most useful.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. already announce a second edition of "Between the Lines" (in Flanders), by Boyd Cable; and a second edition of "The Recollections of a Bishop," by the Rt. Rev. G. F. Browne, D.D.

Mr. Pelham Webb has written a new volume of verse entitled "Wandering Fires," which he intended to publish personally, but owing to military service the book will be issued immediately by Mr. Frank Hollings of 7, Great Turnstile, Holborn.

The Open Court Company, of 149, Strand, have now ready "A Budget of Paradoxes," by Augustus De Morgan, revised and edited, with full Bibliographical Notes and Index, by David Eugene Smith, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York.

Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd., have in preparation a new edition (the eighth) of "Scouting for Boys," and hope to publish it early in the New Year. The work is being thoroughly revised by the author and entirely reset. Booksellers having copies of the seventh edition which they wish exchanged for the new edition, should return them to the publishers at once, as they cannot be taken back after the eighth edition is ready.

Messrs. Wm. Glisher, Ltd., of 265, High Holborn, have brought out for Christmas a new catalogue of publishers' remainders, &c., at greatly reduced prices—all new remainder stocks.

No. 1801 of The World's "Celebrities at Home" is an interesting account of Mr. Stanley Paul, the publisher, with a good portrait.

Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co. have sent us their 60 page small quarto "Guide to the Choice of Books for Christmas, 1915." A well-illustrated and in every way attractive guide to the best books of the season.

The fine "Official Christmas Catalogue" of the Publishers' Association has been out of print for some time.

"Because of Phoebe," by Kate Horn, and Mr. Archibald Marshall's new novel "Upsidonia," will be published immediately by Stanley Paul & Co.

The La Belle Sauvage management take pride in speaking of their quartette of excellent magazines as the "Cassell Family."

In aid of our splendid Indian soldiers, East and West, Ltd., of 3, Victoria Street, S.W., have just published, at 3s. 6d. net, "Quatrains of Omar Khayyam," being line-upon-line renderings in verse from the original Persian, by John Pollen, C.I.E., LL.D.; with a foreword by His Highness the Aga Kahn, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E.

Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are just publishing "A Modern Columbus: His Voyages, His Travels, His Discoveries," by R. G. Knowles. "The wonderful photographs taken by the author add to the charm of the book; it is full of stories, not 'chestnuts.'"

"Sylvia's Marriage," by Upton Sinclair, has gone through two large editions. A popular edition, at 2s. net, will be published by T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., next week.

Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are just publishing "Billiards for Amateurs," by Charles Roberts ("Vivid"), the world-famous player.

Business in Canada is improving all round—so we gather from statements in the Canadian Bookseller and Stationer.

Under the general title "Makers of the Nineteenth Century," Mr. Basil Williams is editing what promises to be a valuable new series of books for Messrs. Constable. If they are all as interesting as the first volume, the series will be a great success; it is an account of "Delane of the Times," by Sir Edward Cook. There is a fine portrait of Delane in mutton chop whiskers. It seems curious to think of Mr. Tonans, as George Meredith called him, in such a hair fashion; but the Ministry in the Crimean War time might have been called the mutton chop Ministry—at least, all its chief members wore them—Palmerston, Gladstone, Granville, Lansdowne, Aberdeen, Grey, and Newcastle. Those were the days when our army in the Crimea wore full beards, and found them most useful in the bitter trench warfare. When future generations want to see the British fashions in hair and dress of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, they need only to turn up the pages of Mr. Punch—a greater potentate than even the greatest of editors, Mr. Tonans, was.

Talking of hair, have you seen the Christmas Number of The Passing Show? It is uncommonly good. No wonder, when among the artists are Bart Kennedy G. S. Studdy, E. T. Reed and Dudley Hardy.

We have read with the greatest interest a wonderful account of Philippe Egalité, by Alexandre Dumas, entitled "The Last King; or, The New France: being a History from the Birth of Louis Philippe in 1773 to the Revolution of 1848." Mr. R. S. Garnett, in his admirable translation in these two fully illustrated demy 8vo. volumes, just published by Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co., tells us that it has never previously been translated, and that the last French edition, issued only in expensive form, was published in 1853. It is a vivid picture of the two great French Revolutions and the momentous times between them. Every character of the great drama comes on the scene, and many—including Egalité himself—are done from life with all Dumas' genius for character painting.

IRONY OF A PROPHECY BY DUMAS.

On page 177 of Vol. 2, after referring to the passing of the French railways law in the 1839-1842 Parliament, Dumas has this unfortunate prophecy: "Let the network of railways, which must, some day, run across Europe, be established; let people go in three days from one capital to another; let thirty years of material and moral communication bring men into contact and cause an interchange of ideas, and European War will no longer be possible." With the German Army dashing itself to and fro hopelessly over its railways, like a raging sea against the bulwarks of the Allies, this prophecy of Dumas reminds one of Mr. Norman Angell's great delusion—as we called it when it appeared—that War was impossible because money is king.

Not to be missed is "The Russian Garland: a Book of Fairy Tales for Children," just published, at 3s. 6d. net, by Messrs. McBride, Nast & Co., Ltd., Rolls House, Bream's Buildings, with some quaint illustrations in colour. A much more important book, published by the same firm, is "Folk Tales as Told by the Peasants of Great Russia to Helen D. Polenov, and illustrated by her." It is a very limited edition, at £2 2s., illustrated in colour. Booksellers will do well to send for a prospectus. Russia is at the front in arms, and is coming to the front in art. Soon she will join the Berne Convention.

More power to the elbow of Mr. Matz, who in The Dickensian for December is pouring the vials of his righteous indignation on the Library Committee of the Wandsworth Borough Council. Why? Why, because they have "placed a ban on the circulation of all works of fiction to adults or juveniles during the War!" As Mr. Matz says: "How Dickens would have lashed this circumlocutional use of red tape officialism!" Probably nothing would affect these illiterary gents so much as being called "circumlocutional"—not even being put under the Wandsworth parish pump, or ducked in the disgraceful Wandle, which would make a decent sewer blush. If you like Dickens, you ought to read "The Dickensian." There is always something new—or true—about him in it.

"Life in a Railway Factory," by Alfred Williams, the Wiltshire Poet (Duckworth & Co.), is important, for in it an educated man who knows, or says he knows, becomes the mouthpiece of democracy. It is a protest against that English ladies might learn a lesson. "No English woman of your class could have or would have done for us what you have done this morning. Why, in England the common soldier is the dirt under the feet of women like you." It is a statement absolutely unfounded.

Ways of Helping the National Book Fortnight

JUDGING from information received from many sources the Book Fortnight inaugurated by the Publishers' Association bids fair to prove a successful venture and an admirable stimulant to the Christmas book trade. Many excellent ways of making this additionally successful have been adopted by the trade in the endeavour to carry out the suggestion an artist whose bold and effective treatment of fairy tale subjects is so well known.

Booksellers will do well, even in the two weeks left them before the Christmas season closes, to carry out by some similar window or counter display the idea we illustrate, and bring well to the front all the best in British picture books of British manufacture by British artists for British children.

Book Auction Sale

Books, Autograph Letters and Drawings

MESSRS. SOTHEY'S sale on Friday, December 3rd, included the property of the late Mr. James Fernandez, Mrs. Bernard Beere, Mr. Joseph Swain, and Sir John Tenniel. The most important the alleged tyranny the Great Western Railway Company exercise over their great staff in their Swindon factory. The G.W.R. is called "the most formidable despot living." It was written before the War, and it is a pity it was not kept back until after it.

We are glad to see that the war experiences of an American lady, Mildred Aldrich, have been republished in book form (Constable), under the title of "A Hilltop on the Marne." We called attention to it when it appeared in The Atlantic Monthly. It is charmingly written, and the reader will feel thankful to the author for her kindness to our men; but she should not have believed or printed that libel on our women, told her by some disgruntled soldier. He told this gentle and brave American lady he wished England had her fields devastated, her homes destroyed, so made by the Association to encourage special displays of groups of the most "appealing" volumes, and we have pleasure in illustrating one of the most attractive of these. This picture, illustrating a special counter display by Messrs. Frederick Warne & Co., of a selection of their publications, certainly exhibits a very "appealing" variety of children's picture books introducing a strong array of British talent combined with the best of British productions. We recognise several old friends in this collection: Kate Greenaway, Randolph Caldecott, Walter Crane and Edward Lear, modern artists being represented by Beatrix Potter, beloved of all children as the creator of immortal "Peter Rabbit" and his numerous delightful successors, L. Leslie Brooke, whose inimitable caricatures of familiar animals have caused shrieks of merriment in hundreds of nurseries, also H. M. Brock, lots were:—Oscar Wilde, A Woman of no Importance, presentation copy to Mrs. Bernard Beere, £15; letter to her from the U.S.A., £11 15s.; another, from Dieppe, written shortly after his release from prison, £10 15s.; another written about the same time, £10 15s.; two pencil drawings by Thackeray for "Lovel the Widower," and "The Roundabout Papers"—"Tunbridge Toys," £25; two pencil sketches of Coire, for the Roundabout Paper "On a Lazy, Idle Boy," £10; pencil drawing entitled "Our Fat Contributor," and another for Ch. 8 of Philip, £20; eleven pencil drawings for initial letters or chapter headings, mostly in "Philip," "Lovel the Widower," and "The Virginians," £75; seven similar drawings, including a full page illustration for Ch. 4 of "Philip," £63; eleven similar drawings, £99; complete set of Punch, 145 vols, 1841-1913, £12.

"Who built the Panama Canal?"

"WHO BUILT THE PANAMA CANAL?" is one of those challenging titles, like "Who Killed Cock Robin?" which make you expect that the writer is the "villain of the piece," or at any rate one of them. And so the writer of this best history of the Canal which has so far appeared turns out to be one of its builders—Mr. W. Leon Pepperman, "Chief of the Office of Administration of the Second Isthmian Commission" (some title!). We are particularly glad to see this modest and competent administrator is very fair and generous in his acknowledgments of the immense importance of the work done by that grand French genius—Lesseps. This American official, who writes from long personal experience on the spot, writes down as baseless fables those stories of the French having abandoned "locomotives in the jungle, and long rows of abandoned locomotives and other machinery elsewhere." President Roosevelt—the man who signed the order to make the Canal and asked his nation's permission afterwards—Roosevelt, in his thorough style, appointed a commission to report to him on this old French machinery. "They found that the French did not leave locomotives in the jungle." Much of the French machinery, although thirty years old, is still in constant use. The stories of the Americans having had to scrap or make "junk" of all the French locomotives, &c., not buried in the jungle are ridiculed by Mr. Pepperman; he says that the French material which was not worn out in use "became" junk "only after the Americans had stripped it of all the movable parts—and even then the residue was sold by the Americans for over a quarter of a million dollars!" So much for a story which we have related and heard related at clubs and dinner parties and in the smoking room for ten years or more. More wonderful than the building of the Canal was the banishment of yellow fever and other diseases by the Americans. This standard work on the Canal is published by Messrs. Dent; it contains a score of illustrations reduced from Mr. Joseph Pennell's large etchings—which do not bear reduction at all well, as a rule.

The Boy Scouts' Year Book

MESSRS. D. APPLETON & Co., as the official publishers for the Boy Scouts of America, have sent us a copy of this handsomely bound volume. Edited by Walter P. McGuire, editor of the Boy Scouts' magazine, Boys' Life, and Franklin K. Mathiews, Chief Scout Librarian, it is dedicated to the eight million boys of Scout age in the United States. The list of contributors is a strong one, and includes Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, Admiral Peary, Sir Douglas Mawson, Orville Wright, and Paul J. Rainey. The contents comprise interesting and informative messages and articles on scout craft, games, short stories and nature talks. Many excellent illustrations accompany the text, and the book will certainly further the aim of the promoters of the Scout movement in America to provide attractive and beneficial reading matter for boys. We give an illustration of the book's coloured wrapper.

Letters to the Editor

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.

Illness of

Mr. Andrew Iredale

DEAR SIR,—I think that perhaps it will be of some interest to the members of the bookselling trade to know that my father, Mr. Andrew Iredale, underwent a serious operation early on Sunday morning last.

I had to have him hurriedly taken to a nursing home where the operation was carried out, and at the time of writing I am glad to say he is making satisfactory progress.—Yours faithfully,

GEO. H. IREDALE.

13, The Strand, Torquay,

December 1st.

[All his many friends in the trade will wish Mr. Andrew Iredale a good recovery. It was way back in the Mid-Victorian era that we first made his acquaintance at charming Torquay—now entirely altered since those days by the new harbour, &c.—Ed.]

Epitomized Opinions, mostly against our view

"I AM rather taken aback by the spirited defence my letter on 'vertical labelling' has provoked from you, and my surprise did not diminish on finding myself described as 'The Librarian of the National Library of Wales.' Fortunately, most of your readers likely to be interested in the matter of the letter will be familiar with the name of Mr. John Ballinger (who, by the way, endorses my view). I do not propose to comment further on the dispute other than to remark that from my earliest experiences as a junior in library work I have always felt annoyed and exasperated on running up against a book (on the shelf) lettered from the top downwards; nor have I ever met a librarian who did not unhesitatingly accept the view that the lettering should be from the bottom upwards.

"The point as to which is the more convenient and natural use of the term 'vertical lettering' and concomitantly of 'horizontal lettering' I willingly leave to your readers.—Yours faithfully,

"ARTHUR J. HAWKES.

"National Library of Wales."

"I think that most librarians and users of libraries will entirely agree with Mr. Hawkes that the 'natural and habitual method' of reading the titles of which, on account of their size or bulk, it is really necessary to lay flat, in which case no one can dispute that the first-named system of lettering is the better.

"Uniformity as regards lettering of books does not appear to exist among publishers. I even notice many high-class periodicals, which are usually laid flat on shelves until bound, are so lettered that the titles are upside down when in that position! I agree with you that it would be advantageous if there were one universal rule among both publishers and binders, and I favour, as best for application, the top to bottom style.

"F. W. T. LANGE.

"St. Bride Foundation Libraries."

Mr. Archibald Sparke, F.R.S.L., F.L.A., Chief Librarian of the Bolton Public Libraries, writes:—

"Mr. A. J. Hawkes is not the Librarian of the National Library of Wales. That honour still belongs to Mr. John Ballinger, M.A., who was for so many years the Chief of the Cardiff Public Libraries. I cannot agree with you that the correct way to letter thin books is from the top downwards, and I do not think you will find a librarian to do so. (I do not know any editors). I trust it is now the established rule to letter books from the bottom upwards, and long may it continue. Looking around my own libraries of over 120,000 volumes I find very few books lettered as your 'English Catalogue of Books' was in 1904. I could give you the titles of hundreds of books lettered from the bottom to the top, whereas I do not think you could give me many dozen titles, except American publications, lettered as you 'have for years advocated they should be.' I, for one, sincerely trust that publishers will continue to letter their publications from the bottom upwards. My assistants are unanimous in thinking as I do, that the natural and habitual way to read an elongated title is by a slight, almost unconscious movement of the left side of the head, and, to read a title top-downwards makes it a conscious and top-sided movement of the right side of the head."

A reviewer of books writes:—"I am interested in the problem of titles on thin books and my vote would be for Mr. Hawkes' method, because it appears to be the more common. I have just been through my own book-shelf of technical works. There are 307 volumes, of which 79 are without title at all on the back. The rest of the thin ones with titles down the back run thus:—

books labelled longitudinally on the back is 'by taking a side view from the right,' and that such books should therefore be labelled, as has hitherto been the general custom, from the bottom upwards. The very appearance of books labelled in the reverse direction seems unnatural and an eyesore. I would suggest that the 'naturalness' of the side view from the right is probably connected with right-handedness, the right hand being more easily used if the body is inclined to the left.

"In my opinion (and it is a matter of convenience) it is just as easy to read the titles on the backs of books when printed lengthways from top to bottom as the other way about. It makes little difference so long as volumes are kept standing upright on library shelves. There are, however, many books, such as atlases, &c.,

"Down for paper, up for cloth," Mr. J. Naylor, formerly Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's manager, says.

"It is to be hoped that this discussion will induce practical reform on the part of publishers. Opinions will doubtless continue to vary on the merits of the alternatives, but at least we might have uniformity throughout the whole range of thin-backed publications.

"P.S.—The distinction raised between librarian and bookseller appears, in this connection, to be merely one of degree. Both are intermediary between publisher and reader; and the bookseller is often a librarian too. The latter may regard his books as old friends; the former prefers short acquaintances, and many of them.—S.H."

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—I am sorry to see your persistent methods to bring chaos into the style of lettering books along the back. On looking through my stock I find that Macmillan, Longmans, Bell, Dent, George Allen, Cambridge Press, and many others, all letter books along the back from the bottom to the top. I believe this method to have been universal up to within twenty years ago, and very few publishers do it the reverse way even now. It does not much matter which way it is done so long as everyone does the same, but to examine a library of thin books in which the letterings run first one way then the other, is terribly confusing. In sorting up a few dozen 6d. novels face upwards it is very disconcerting to find, when you turn them on their sides, that you have got them some one way, some another. Fortunately the 6d. novels are nearly dead now. It is a matter which the Publishers' Association might well discuss and issue their decision upon.—Yours faithfully,

ALFRED WILSON.

Isbister and Strahan

DEAR SIR,—Can any of your readers answer the following queries?

1. What was the exact date that Messrs. Isbister took over the business of Messrs. Strahan? It was between 1872 and 1874, but I want the exact date for bibliographical purposes.

2. On the verso of the title-pages of Moxon's "Miniature Poets" is a shield with a monogram, which might be J.B.P. or J.P.B. Who was it?

MESSRS. ALSTON RIVERS write:—"We should be obliged if you would allow us to inform the trade that by arrangement with Mrs. Armel O'Connor, all trade orders for her book "Sweet Scented Leaves," will, in future, be supplied by us. This work was published privately by the author, but owing to the increasing demand for same, Mrs. O'Connor has seen fit to place the work in our hands, we having had the pleasure of publishing her other works, viz., "Mary's Meadow Papers" and "The Idea of Mary's Meadow." The price of "Sweet Scented Leaves" is 5s. net."

Messrs. A. & C. Black's "Who's Who"

MESSRS. A. & C. BLACK ask us to announce that all their Year Books for 1916—including "Who's Who"—will be published on Wednesday the 15th.

From Messrs. Blackie & Sons, Ltd.—

Many new well bound, well illustrated, and most interesting stories of school and adventure for boys and girls. "The Dampier Boys," a school story by E. M. Green, illustrated by Harold Copping. The Dampier boys attend a private school kept by a Dr. Lester. It is a small school, but has an excellent "tone." The characters in the story are very sympathetically handled, and home life as well as school life comes into the author's scheme. "Conquests of the Sea," by Cyril Hall, illustrated by thirty-two photographs. The advent of steam navigation, fishing and fishermen, yacht adventures, the submarine cable, safety at sea, pirates and buccaneers, are some of the departments of this romantic story. "The Jolliest Term on Record," by Angela Brazil, illustrated by Balliol Salmon. A story of school life. The school is "Aireyholme," delightfully situated in a country which suggests Elizabethan England. Miss Brazil is as clever in bringing the breath of the country across her pages as she is in drawing real, live school-girls. "Joyce Harrington's Trust," by Bessie Marchant. The daughter of an Argentine fruit-grower, Joyce Harrington becomes involved in a series of bewildering mysteries in which her character and ability are put to severe tests. Older girls should find the story of unflagging interest. "When Auntie Lil Took Charge," a capital story for children by May Wynne, and illustrated by A. A. Dixon. "Those Mysterious Children," by Dorothy Russell, and illustrated in colour by Honor C. Appleton. There is great excitement among the children of a house in Chisholme Square when they discover that the house opposite, which has been empty so long, is again occupied. To their dismay, however, the new children are not allowed to play with them. But they manage to "find a way," and very soon the children of the two families are engaged in stirring adventures in a delightful village by the sea. The mystery about the new children is not cleared up till the end. "Molly Angel's Adventures," by Bessie Marchant, and illustrated by P. B. Hicking. Molly Angel and two young friends are in Belgium when war separates them from their parents. The children occupy an empty house, and have many thrilling adventures while the Germans are in possession of Courtrai. "Animal Stories," by Ellen Velvin and N. Fielding. These stories from ice-field, plain, and jungle will be a source of delight to the children who love animals, and are splendidly illustrated. "Blackie's Children's Annual."—It contains as usual bright and amusing stories, verses by well-known authors and is profusely illustrated by popular artists, the index, title page and end covers being artistically decorated.

From Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons.—"The Watcher by the Threshold, and other Tales," by John Buchan. A shilling edition of the well-known "Travellers' Tales"—a notable addition to the capital shilling series of Messrs. W. Blackwood & Sons.

From Messrs. Bloud & Gay, Paris.—"The German War and Catholicism," published under the direction of Mgr. Alfred Baudrillart. Included in this volume are a letter from Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, articles on "German Culture and Catholicism," "The Catholic Role of France in the World," and "Religion in the French Army," a number of pontifical and episcopal documents relative to the War, and the answer of the Catholic Institute to the manifesto of the representatives of German science and art. A book of absorbing interest to Roman Catholics ends with a list of ecclesiastics and religious killed in war.

From the Cambridge University Press.—"Poetry and National Character," by W. Macnaile Dixon. This booklet is a reprint of the Leslie Stephen Lecture delivered at Cambridge in May by Professor Dixon. The lecture is well worth preserving, not only on account of its undoubted literary value, but also on account of a breadth of outlook and a touch of sane humour not always looked for in University lectures.

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—"The Golden Scarecrow," by Hugh Walpole, with frontispiece by Noël Harrold. Here we have nine separate short character sketches of boys and girls of various ages, rather lonely, imaginative little ones, who were in some way different from the normal healthy child through physical defect or other cause, and therefore were rather inclined to rely on their own dreams and fancies for companionship. Each child discovers the same unseen friend—unseen, that is, to all except themselves. On occasions this causes their elders some uneasiness, but as the child grows older this friend is rarely seen.

From the Same.—"Is God Dead?" by Newman Flower. Justin Siddeley is, at the opening of the book, an argumentative atheist. His son is reported "killed in action," and in his excessive grief he falls into a trance. Freed from the body, his spirit investigates London, and by viewing six episodes, which take the form in the book of short stories, is constrained to accept the creed of a loving Deity. The book is emphatic, and, though crude in its method of pointing a moral, is thoroughly sincere.

From Messrs. William Clowes & Sons, Ltd.—"Thrift for Troubled Times." Compiled by the staff of the National Training School of Cookery during the Great War, 1915. A great deal of domestic information is packed within the covers of this slim booklet. How to make household utensils out of odds and ends—of course, how to make a fireless cooker—how to effect economies of cleaning materials and of clothing, all these points are carefully detailed and many cheap and original recipes are added.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—"The Cloister," by Emile Verhaeren. Translated by Osman Edwards. Verhaeren's beautiful play has received adequate translation at the hands of Mr. Osman Edwards. First produced in England at Manchester and followed up in London during the early part of this year, the play is now due to be performed as the attraction of an extensive provincial tour. The added popularity thus gained should make the present publication eagerly sought after.

From the Same.—"Songs for Little People," by Norman Gale. Illustrated by Helen Stratton. Mr. Gale has intended his verses for children to occupy a position between the well-known and babyish nursery rhymes and Robert Louis Stevenson's exquisite "Child's Garden." His work unavoidably brings upon itself comparison with Stevenson's and, of course, suffers greatly by such comparison. Nevertheless, the verses in this volume are simple and spontaneous and will easily appeal to child readers. Miss Helen Stratton's decorative illustrations add great attraction to the book.

From Mr. Bryan Corcoran.—"Guide to St. Olave's, Hart Street," by Bryan Corcoran. Lovers of old London will welcome Mr. Corcoran's guide to St. Olave's. It lays bare the history of the church, points out its monuments, describes its charities, and is full of helpful illustration.

From the "Daily Mail."—"Daily Mail Bird's-eye Map of the British Front." A wonderfully clear map, giving the line of our front in Belgium and France in a distinct manner that enables the various villages and towns to be picked out with ease.

Messrs. Dean's Rag Book Co., Ltd., have sent a selection of the numerous additions they have made to their famous Rag Books. They are, as they have been from the very start, some twelve years ago, of entirely British manufacture. The colours and designs improve every year. The Fluff-down Series is produced on a cloth with a rich fluffy surface as soft as down, and has a warm, cosy feeling, just what the little ones like, as it can be squeezed and cuddled without damage. A book of special interest is "Old Nursery Rhymes," jappanned by the famous artist, Yoshio Markino, and a novelty which has been introduced this season is a small book, "The Lord's Prayer," beautifully illustrated by a new photogravure process. Others are "Mother Goose," "A to Z," "Daffy Down Dilly," "Beasties and Birdies." These books are all washable.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd.—"The Phonetic Section of 'First Steps in French,'" by Walter Rippmann. Designed to promote an accurate French pronunciation, Mr. Rippmann's little book admirably suits its purpose. It includes a sound chart, exercises for sound drill and a phonetic transcription of passages from "First Steps," the text-book in conjunction with which it is intended to be used.

From the Same.—"Earth-Lays," by Colin Tolly. Mr. Colin Tolly is fond of the natural sciences, and evidently possesses a degree of knowledge of his subjects. Unfortunately, however, he hardly ranks high as a poet, and the following lines give a fair idea of the quality of the verse contained in "Earth-Lays":

"The great World rolling on interminably
Of men and cities and lands and sun and stars

Seems like a dense Solution in a Bowl
And I a part-linked Molecule within."

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"Child Training," by V. M. Hillyer. Mr. Hillyer is the headmaster of a successful school and his study of schoolchildren has led him to evolve a method of training young children that should fit them to become admirable members of the school world later on, of life itself. He propounds ways of inculcating good habits and checking bad ones, formulates a course of observation teaching, insists on the inculcation of courteous manners, and outlines the first steps in reading and writing. Most of the teaching is to be conveyed in the form of pleasant manual tasks, which are described in detail, story-telling to perform its part, and simple, childlike songs are included. The book should prove invaluable to a young mother or nursery governess.

From the Same.—"The Foundations of Normal and Abnormal Psychology," by Boris Sidis, A.M., Ph.D., M.D. Dr. Sidis digs deep in his endeavour to lay bare the foundations of the science of psychology. The reader, following him, finds himself expected to keep clearly in mind a purely scientific view. Loose thinking and hasty deduction are not permitted even under the most tempting conditions. The early chapters are occupied by examining the scope and sources of psychology, arguing the differences between physical and psychical facts, in leading up to a discussion of various hypotheses, spiritualistic, materialistic and metaphysical. Part I having dealt with fundamental concepts and principles, Part II deals with "The Theory of the Moment Consciousness." The book is packed with ingenious reasoning and multitudinous instances.

From the Same.—"The Challenge of Christianity to a World at War," by E. Griffith-Jones, B.A., D.D. Many of the problems now disturbing thoughtful Christians as they view the warring nations are discussed in the eight chapters which are contained in Mr. Griffith-Jones' book. Providence, Christian Ethics, Patriotism, Reconstruction—these are his more important themes and they are treated with breadth of vision though the phraseology employed is not always suited to the lay mind. To talk of "God's causative activity in the cosmos" is hardly the way to enchain the attention of the average reader.

From the Same.—"Three Things," by Elinor Glyn. Mrs. Glyn's three things are Truth, Common Sense, and Happiness. On these three themes she has written seven articles, pinning her subjects to earth by discussing them in relation to the social position of women, marriage, divorce and motherhood. Her views on these subjects are well-known to her wide public and they are reiterated in her articles with much fervour and many verbal illustrations.

From the Same.—"The Holy Spirit in Thought and Experience," by T. Rees, M.A. (Lond.), B.A. (Oxon). Mr. Rees' contribution to the "Studies in Theology" series of Messrs. Duckworth sets a high standard both of research and synthetic deduction. The topic of the Holy Spirit is one of colossal interest to all but the atheistic-minded among us, but, curiously enough, it is a subject that has attracted little notice from the theologians. Mr. Rees traces the idea of a Holy Spirit from its first dawn in the human mind, and, collecting material from all available literary sources, presents a picture of its growth and expansion.

From the Same.—"Where Animals Talk," by Robert H. Nassau. Under this title are gathered a great number of Bantu folk-lore stories, all of them similar to the fable in form, but spiced with a magic that is reminiscent of Arabian tales. The tales have been handed down from one generation to another and are recited by the village story-tellers with embellishments bestowed by the inspiration of the moment, so that modern and ancient facts are jumbled together in an inconsequent and often highly amusing manner. Mr. Nassau is to be congratulated on his collection, which should both charm the general reader and be of service to the specialist in folk-lore.

From The Faith Press. "Hellenism in England," by Theodore E. Dowling, D.D., and Edwin W. Fletcher, F.S.A. Scot. With an Introduction by Johannes Gennadius, Litt.D., Greek Envoy to the Court of St. James's. This all-too-short book gives a brief history of the Greek colonies resident among our population from the days when the Phœnicians first traded with Cornwall until the present day. Chief attention is paid to the churches of the Greek Orthodox faith in this country, both in the history and the long introduction. There are several illustrations.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.—"Chatterbox."—This annual is always welcomed by the children; the stories by popular writers are interesting, and the numerous illustrations are a source of pleasure in themselves. "Sunday," and every-day reading for the young.—The contents of this volume are short and serial stories, poems, puzzles, pictures, &c. Edna Lake contributes a long serial story entitled "The Phantom Light." An interesting series of articles is supplied by A. A. Methley, F.R.G.S., called "Happy Homes in Foreign Lands," with over two hundred and fifty illustrations by Gordon Browne, H. Rountree, J. Ayton Symington, Stephen Reid, Dorothy Furniss, &c. "Leading Strings."—A book of pretty pictures, jolly stories, and verse for little children.

From Messrs. Grafton & Co.—"Books on the Great War," by F. W. T. Lange and W. T. Berry; preface by R. A. Peddie; Vol. 2. The bibliography of books on the present War compiled by Messrs. Lange and Berry now reaches its second volume. In a short preface, Mr. Peddie laments the necessity for a second volume and forecasts a third. Some important publications by the German Government are included in the lists.

From Messrs. H. Grevel & Co., London (New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons).—"Popular Stories of Ancient Egypt," by Sir G. Maspero, K.C.B., D.C.L., Oxon., late Director-General of the Service of Antiquities in Egypt, &c. Translated by Mrs. C. H. W. Johns from the fourth French edition. Anyone who thinks of selecting this book on account of its title in order to give it to some young person as a prize or present is advised to read it first, as the kind of stories which appear to have been "popular" with the ancient Egyptians, are of the kind not usually selected for recital at modern tea parties—though, as far as that goes, neither are some of the stories in the Bible, and yet they are popular; for as an American critic said of a play based on Biblical records, nobody would have gone to see it if it had not been for Mrs. Potiphar. And yet there is nothing in the Bible, or in these quaint, blunt and natural old Egyptian popular tales of the immoral character of some popular stories of our day, which are intended to appeal to all the lusts of the flesh. These stories have often an extraordinary resemblance to those of the old Testament, so much so that a common origin is more than indicated. Doubtless their chief interest and value lie not in their being stories so much as pictures of life in Egypt as much before the Christian era as we are after it. From some of the stories one gets the impression that the Egyptians did not take their gods and goddesses much more seriously than did the Greeks and Romans—except, of course, as aids to their own advancement, and to impress the ignorant.

From Messrs. Heath, Cranton & Ouseley, Ltd.—"Travels East of Suez," by Rachel Humphreys, F.R.G.S., author of "Algiers, the Sahara and the Nile." This handsome volume, with its numerous excellent illustrations, will interest all who want a bright account by a good observer of scenes and incidents in countries which they would like to visit, but which they can only visit in spirit. It is just a story, but not an ordinary one, of a visit to India, Burma, and Ceylon. Miss Humphreys as a descriptive writer is much ahead of the ordinary globe-trotter. The way the natives pick up English slang and apply it is shown in a little story related on page 53. A master who was away when his native servant's wife died expressed a hope that she did not suffer much. "No, Sahib," said the servant, "she sat up in bed, gave one big yell, and then mum's the word!" There are many amusing stories and notes of quaint information scattered through Miss Humphreys' bright pages. The Burmese men and women in youth so much resemble each other we are told that one of their kings ordained that the men should be tattooed from the waist to the knee, which gives the effect of a tight pair of trousers, to distinguish them from the ladies. A Buddhist wanted to enter the priesthood. Having failed in his examinations several times, he was remarked during the course of his last examination to be looking gravely down at his legs, and no wonder, since he had the answers to the questions tattooed on his calves! After all, he was only using his understandings to pass in his examinations.

From Mr. Wm. Heinemann.—"Old Delabole," by Eden Phillpotts. Charmingly dedicated to Mr. Thomas Hardy, this new and very entertaining novel by Mr. Eden Phillpotts, is a story, not of Devon, but of Cornwall. Old Delabole is a village near Camelford, in N.W. Cornwall, whose inhabitants are chiefly employed in the slate quarries which have been worked since Queen Elizabeth's time. The difficulty in reading such a story as this is to believe that the people who vegetate under the conditions described should be so clever. An amusing old character is Grandfather Nute—Cute would have better described him—who pays a call on behalf of the United Methodists, who are getting up a lunch in aid of their chapel. "Good morning, Betsy Bunt, and how are you faring?" he asked; then answered his own question: "Well, without a doubt. We Uniteds make our own good air, as I always say." "And very stuffy air 'tis sometimes," she said. "The odour of sanctity be a human odour, my dear," declared Grandfather, "where two or three are gathered together—" "The Uniteds don't take enough baths," declared Betsy. "There's a lot of things that come after godliness, but cleanliness ain't second—not in Delabole." "You're a masterpiece in that direction, as we all know," admitted Mr. Nute, "but it ain't given to everybody to have your great talent for it. Your brother Moses, for instance—a dirtier old man don't live, to say it kindly." "Dirty inside as well as out," declared the sister of Moses Bunt. "Surely to God you don't want for people to be like him?" "Far from it, yet a stout Methodist, full of good faith." "Full of beastly pride and conceit," said Betsy. The fact is the conversations are so clever and amusing, because the author puts his brain and voice into them—just as a clever ventriloquist makes the puppets on his knee keep the audience in a roar; they would only look at him in cold astonishment if he said the same things of his own accord, as it were. Betsy's brother is the cynic of the village—Paul Pry and Diogenes rolled into one. The wonderful bits of Cornish scenery and the amusing subordinate characters—especially Grandfather Nute—are all that Mr. Phillpotts' readers expect. He doesn't seem to have taken so much interest himself in his principal female—the beautiful cold Edith, who doesn't know if she loves either of her lovers or whether she loves at all. By a curious coincidence, in a novel called "The Sleeping Partner," or with some very similar title, which we remember noticing perhaps early this year, perhaps last, the story is wound round the workers in a slate quarry. They have eaten away the foundations of a great mass of rock, thousands of tons of it, so it threatens to topple over on to their quarries and galleries in the valley below; for weeks and months the inhabitants live expecting the fall. Mr. Phillpotts describes exactly the same thing. In both novels, the quarry manager is in love with the heroine, or chief female character. In both books the actual catastrophe is described with great skill. But the horrors, the tragedies and the catastrophes of this War, make the bulging in of a few thousand tons of rock seem a matter of little moment. The best bit of nature writing in "Old Delabole" is that describing Arthur's Castle, or rather the verdure-clad foundations on which its ruins rest; it is a gem of description.

From the Same.—"The Later Life," by Louis Couperus. Translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. In preparing the work of Louis Couperus for the English press, Mr. de Mattos is doing excellent work. The novels of this fine Dutch writer are equal to the best of our own literature; they portray the life of the upper classes of his country with artistic insight and apparent fidelity. The style is simple yet polished, and the modern method of developing incident rather from the play of mind upon mind than from the impact of circumstance is utilised with convincing effect. "The Later Life" is concerned with the Indian summer of a woman's life. At the age of forty-three she encounters a Socialist, one Braws, and is by him awakened from the monotony of a dilatory existence. Her husband, a man younger than herself, is in love with his wife's niece, and the unsympathetic relationship and outside interests of husband and wife lead to a desire on the part of both for a divorce. They have, however, reckoned without the love which each bears for their son, and at the crisis are influenced by that love to remain in the groove of their joint existence. The characters are finely conceived and drawn, especially the strong and sweet nature of Addie, the son.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Book of Old English Songs and Ballads." We recommend this volume to those who are interested in old songs and ballads; there is a goodly selection here, some from Edmund Spenser, Shakespeare, Sir Charles Ledley, Sir John Suckling, Robert Herrick, Richard Lovelace, George Wither, Ben Jonson, and so on. The original water-colour drawings by Eleanor F. Brickdale, are charming and add greatly to the value of the book; there are twenty-four of these full-page plates, and the detail and colouring are excellent.

From the Same.—"The Author's Craft," by Arnold Bennett. Dividing his subject into four parts, Mr. Bennett discourses delightfully and wisely on the craft of observation—fundamental to the would-be writer—on novel writing, on play construction, and on the reaction of his public upon the author's mind. The pages are packed with apt instances and piquant remarks and are illuminated by that brilliant commonsense which is Mr. Bennett's most salient characteristic.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"The War, 1914-15; a History and Explanation for Boys and Girls," by Elizabeth O'Neill. Vol. 1 covered the period to the Fall of Antwerp; Vol. 2 to New Year's Day, 1915, and the new volume (Vol. 3) brings the story to Italy's Declaration of War. Each volume contains four charming coloured plates and sixteen full-page plates with maps and plans. The author aims at telling interestingly all the things which the children most want to know.

From the Same.—Nos. 14 and 15 of "Shown to the Children" series, edited by Louey Chisholm, deal with the Army and Navy, and are written by such experts as Captain A. H. Atteridge and Percival A. Hisslam. The Army contains 16 plates in colour and 32 in black and white, and the Navy 42 in two colours. The modern child is fortunate in comparison with the child of a generation ago in having such a vast improvement made in the quality of the books produced solely for its amusement and instruction.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—"The Undying Story," by W. Douglas Newton. Mr. Newton is quite a new writer, his first book, "War," being published about eighteen months ago, but by his books and also by his articles in T. P.'s Journal of Great Deeds of the Great War he has come to the front as a popular writer on the great subject of war. This new book is a story of the work of the British Expeditionary Force on the Continent, from Mons to Ypres, November, 1914, and is a collection of his articles in the aforesaid T.P.'s journal. Of the vividness of Mr. Newton's writing there can be no doubt, and he has the facility of making the scenes he depicts spring into action; but to our mind he commits the fault of trying to infuse too much life into his story by the excessive use of strange and often uncanny phrases. His ingenuity in this direction is remarkable, but it palls after a few chapters, and the reader tires of "squalls of shell," "awful rain of artillery fire," "spitting maxims," "awful pelting of nicked bullets," "drenching of shells," &c., &c.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—"The New Army in the Making," by An Officer. This small booklet reminds one very forcibly of the excellent series of articles which has been running for some months in Blackwood's Magazine under the title of "The First Hundred Thousand," by a Junior Sub. We should not be surprised to hear that "An Officer" and the "Junior Sub." were closely related. It affords an entertaining glimpse into the everyday work of the hundreds of thousands of men of all classes who have answered the call and enlisted in the so-called Kitchener's Armies. The book should be read and then passed on to one who has not yet enlisted, and copies might well be sent to members of the new armies, and especially to those who are officers or who are seeking promotion.

From Mr. John Lane.—"My Years at the Austrian Court," by Nellie Ryan, with sixteen illustrations of members of the Austrian Royal Family, their palaces, &c. This is apparently the work of a governess engaged to teach English to the younger members of the Royal Family at the palaces of Austria. It is a bright vivacious bit of Court gossip, and it is rather pleasant to find the writer has so much that is kind and favourable to relate about the unhappy family of the Hapsburgs. Britain and Austria have been on such friendly relations for so many years, that Miss Ryan's interesting and well-illustrated work cannot fail to make the reader regret that Germany was able to yoke Austria to her war machine. Some of the titles of the chapters are: "Is the Imperial House of Austria Mad?"; "The Empress Elizabeth"; "Vienna, the Gay Capital"; "Life at the Viennese Court"; "Life on the Imperial Yacht." The authoress praises Admiral Archduke Karl Stefan highly, and says he would make an acceptable ruler of Poland, if that rumoured position for him should ever become his—which is not very likely. One of the most interesting and sympathetic chapters is that devoted to the Empress Elizabeth, whose married life was ruined by the persecution of her husband's mother, and also by his infidelities.

From the Same.—"Is there a Shakespeare Problem? a reply to Mr. J. M. Robertson and Andrew Lang," by G. G. Greenwood, M.P., author of "The Shakespeare Problem Restated," "In re Shakespeare," and "The Vindicators of Shakespeare." Mr. Robertson is one of that great number who are driven by the greatness of the works called Shakespeare's, and the littleness, or at any rate the little we know of the man called Shakespeare, to ask themselves what is the solution of the problem? Mr. Robertson, so far as we can judge, does not look for or wish to find the real Shakespeare in the lawyer and philosopher Francis Bacon. We have not been able to read all his big book, though it is interesting "in parts," like the famous egg. Mr. Andrew Lang was in our opinion not sufficiently interested in the question as to whether there is any "problem" or not, to make his contribution to its solution so valuable as it might have been, but he is a far more doughty champion of the immortal Will than is Mr. J. M. Robertson, and the reader gets utterly bored with having the latter set up, like Humpty Dumpty, to be shot at by Mr. Greenwood—shot to pieces, bit by bit, and then grilled and eaten. So far as the "Problem" is concerned this big book gets us "no forrader." The testimony of Ben Jonson is the rock on which all attempts to divorce the man from the work fail utterly: he knew well the man we know so ill, he refers to him as though he looked upon him as almost a god in some respects and in others as being human—all too human; and it is exactly this combination which explains the secret of the power of Shakespeare.

From the Same.—"What is Christian Science?" by Thomas W. Wilby. The teachings of Christian Science are presented by Mr. Wilby in a clear and concise form. He describes and analyses them from a point of view which, though declared by the author to be independent, will give pleasure chiefly to the followers of Mrs. Eddy. The book is written in a cheerful and popular style.

From Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd.—"My Childhood," by Maxim Gorki. Translated by Mrs. Gertrude M. Foakes. No earlier work of Gorki's possesses more arresting qualities than does the first volume of his autobiography, now translated into English by Mrs. Foakes. The story is one of a child's development in a household that seems terrible to people of placid habits like ourselves. We are led to believe that the Kashirins are similar to other Russians of the artisan class—simple-hearted and truthful by nature, but cultivating craftiness, thievishness and the display of ungovernable passion, as though these evil habits were necessary to the conduct of life. Illiterate and animal-like, the greater number of the characters surrounding Aleixi's youth will be repugnant to every sense of the readers of his book, for so vividly drawn are the men, women and children of the Kashirim circle that they fasten on the imagination as creatures to be smelt, heard, seen and avoided, even as the little boy, afterwards Gorki, attempted to avoid them. Gorki's father dying in early manhood, the child was taken to his grandfather's home in Nijni Novogorod. Here he was to know a heavy hand that beat him into unconsciousness, to witness many cruel and malignant actions, to see inoffensive women trampled under foot by drunken husbands, to learn to know and love a saint, his grandmother. The picture of the grandmother stands out clearly from the sordid background of the Kashirim household. This woman with the untamable soul, quaintly communing every hour with her ally, the God of kindness, finding happiness in vodka and seeing humour in every situation, grand, strong, and illiterate, becomes, before the end of the volume, the trusted friend of the reader, even as throughout his tumultuous childhood she is the adored friend of the boy who was to become a famous Russian.

From Mr. H. K. Lewis.—"Report on the Excavations at Grime's Graves, Weeting, Norfolk." Issued on behalf of the Prehistoric Society of East Anglia, an account of the interesting excavations in Norfolk is carried forward to May, 1914. The book is full of photographs and drawings, and in more peaceful times would appeal to a large lay public, as well as to members of the British Association and its branches.

From Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.—"The Book of the Thin Red Line," by Sir Henry Newbolt. This is a companion volume to Sir Henry Newbolt's "Book of the Blue Sea," and a quotation from the preface—a letter to a boy—will perhaps indicate its scope:—"I have written you another Christmas book; this year it is a book about soldiers. You are hardly ready to serve your country in that way yet, but I take it for certain that you are thinking of such things. I take it for certain, too, that when you read about war you want real battles and real people, not imaginary ones. Well, in this book everyone is real, every page is true, and as accurate as I could make it." The six "heroes" are Robert Blakeney, John Colborne, Harry Smith, "George," James Outram, and Thomas Jackson. Mention must be made of the remarkably fine illustrations by Stanley L. Wood; the eight coloured plates and 38 black and white illustrations are full of action, the men and horses appear alive and ready to spring from the printed page. A capital book for a boy.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"France at War," by Rudyard Kipling. A sixpenny brochure written in Mr. Kipling's well-known style, giving far too brief glimpses of the manner in which our brave ally is bearing her share in this world war. Judiciously distributed it should prove a stimulus to recruiting.

From the Same.—"The Research Magnificent," by H. G. Wells. Mr. Wells has returned to his old idea of a modern race of Samurai. But instead of painting the ideal he follows the real. He creates a man-child who possesses in earliest youth the dominant desires of the Samurai—desires for clean living, high thinking and the subjugation of physical fears and lusts, and he follows this central character, Benham, through the years of adolescence to maturity, investing him with no halo of idealism, but noting his very human failures and struggles. There is very little incident in the book, or rather the incident is brushed on one side as something necessary but negligible. Benham has a school and college career, he travels largely, he loves and marries, travels again, and ends by being shot in the Johannesburg miners' strike. But these things are no more than the geographical accidents which help to determine the course of a river of thought. The book is a mass of expressed thought, clever, sometimes wise, extremely interesting, and, as is Mr. Wells' way, always inconclusive.

From the Same.—"A Manual of Mechanics and Heat," by R. A. Gregory and H. E. Hadley, B.Sc. Parts I, II, and III of the same authors' "Class Book of Physics" have been drawn upon to supply the framework of the present book. Sections of the former work have been extended and many additions made. The result is a manual which provides the next step to the "Class Book" and forms an introduction to advanced work in Physics.

From Messrs. E. Marlborough & Co.—To "Marlborough's Self-Taught Series" are now added the books dealing with Latin, Russian and Arabic. Each contains a grammar and easily followed phonetic pronunciation and the Russian and Arabic also include conversation, trading terms, money, weights and measures and vocabularies.

From Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son.—"Julius Caesar," edited by C. L. Thomson, and "The Merchant of Venice," edited by D. M. Macardle, B.A. These two volumes form part of "The Carmelite Shakespeare," and are intended for use in schools. A glossary of archaic words is appended, together with notes on matters of historical or literary interest. At the end of each act is grouped a number of questions intended to test the understanding and memory of the pupils.

From Messrs. Methuen & Co., Ltd.—"Victory," by Joseph Conrad. The title of Mr. Conrad's new novel must not lead the reader to confuse either its thought or action with the issues of the present War. True, the arch-villain of "Victory" is a German—an hotel-keeper on one of those South Sea islands so vividly familiar to Mr. Conrad's readers. The "Victory" is spiritual and not at all physical. It is attained by an English girl, member of a ladies' orchestra touring the islands. She is persecuted by the hotel-keeper, and rescued by the hero, a meditative, observant, cultured Swedish baron. Alma, the English girl, and Heyst, the Swede, fly to a lonely island where they ultimately fall into the hands of desperadoes, who have been instigated by the Teuton. The culminating tragedy is as wholesale as any in the annals of melodrama. As in all Joseph Conrad's work, action, even violent action such as this, is subordinated to analyses of the philosophies of the situation. Never has the writer done finer work than in "Victory." It is a book more than ever notable in the present year of upheavals.

From the Same.—"A Salute from the Fleet," by Alfred Noyes. "A Salute from the Fleet" takes its place as the most important poem of the present collection in point of length and construction. Its stately lines engemmed with the sounding names of our famous battleships are worthy a great theme. Many readers, however, will prefer the shorter poems, many of which are perfect alike in sentiment and expression. No finer war poem has been penned than "The Sword of England," written in 1912. It is strong, fired with a high ideal and clothed in an exquisitely fitting poetic garment. There are poems of dainty imagery, such as "The Strange Guest," and verses whose chief attraction is the stream of mellifluous language, such as "Crimson Sails."

From the Same.—"The Yellow Claw," by Sax Rohmer. A book which will provide recreation for the many readers who now look to light fiction as to a refuge from the over-seriousness of daily life. In "The Yellow Claw" there is a mysterious murder which leads to a detailed description of a luxurious London opium den and the gradual unravelling of the crime. The book is long and well-thought out, its incident is unusual and arresting, and its many characters are both attractive and thoroughly alive.

From Messrs. Nisbet & Co., Ltd.—"A Faith for the Firing Line," by E. A. Burroughs. The two addresses and a sermon printed under the title, "A Faith for the Firing Line," have been delivered to the officers of the British Expeditionary Force at Rouen. They are excellent and well worth perpetuation in print.

From Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd.—"Philip's Large Scale Strategic War Map of Europe. Southern Area." Printed on stout paper, Philip's map will occupy the space of a good-sized wall. It is clear and full, and is furnished with a complete index.

From Messrs. E. Ponsonby, Ltd., Dublin.—"Habit: Its Effects upon Life and Character; with an Application of Its Principles in an Exposition of the Church Catechism and Appendix," by Edward Johnston, B.A. Part I of the Rev. Edward Johnston's book on "Habit" is occupied with an analysis of various types of his subject, mental, moral and bodily, and an exposition of the Church Catechism. Part II is styled an appendix, and deals with the authority of the Church, containing also chapters on Truth, Pride, and Reverence.

Published by Authority.—"Supplement No. 3. In Continuation of Supplement No. 2 to the Manual of Emergency Legislation," edited by Alexander Pulling, C.B. Enshrined in a thick, paper-covered volume are the Acts of Parliament, Proclamations and Orders passed and made in consequence of the War up to the end of April, 1915. A list of present-day contraband is a special feature.

From The Religious Tract Society.—Very small children like a book full of brightly coloured pictures, small children a book of pictures with a judicious sprinkling of stories in good big type, and children a nice fat volume containing pictures coloured and otherwise, stories and bright verse. In "The Child's Empire Picture Annual" the three classes mentioned above are catered for fully, so it is quite safe to select this book as a gift for a child of any age. The numerous black and white outline pictures also lend themselves admirably to the colour brush or crayon of the budding artist.

From the Same.—"The Boy's Own Annual." The contents page of this volume shows a collection of stories, articles, &c., covering such a wide range of subjects that a boy would be very hard to please who did not find much to interest him here. There are five good serial stories. There are numerous interesting articles relating to the War or matters connected with the War, also many on various other subjects—Nature studies, outdoor sports, and amusements, motor-car, motor-cycle, &c., aircraft, wireless, the Red Cross, Zeppelins, submarines, submarine mines, V.C. heroes of the War, numerous short stories, poems, puzzles. Illustrations are to be found on nearly every page; there are hundreds in black and white, by well-known artists. The coloured plates are fine, there is one of the Prince of Wales by George Lambert, another is a sectional plan of a submarine boat.

From the Same.—"The Empire Annual for Boys." This handsome volume is illustrated with coloured plates and sixteen black and white illustrations; it contains many short stories by various authors—Paul Blake, William Canton, Harold Dorning, E. C. Kenyon, Gordon Stables, &c. Edited by A. R. Buckland, M.A.

From the Same.—"The Empire Annual for Girls." These short stories are each by a different author, and illustrated with coloured plates and sixteen black and white illustrations, and edited by A. R. Buckland, M.A. Gladys R. Baston, an accomplished lady golfer, gives some useful hints in an article, "To Girls Beginning Golf," Mrs. Lambert Chambers, the ladies' tennis champion, gives an article on "Tennis for Girls," and Mabel Bryant gives some good advice on "Cricket for Girls."

From the Same.—"Our Little Dots." The pretty pictures, stories and verse in this twenty-ninth annual volume, with its bright picture cover, will be found as entertaining as ever for the little ones.

From the Same.—"The Child's Companion." For the older children this little volume contains stories both amusing and instructive; serial stories, short stories, verses and rhymes, and numerous illustrations.

From Messrs. William Rider & Son, Ltd.—"The Devil's Mistress," by J. W. Brodie-Innes. In a short introduction the author tells us that the material of "The Devil's Mistress" has been collected from among seventeenth century Scotch documents which give evidence of the superstition of that time. His heroine is one Isabel Goudie, who in rebellion against her humdrum lot as a farmer's wife, sold herself to Satan. For several years she was endowed with supernatural powers until at last she turned to the Roman Catholic faith, abjured the Devil, confessed her sins, and was burnt for a witch. The reader is more likely to take the narrative as an entertaining tale than to attach much importance to its supernatural aspect.

From the Same.—"Economy," by Orison Swett Marden. A vigorous appreciation of economy written with an American terseness and vividness. By "Economy" Mr. Marden understands the saving of money by the exclusion of luxuries and he preaches the sweets of money-possession with fervour and conviction.

From the Same.—"A Manual of Hypnotism," by H. Ernest Hunt. After analysing as far as possible the subconscious mind, Mr. Hunt goes on to discuss Post Hypnotic suggestion, psychotherapeutics and phenomena of various kinds. He supplies methods for the novice to follow in making practical experiments and gives details of practical therapeutics. The book is clearly written and its subject treated in a useful and practical manner.

From the Same.—"Agar Half the Mystic," by Roland Filkin. The supernatural plot of this really thrilling story is both well conceived and well developed. Postulating the existence on another plane of such creatures of evil as vampires and werewolves, Mr. Filkin sets forth as his villain a terrifying and almost convincing monster of the former species. Investigations into occultism in the East have led a too-venturesome European into the creature's power, and when Brentwood returns to England the vampire accompanies him. First the vicar of the parish disappears, and later a young girl vanishes. Brentwood and his Hindoo servant, Agar Haffi, all unconscious of the neighbourhood of the vampire, probe the matter of the disappearances. They are joined in their search by the new vicar, his sister, the fiancée of the vanished lady, and a detective. Search after the usual manner of the physical plane is combined with occult practices; the secret is bared and, at the cost of two lives, the demon is exorcised. It says a good deal for Mr. Filkin's pen that this weird plot should prove entirely readable and at times a little too realistic to be pleasant.

From the Same.—"Problems of the Borderland," by J. Herbert Slater. The problem of the "fourth dimension" has teased many minds. Mr. Herbert Slater settles it to his own satisfaction, and proceeds to build upon his definition a theory of the supernatural world, its intimacy with and reaction upon ourselves. His views are plausible and are clearly expressed, but he cannot prevent his spiritualistic standpoint from appearing repulsive and even superstitious.

From Mr. Robert Scott.—"Talks to Boys," by James Logan, M.A., F.R.G.S. As Principal of Rathmines College, Dublin, Mr. Logan has formed the habit of giving his students a ten-minute address each morning. Forty of these little "talks" are contained in the present volume, and they are practical, wise and manly, just such as would evoke the best from the average boy in his "teens." Religion in the generally understood sense is avoided, and such topics as lie nearest a boy's life are those under consideration.

From Messrs. Seeley, Service & Co., Ltd.—"Adventures of Missionary Explorers," by R. M. A. Ibbotson. True stories of the heroism, fortitude, and indomitable courage of Dr. T. L. Pennell, W. Barbrooke Grubb, Bishop Bompas, Griffith John, George Grenfell, and many other well-known missionaries in all parts of the world. This volume belongs to the Library of Adventure Series, and is very attractively produced. The stories are realistically illustrated with sixteen full-page pictures.

From the Same.—"Ian Hardy, Senior Midshipman," by Commander E. Hamilton Currey, R.N., with illustrations in colour. Ian Hardy's career in H.M. Navy will be told in a number of volumes, of which this one is the third. Each book will be complete in itself, and no knowledge of the preceding volumes is necessary, but most of the boys who have read "Ian Hardy, Naval Cadet," and "Ian Hardy, Midshipman," and remember the fun and exciting adventures recorded in those books, will be delighted to have more of the doings of this high-spirited young midshipman.

From the Same.—"Missionary Knights of the Cross," by John C. Lambert, M.A., D.D., with many illustrations. The contents of this volume have been taken from Dr. J. C. Lambert's larger and more expensive volume, entitled "The Romance of Missionary Heroism." These stories tell of the indomitable courage and stirring adventures of missionaries with uncivilized man, wild beasts and the forces of Nature in many parts of the world.

From the Same.—"Wonders of Modern Manufacture," a popular account of the marvels of manufacturing, by Charles R. Gibson, F.R.S.E., with twenty-two illustrations and diagrams. "In the present volume the author has endeavoured to trace the evolution of the different industries, and to describe in everyday language the methods of modern manufacture in our principal industries." He begins by telling how the steam-engine came about, how we came to spin by machinery, how lace curtains, embroidery, knitting, washing clothes, &c., are done by machinery. The narrative is full of interest from beginning to end.

From the Society of SS. Peter and Paul.

"Speech on Kikuyu," by the Duke of Argyll. The speech now published was delivered to the English Church Union in June of this year and was eminently suited to its audience. For the benefit of the same audience it is well worth a prolonged life in print.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.

"Ireland: Vital Hour," by Arthur Lynch, M.P. Mr. Lynch's study of Ireland presents a clear and coherent picture to the reader. A quick but comprehensive glance over the doleful history of his country provides an understanding of the present-day condition of affairs. Having arrived within the period of living memory, the author becomes autobiographical, showing us events, opinions and feelings as they impressed and pervaded his own personality. Later we get hard facts, some of them unpalatable, anent the government of Ireland, a closely observed analysis of the priest in politics, and a section dealing with industrial development. That important influence, the Irish in America, is explained in a way that should give light to many an English thinker, and education and literature find place in a work that should rank as important for many years to come. A fine photograph of the author takes its place as frontispiece, and numberless maps showing railways, schools, banks, poultry and agricultural societies conclude the volume.

From the Same.—"Passion and Faith," by Dorothea Gerard. "Illegal Love and the Roman Catholic Religion" would be a more explanatory though a clumsier, title for Dorothea Gerard's book than the one she has chosen. Her heroine, Marian Escott, is bound by marriage to a husband whom she does not love, while she does love Lord Hartigan, a bearded and Socialistic peer. Marian and Hartigan elope to the Continent and encounter an Eucharistic Congress in Vienna. From that moment Marian longs to embrace the Catholic faith. In order to do so she gives up Hartigan and lives in a nunnery, but presently finding her passion stronger than her faith, returns to him. Finally she dies and the priest gives her Extreme Unction. The novel is capably written, although the deep topics are handled with an insight little more than superficial.

From Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co., Ltd.

"Bubble and Squeak and Animal A B C." Nos. 11 and 12 of a series of quaint little books for children written by Harry Golding and illustrated by Thos. Maybank, Margaret W. Tarrant, and other artists. Each page of text has a coloured plate facing it, beautifully printed in colours. A charming series, sure to be popular with the children.

From the Same.—"After Long Years," by L. G. Moberly. Miss Moberly writes charmingly of a dauntless woman who meets every vicissitude of fortune with a cheerful demeanour.

From Messrs. Watts & Co.—"The Religious Revolution of To-day," by J. T. Shotwell, Ph.D. With an Introduction by Joseph McCabe. Dr. Shotwell first states the fact that a religious revolution is going on in our midst, and then goes on to "measure its importance and see its setting in the history of the world." He engages on a problem in social science and examines his subject by contrasting facts drawn from the practice of religion in the ancient and modern worlds and from public and private life. He ends in an optimistic vein, content with the achievements of the human intellect and pleading for the control of religion by reason.

From Messrs. John Wright & Sons, Ltd., Bristol, and Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd. "The Medical Annual Synoptical Index." This work covers the ground of medical literature during the ten years 1905 to 1914, inclusive. Each disease in the list is accompanied by a reference to the "Medical Annual," and when the reference is required to furnish some suggestion for treatment, such information will be found to be given fully in the Index itself. A list of drugs, with doses in imperial and metric measure, follows the Index, and a helpful article on the difference between the measures of the British Pharmacopœia and the Apothecaries' scale concludes the volume.

New Editions. We have received from Messrs. Watts & Co. a new and cheap edition of "The Religion of the Open Mind," by Adam Gowans Whyte. From Messrs. J. C. Juta & Co. Mr. C. D. Hope's comparative history of South Africa, "Our Place in History," in a second edition. From Messrs. John Long, in a sixpenny paper-covered form, "A Member of Tate's," by Nat Gould, "Curios," by Richard Marsh, and "The Lovely Mrs. Pemberton," by Florence Warden. Messrs. James Nisbet & Co. issue a tenth edition of Sir Robert Anderson's standard work on the prophecies of Daniel, "The Coming Prince."—A third edition of "Fatigue," by A. Mosso, translated by Margaret Drummond, M.A., and W. B. Drummond, M.B., C.M., F.R.C.P.E., is issued by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd.—Also W. B. Drummond's "The Child, His Nature and Nurture," is issued by Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., for a seventh time. This latest edition contains several amplifications and one or two new chapters.—We have received from Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd., a copy of Mr. John Edge's story dealing with the Irish Land Problem, entitled "An Irish Utopia," in a fourth edition.—From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd., "A Child's Day," the delightful book of verse by Walter de la Mare, accompanied by equally delightful pictures by Carien and Will Cadby, in a second edition.—From Mr. Mitchell Kennerley, New York, a reprint of James Howard Kebler's "Open Letter to the Nation with Regard to a Peace Plan."—From Mr. Erskine Macdonald, a second issue of Annie C. Dalton's "The Marriage of Music," with a few additional poems.—From Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne Ltd., "What Shall I Be?" by the Rev. BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

Vigorous publication of its kind,
and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books,
from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints
The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow
and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular
(Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable
"Book-Auction Records." How
Mr. Karslake can give such a valuable book for 21/- we do not know."
The Chique says:—"It is the best,
bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for
the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books
has ever had." Send a postcard for
a part on inspection. KARSLAKE

"The Glory that was Greece"

WE quite agree with the remark of the Saturday Review that Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson's fine volume, "The Glory that was Greece," by C. Stobart, M.A., is "nobly illustrated." The new edition, just published, has been revised by the author; and at the price of 7s. 6d. net, this royal 8vo. really is a royal book. It is a "survey of Hellenic culture and civilization"—a tremendous subject—and the survey is done in a style which carries out admirably the author's purpose. He is an enthusiast and conveys his enthusiasm to the reader in a most broad and generous manner. So many men and so many minds have existed almost only to study and explain Greek life and art and literature, that no one mind could construct such a survey as this, and please everybody. Mr. Stobart does not pretend to do so. If the text were as ill done as it is well done, the profusion of beautiful illustrations of ancient Greek art and of scenes in Greece would be good value for the money. Good value for the money! It just struck us what would be the value of this copy, with its noble array of representations of the treasures and the majesty of Greek art, if it became known throughout the world that it was the only thing left—that Zeus had destroyed every other manifestation of the greatness and glory of his people! Why, the whole world would fight for it; we should be able to build a castle in Spain, or on Mount Olympus, or anywhere else where there was good salmon and trout fishing. And yet anybody can buy it for 7s. 6d. net. Not our copy. Thanks to Zeus and his publishers, this exquisite presentation of the finest art the world has ever known contains no blemish on its perfect title-page. It will take its place in our small library of perfect books, which are a delight to the eye and to the mind—things one hopes to be a tenant of for life, and that they will live on to be a joy to other eyes and minds for centuries. For what is the life of man compared to that of a book? Will the Allies presently be defending the liberties of the world on the plains of Greece, on the field of Marathon, in the Bay of Salamis? Will the modern Huns spare the temples of the old Greek gods? Who knows? For Greece herself seems to be playing with her destiny. All eyes are on the land of Homer, of Agamemnon, of Phidias, and the other god-like men of old. All

British hearts are beating time with the hearts of our young army and that of France, and thus a double welcome is insured for this fine reflection of "The Glory that was Greece," most opportunely published.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co., will publish immediately, at the price of 6d. net, a booklet by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, entitled "The Fringes of the Fleet."

On the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary as a publisher, Mr. Henry Holt was the guest of honour at a luncheon given by the other stockholders of Henry Holt & Company on Saturday, November 20th, at the City Club, New York. Mr. Holt was presented with a gold loving cup, suitably inscribed to commemorate the occasion.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. announce already a second edition of "When Pan Pipes," by Mary T. Thorn-ton, the new novel by a new author.

Mr. John Lane will publish next week "A Book of Belgium's Gratitude." The book has been designed and published as an expression of the gratitude felt by Belgians for the help and hospitality of Great Britain and the Colonies. The contributors to the book include the most distinguished Belgians in politics, society, literature and art. There will be nine illustrations in colour and 24 in black-and-white. The published price will be 5s. net. The profits are to be placed at the disposal of H.M. Queen Mary.

The supremacy of Blackwood's Magazine in obtaining the best records of the war is universally recognised. "The Adventures of a Despatch Rider," by Captain W. H. L. Watson, which has appeared in its pages and is now to be issued in book form by Messrs. Blackwood at 5s. net, conveys a wonderful impression of the psychology of war in a most interesting account of a motor-cycle despatch rider's life. It will rank as one of the most literary and yet human productions concerning the retreat and advance of the British Army in France and the winter campaign of 1914-15. It is illustrated by maps and plans.

We are glad to welcome once more the Christmas Number, fully illustrated, of Bibliographie de la France, entitled "Livres d'Étrennes, Revues et Périodiques pour l'année 1916." 100 pages, of which probably the larger number relate to books and periodicals about the War.

One of the most attractive catalogues of books for Christmas, &c., is the "Choice Gifts for all Seasons," got up by the Midland Educational Co., Ltd., of Birmingham and Leicester. It shows good taste from A to Z.

The Year Book Press are just about to issue "The Clergyman's Ready Reference Diary and Kalendar for 1916": being the twenty-third year of publication.

L'Economiste Parlementaire is a new French weekly, started to review the "Opinions, Débats, Rapports, Travaux, Documents économiques de la Chambre et du Sénat." The office is at 51, Rue Vivienne, Paris.

A very handsome volume, at 12s. 6d. net, is "Oxford," by Andrew Lang, sometime Fellow of Merton College; with 16 plates, in colour, by Geo. F. Carline, R.B.A., just published by Messrs. Seeley, Service & Co., Ltd.

An original monograph, illustrated, dealing with the attitude and works of Rudyard Kipling has just been published by Simpkin, Marshall & Co. The author, Mr. R. Thurston Hopkins, is saturated with Kipling lore. He gives us a critical review of Kipling's various works; also the author's all-round record—his interests, hobbies, favourite writers, and preferences of all sorts.

In the million of homes from which our boys in khaki have been drawn, a kindly welcome will be given to "The Making of a Soldier," to be published anonymously by Simpkin, Marshall & Co.

Miss Mary Richardson has just published through Simpkin, Marshall & Co., a novel entitled "Matilda and Marcus." The text is Woman Suffrage, but the theme is not too aggressive, and will interest not only feminists but general fiction readers. For hero we have a plumber who thought he was a poet.

The Cornhill Magazine for January, 1916 (ready December 22nd), is a strong number, beginning a new volume.

The new volume of Smith, Elder & Co.'s 1s. net Series, ready immediately, is No. 25, "An Outpost in Papua," by the Rev. A. K. Chignell.

Announced by Mr. T. Werner Laurie, Mr. Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology," is described as "a novel in verse," and consists of two hundred and twenty poems, each an analysis of a man's or a woman's life."

T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are publishing immediately "An Irishwoman in China," by Mrs. de Burgh Daly. The book deals with the social life of China, both native and European, and includes many racy anecdotes and descriptions of the curious and amusing side of native customs.

The University Tutorial Press will publish shortly "Rural Arithmetic," by A. G. Ruston, B.A., B.Sc.

Mr. Edward Arnold is on the point of publishing a translation by Mr. J. D. Duff of "Childish Years" by Serge Aksakoff.

Messrs. Iliffe & Sons, Ltd., have published a new and fully revised edition of "Faults and How to Find Them: Motor Car Failures and their Remedies Fully Explained," by J. S. V. Bickford, B.A.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new book entitled "What Germany Thinks: or the War as Germans See It," by Dr. T. F. A. Smith, late English lecturer in the University of Erlangen, and author of "The Soul of Germany." In this work Dr. Smith has again made use of his intimate knowledge of Germany and its people.

Uniform with the new and cheaper issues, at 3s. 6d. net, of their famous "Fairy Book Series," edited by Andrew Lang, Messrs. Longmans have just published a capital book for girls, entitled "The Grand Duchess Benedicta," by A. E. Burns, with some clever illustrations. It is the breezy story of a lot of bright young English girls at an English Convent school. It ought to be read by all who look with suspicion on such institutions. The story winds round a plot arranged by the girls to pay out a mistress they do not like—but it recoils on their own charming heads. In slang and "go" these young ladies are not far behind their brothers. The colour design on the paper wrapper will sell the book wherever it is shown.

Mr. Melrose has added to the great list of war books one which will be eagerly read—"The Russian Campaign, April to August, and the Evacuation of Warsaw, 1915." It is the second series of "Field Notes from the Russian Front," by Stanley Washburn, special correspondent of The Times with the Russian Armies. Mr. Washburn does full justice to the magnificent fighting of the Germans and yet the reader feels that it is all wasted energy, and that the Russians will return stronger than ever in the spring. The 74 photographs by Mr. Geo. H. Mewes are of great interest.

"Praying for the Dead," by the Rev. Bernard J. Snell, is the title of a brochure just published by Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. at 2d. It is an able and eloquent exposition of the view that to pray for the dead is not forbidden to mortals by any divine or human decrees. He points out that Richard Baxter, Dr. Johnson, John Wesley, and George Macdonald were "resolute in maintaining our right and obligation so to pray." We think most broad-minded people will also endorse the view—nobody knows for certain—that "doubtless all souls are saved by the mercy of God, but none are more sure of that mercy than they who, called to be soldiers, without a thought of self, yield life on the altar of high duty."

Booksellers are hereby kindly invited to note the publication by The Wireless Press, Ltd., Marconi House, Strand, London, and Messrs. Jas. Brown & Son of Glasgow, of a second edition of a "Handbook of Technical Instruction for Wireless Telegraphists," by J. C. Hawkhead, extensively revised and enlarged by H. M. Dowsett, A.M.I.E.E., fully illustrated, with good index, 310 pp., price 3s. 6d. net. It is a work to be made known in view of the immense importance to the Empire of wireless communications.

The Book Trade and the War

WE regret to hear that Lance-Corporal Barrie, 7th Battalion Seaforth Highlanders, grandson of Mr. Wm. Halewood (founder of the bookselling business now in the hands of Mr. Alfred Halewood, of Preston), has been killed in action. He was a fine young fellow in every way. The Rev. W. Binner, M.A., in a touching sermon, said he felt he had lost one he looked upon as a son, who had for years assisted him at the altar. Harold Halewood, another grandson, formerly at Wigan, though under age, is serving with the third Fiji contingent, New Zealanders. Richard Grant, twenty years with the firm, is now in the local shell factory. Henry Dewhurst, another of the staff, is with Lord Derby's Brigade of Artillery.

National Book Trade Provident Society

A MEETING of the Committee of Management was held at the registered offices of the Society on Thursday, December 9th, 1915, at 7 p.m. One application for membership in the General Division and eight applications in the Insurance Division were received and passed. Presentation to Mr. F. J. Whitmarsh

Fifty Years with Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son
A HAPPY and unexpected presentation took place last week to Mr. F. J. Whitmarsh, who has recently retired from the superintendency of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son's Great Eastern district, after nearly fifty years' service with that firm. Mr. Whitmarsh had received from his colleagues a silver tea service and gold watch, and also a token of regard from the managers on his district; but the above, though not so substantial, helped to complete the expression of appreciation and esteem in which he was held. The presentation took the form of a pair of gold links, engraved, "1866-1915" (being the years of his period of service); and an illuminated testimonial, signed by the members of the recipient's last bookstall staff at Paddington station, when the firm's contract on the G.W.R. ceased:—
"To Mr. F. J. Whitmarsh.

"DEAR SIR,—

"We, the undersigned members of your last Paddington staff, ask your acceptance of the pair of links, accompanying this letter, as a small token of our regard. With the passing of the years we have realised the high value of your training, and we feel that the success we have achieved has been due in a large measure to your help and interest in our welfare. We hope that your faithful and successful work for the firm of nearly half a century will bring its reward, and that your example of honourable dealing will continue to inspire each of us. With our united wishes that you may have good health to spend a long and happy retirement, and with best respects,

"We are, yours faithfully,

A. ALLEN, W. J. COTTON,
FRANK BOWYER, F. G. PIDGEON,
G. H. BOORMAN, W. T. HILLMAN,
S. B. PEARSON.

"September 30th, 1915."

Mr. Whitmarsh, at whose house the presentation was made, briefly thanked the members of his old staff for their kindly thought and in no uncertain way showed his deep appreciation of the sentiments expressed. Some years ago, a well-known magazine, in an article on "Book Salesmanship," summarised Paddington Station bookstall as being managed by one who in a few minutes could gauge the commercial value of a novel. The statement was without doubt true, as many publishers have since been in the position to prove. One shilling book alone, when first published, was sold at the rate of one thousand per month for several months in the year prior to the relinquishing of the G.W.R. bookstall contract by the firm. Mr. Whitmarsh will stand out as a manager on account of the fair and impartial treatment of all publications, both news and books, which he gave to all that passed through his hands; and the same characteristic was displayed in his treatment of his staff, many of whom—in addition to those who served last with him—are now filling useful and responsible positions, not only with the above firm, but in various other walks of life.

"Through the Eye" Series

WE must give a warm welcome to Messrs. Jack's admirable novel series of profusely illustrated books at 5s. net, just begun by them under this general title. Its central idea is the treatment of subjects of general interest in a plain manner, relying to a large extent on a profusion of illustration to elucidate the text. There is no series in existence which has undertaken the organised presentment of knowledge by means of illustration through the eye. "Look and Understand" is the motto of the series. The text is in each case the work of the same specialist, who is responsible for the selection of the illustrations.

The first volume, "Evolution," is by J. A. S. Watson, B.Sc. It is so good that we hope Messrs. Jack will forgive us for wishing it had been made even better by an index.

The War and Reading

FROM the very clear sixty-second annual report of the Libraries Committee of the Corporation of Bolton we learn that "The War has made little difference to the statistics, in fact there is an increase of 23,809 in the number of books borrowed from the lending libraries, but a considerable decrease in the number consulted in the reference library, 8,013 against 10,170 last year. Books on the causes of the War and on the countries affected continue to be largely used, and the specially published handlist of these was quickly out of print. Leaflets and pamphlets have also been received periodically from the Central Parliamentary Recruiting Committee, and have been distributed. Special facilities were given to Belgian refugees to borrow from the libraries, the foreign section being much appreciated."

How the Huns apply Nietzsche's Gospel

THE Observer of Sunday, Dec. 12th, 1915, has a most interesting tribute by Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, who helped her friend, Miss Edith Cavell, recently assassinated by Von Bissing, the German Governor of Brussels. On one occasion, on Miss Cavell's appealing to a German brigadier on behalf of some homeless women and children, her argument was answered by this quotation from Nietzsche: "Pity is a waste of feeling, a moral parasite injurious to the health." The judicial murder of Miss Cavell would have been an impossibility to the Germans of the sixties—nor will we believe it is endorsed by millions of them to-day.

From the Berlin Morgenpost (Morning Post) of December 5th, 1915

THE German wives and mothers, in their pathetic little newspaper notices in verse of the deaths of their beloved heroes in the enemy's land, refer to them as giving their lives in defence of their country and

"Als opfer dieses furchtbaren Weltkrieges," or "Als opfer des unermesslichen Weltkrieges"—"As a victim of this frightful world-war," or "Of this inhuman world war." The lament of the parents and brothers and sisters of a young Grenadier of the Guard, has this accusing verse:—

"Wer hat den Weltkrieg gewollt?
Er wisse, dass die Welt ihm grölzt,
Denn was der Krieg schon riss in Fetzen,
Das Kann kein Mensch, kein Gott ersetzen
Und wer ihn mutwillig hat entbrannt,
Dem Fluch der Menschheit sei verbannt."

Which may be briefly translated:—

"He who willed this world-wide war
Will be damned by humanity evermore."

A sentiment which all the fighting nations, and all the neutral nations too, can subscribe to! The notice informs us that this young Grenadier of the Guard was killed by a grenade. All these very touching lamentations of German mothers, wives and sweethearts over their beloved dead have the sad note which rings so finely in "Das Grab am Buzento."

Natural Geography

THE teacher of natural geography directed all her pupils to write a definition of the word "geyser." Willie evolved this definition: "A kaiser is a disturbance of the earth's surface."—New York Evening Post.

Rare and Beautiful Books

"As good almost kill a man as a good book," said Milton, and a good book will live on through many generations of men if cared for. In their No. 341 catalogue Messrs. Maggs Bros. give a list of nearly 400 rare and beautiful books, manuscripts and bindings, which, having been well cared for, have increased in value with age. A feature of these catalogues issued by Messrs. Maggs is the most attractive way in which they are illustrated by reproductions of old illustrations and bindings and illuminations. For instance Plate XI is from a fifteenth century miniature representing St. Columba. The miniature is set in a border "gorgeously illuminated with flowers, birds, and butterflies on a gold ground." The butterflies appear to be Red Admirals and Brown Fritillaries, evidently done from life more than four centuries ago. We have space to mention only a very few of the treasures so admirably and lovingly described. Folio, a very fine copy, in the original calf of the first (1620) edition of Bacon's "Novum Organum" (£75). Two original manuscript poems, believed to be unpublished, entirely in the hand of Charlotte Brontë and signed by her (£75). A first edition of "Nicholas Nickleby," with four of the original drawings by Phiz (£150). The original manuscript of Emerson's "Ode Inscribed to W. H. Channing" (£42). Gower's "Confessio Amantis": even with fifteen leaves in excellent facsimile this fine Caxton folio stands at £340. The first folio of the collected works of "Rare" Ben Jonson (£72), and the first edition of his "Entertainment," both parts, 1604

(£140). A copy of the excessively rare original folio broadside of Charles II's Proclamation, ordering the burning by the common hangman of John Milton's two books (£25). In an earlier reign Milton might have been burned with his books.

For our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors

IN the P.C. for November 13th, 1915, we had an announcement of the Exhibition of Pictures by Arthur G. Bell, R.I., R.O.I., to be held at Southbourne-on-Sea, in aid of the Fund for our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors. We are very glad to hear from Mrs. Bell, so well known as "N. d'Anvers," as follows:—

"Southbourne-on-Sea, Hants,
December 14th, 1915.

"DEAR MR. MARSTON,—Isn't it grand! We have made £204 by our Exhibition for the Blinded, £70 of which is to go to the Bournemouth Blind Aid Society, and the remainder to St. Dunstan's Hostel, in Regent's Park. Will you be so good as to announce this in your publication which has aided in making it known?—Yours very sincerely,

"NANCY BELL."

Book Auction Sales

ON December 6th, 7th and 8th, Messrs. Sotheby sold the library of Lothrop Withington, an American citizen drowned in the Lusitania. The most important lots were:—

New England Historical and Genealogical Register, 73 vols., 1847-1915, £14 10s.; Dictionary of National Biography, 25 vols., 1908-12, £10 7s. 6d.; a large collection of notes or transcripts of wills, Parish Registers, &c., made for the purpose of tracing genealogies, £210; Savage's Genealogical Dictionary of the first Settlers of New England, 4 vols., 1860, £10. The total of the sale was £1,013 9s. 6d.

ON December 9th and 10th, Messrs. Sotheby sold the modern books from the library of the late Mr. George Dunn, the chief prices being:—

Ackermann's Histories of the Universities and Colleges, 7 vols., 1812-16, £43; a large collection of almanacks, 1629-1881, £38; Catalogue of Works by T. & J. Bewick, 1851, extra illustrated, £11 5s.; Bibliographical Society's Publications, 1893-1912, £12 10s.; Buck's Antiquities, 2 vols., 1774, £10 15s.; Calendar of Rolls and State Papers, 89 vols., £25; Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain and Ireland, 33 vols., £13 15s.; Dictionary of National Biography, 68 vols., 1885-1904, £12 10s.; Du Cange's Glossarium, 7 vols., 1840-50, £10 10s.; Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 8 vols., 1817-30, £10 10s.; Godefroy's Dictionnaire de l'Ancienne Langue Francaise, 10 vols., 1881-1902, £12; Hodgson's History of Northumberland, 7 vols., 1827-58, £10; Ben Jonson's Works, 1616, £10 5s.; Chaucer's Works, Kelmscott Press, 1896, £60; Lambert's Description of the Genus Pinus, 3 vols., 1837, £49; Palæographical and New Palæographical Society's Publications, 8 vols., 1873-1911, £23; Proctor's Index to the Early Printed Books in the British Museum, with supplements, 1898-1903, another copy, £13; Quaritch's General Catalogue, with supplement, 17 vols., 1887-98, £15 10s.; Roberts' Views in the Holy Land, &c., 6 vols., 1842-6, £10 10s.; Surtees' History and Antiquities of the County of Durham, 5 vols., 1816-52, £13; Wilde's The Sphinx, 1894, £13.

The total of the sale was £1,355 2s. 6d.

England withdraws Embargo on Certain Foreign Books

THE Foreign Trade Adviser of the U.S. Department of State is in receipt of a communication from Sir Richard Crawford, Commercial Adviser of the British Embassy, stating that the British Government is prepared to issue permits for shipment to the United States of books in German or other language from the enemies of Great Britain, of a philosophical, scientific, technical or educational character, if specifically destined for universities, colleges or public bodies. Sir Richard Crawford states that it would be required that in all such applications for such permits the good faith of the application and the particular institution concerned should be vouched for by some official authority. The Librarian of Congress has indicated his willingness to act in the capacity indicated by Sir Richard Crawford, in passing upon these applications. The endorsement of the Librarian of Congress upon the application would be to the effect that he is satisfied that the application is genuine and that the volumes for which the application is made are in fact intended for the use of applicant institution.

If universities, colleges, or other public institutions interested in obtaining books of this character will forward their applications to the Librarian of Congress, the latter will pass upon them and after satisfying himself of the bona fides of the application and the proposed use of the books, so endorse the application, forwarding it to the Foreign Trade Adviser of the Department, who will in turn forward it to the British Embassy at Washington with an unofficial request that the permit for the shipment of the books in question be issued.—New York Publishers' Weekly.

Letters to the Editor

"Life in a Railway Factory"

DEAR SIR,—I am sorry and surprised that, in noticing my book, "Life in a Railway Factory," your reviewer should have said that I called the G.W.R. "the most formidable despot living." There is no hint of such a thing, and the words quoted did not relate to the railway company at all, as the context clearly shows. I made it patent to everyone that the G.W.R. directors are not to blame for any local discontent: it is the minor official who comes in for criticism and chastisement. I should be grateful if you could kindly print these few words, as, though I am a working man, I do not want to appear guilty of having made such a rancorous and ridiculous statement as that imputed to me in your notice of my book.—Believe me, yours faithfully, ALFRED WILLIAMS.

Dryden Cottage, South Marston,

December 14th.

[We gladly publish Mr. Williams' letter. In his preface he says, "I am not disposed to be fettered, smothered, gagged or silenced, to cower and tremble, or to shrink from uttering what I believe to be the truth in deference to the most formidable despot living." After reading his book we were forced to the conclusion that the twelve thousand men in the employ of the G.W.R. Co. at their works at Swindon are in the position he refuses to be in, viz., under "the most formidable despot living." Here is a quotation: "Notwithstanding the terrific nature of the hardships endured, the majority of the men at the factory do not show themselves seriously averse to the working of overtime."]

Here is another statement:—

"While the men are inside the walls of the factory they are under the most severe laws and restrictions, . . . they are indeed prisoners in every sense of the term." Surely the directors of the G.W.R. and their general manager are as responsible for such conditions, if they exist, in one part of their system as they are for conditions in any other part.—ED.]

"The Bond of Sacrifice"

DEAR SIR,—I should be much obliged if any of your readers can give me the address of a firm who are preparing a work under the title of "The Bond of Sacrifice," comprising portraits and memoirs of officers who have lost their lives in the present War.—Yours faithfully,

J. E. HODGSON.

"J. B. P." and Moxon's "Miniature Poets"

DEAR SIR,—These are the initials of John Bertrand Payne, the manager of the business of Messrs. E. Moxon, Son & Co., from about 1868 to the time of its purchase by Messrs. Ward & Lock, about 1878. Some details of Mr. Payne will be found in "Some Reminiscences of William Michael Rossetti," Vol. 2, pp. 358-9 and 407; 8vo.; 1906.—Yours faithfully,

WM. H. PEET.

SIR FREDERICK MACMILLAN, in writing to us on another matter, kindly adds:—

"P.S.—By the way, I can answer a question asked by your correspondent Mr. F. S. Murray, in your issue of December 11th. The 'J. B. P.' which he finds in the verso of the title pages of Moxon's 'Miniature Poets' are the initials of J. Bertrand Payne, who carried on Moxon's business on behalf of Mr. Moxon after his death in 1858 until 1871, when such business as remained was sold to Ward, Lock & Tyler.—F. M."

Germany prohibits Export of Medical Books and Periodicals

DEAR SIR,—Allow me to draw your readers'—and especially the medical publishers'—attention to the fact that the German Government have prohibited the exportation of medical works and medical periodicals; and, although the German Publishers' Association have applied to the War Office in Berlin to withdraw the restriction, it has—so far—been in vain. Medical periodicals—of which not less than 400 are being published in Germany and Austria—have always been in great demand abroad—and in the countries which are at present remaining neutral the leading doctors and many of the medical students are regular subscribers to German periodicals. It seems to me, therefore, that there is a good opportunity to introduce British medical periodicals and British medical works on a larger scale in neutral countries now that German medical books which are used at the neutral universities can no longer be had. Yours truly,

C. A. BANG.

The position of George Cruikshank as Artist

DEAR SIR,—As a constant reader of your valuable paper I feel under obligation to thank you for the kind and appreciative notice appearing in your issue of the 13th instant headed "A Few Notes upon some Rare Cruikshankiana," by Albert M. Cohn.

This is a pamphlet of exceptional interest and value to the collector, and reflects the greatest credit upon its author, who is well-known as an enthusiastic collector and authority upon the works of the three Cruikshanks.

In this instance he confines himself to a bibliographical and artistic consideration of a few comparatively trifling works of George Cruikshank, but of exceptional rarity.

In so far as the reviewer's remarks are so confined, I quite approve and concur with him, but when he refers to one of the greatest artistic geniuses as the "quaint and curious old book illustrator, who may fairly be described as the Hogarth of the nineteenth century, a little Hogarth," I at once take exception and protest.

Of George Cruikshank it must be said, "none but himself can be his parallel." Judged from an artistic standpoint, in all but colour, he is essentially great and "second to none."

Contemporary critics saw, appreciated and did him justice, but in the artistic world of the present day he is either ignored or slighted, and any modern criticism I have ever heard or read is shallow and incompetent; even his defenders are timid and uninformed. Personally, I refrain from comparisons, but desire to keep alive the "Memory of his genius and his art, His matchless industry and worthy work For all his fellow-men."

I am familiar with all the points referred to in the pamphlet, and the several illustrations are known to me. As I write, the frontispiece, "Popping the Question," is before me; it is exceptionally fine, and I regret to say the reproduction fails to do it justice. Kindly accept this in the spirit in which it is written, and believe me to be, yours faithfully,

ROBT. T. NAISMITH.

From Messrs. H. R. Allenson, Ltd.—
"To Boys: Talks on Parade," by J. Williams Butcher. The twenty-four chapters of Mr. Butcher's book each contain a straight and clear address to boys on moral and religious subjects. They are such as would be heard with attention by their particular audience, for they are strong and direct and full of illustrative anecdote.

From the Cambridge University Press.—
"Studies of Exploration and Discovery," by Arthur B. Archer, M.A. A fascinating book of geography-cum-history intended to be used in the middle forms of our schools. The history of exploration is covered from the founding of Carthage to the death of Captain Scott in 1912, and is elucidated by means of maps, charts and illustrations. Any boy will devour the book for the sake of its interest and learn at the same time a great deal that would otherwise come to him in the hated form of "lessons."

From Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd.—
"My Own Past," by Maude M. C. Ffoulkes. It would be strange if the vivacious lady who describes herself as "joint author" of so many vivacious books failed to interest us when she relates the story of her own life. Joint author, for instance, of the sensational "Recollections" of the late Countess of Cardigan, of the "My Own Story," of the Ex-Crown Princess of Saxony, of Lord Rossmore's "Things I Can Tell," Countess Marie Larisch's "My Past," there is something out of the ordinary about these sprightly pages of biography, and autobiography. For one thing, we are let into the secret of how some of what Mrs. Ffoulkes calls "literary sensations" are "engineered"! Nothing could be more generous and evidently genuine than this author's acknowledgments of the help she received from her literary friends, especially from Mr. Douglas Sladen and Mr. Eveleigh Nash. She is nothing if not candid. For instance, while agreeing with Mr. Nash's verdict that any capable journalist could have written the books as well as herself, she adds, "but I think I may be allowed to say that it required a neurotic temperament like my own to understand the highly strung people with whom I so successfully collaborated." This is perfectly true, and certainly no man journalist, however capable, would have had the "nerve" to do it. Even Mr. Nash himself, it seems, got a bit nervous over the reception of the Cardigan scandals. It is refreshing to hear from Mrs. Ffoulkes that after she had written Lady Cardigan's "Recollections," and there was a demand in certain quarters for its suppression, she called on her ladyship and told her that people said she had imagined the story—a particularly horrible one. "Nothing of the kind; it's all true. I've no patience with such silliness. I wish I had said a great deal more in my book." After that we can easily understand that there may be truth in the story related on the next page, viz., that when King Edward was approached to exercise his prerogative and command the book to be withdrawn, he said, "Let Lady Cardigan alone; there's no telling what she will do next if she is interfered with"—another proof of His Majesty's good sense and sense of humour. Although she has been the means of giving so much scandal to the world, we do not find that there is anything in her book that would give one the impression that scandal is in "her line," as it were. She is asked, as a business proposition, to write a sensational "best-seller," and she does it, and now she tells us how she does it, in an equally frank, straightforward manner. There is surely nothing but the milk of human kindness in Frederick Townsend Martin's "Reminiscences," and probably a good many people will be surprised to find that Mrs. Ffoulkes wrote them also, which only shows she has a genius for writing other people's memoirs and has displayed not a little of it in writing her own.

From the Same.—
"A Woman's Love," by Silas K. Hocking. Sadie Huntingdon is an old-fashioned girl of domesticated tastes and frequent blushes. Val Chesham, who is engaged to a dreadful Suffragette of brazen demeanour, loses his heart at once to the lady of the blushes, even while attempting to remain faithful to the Cause-ridden female. Apart from the chapters which hold up for contempt the Emancipated Woman, there are others which develop a little melodrama in Sadie's castle in Wales, and at the end of all the chapters comes the happy union of Val and Sadie. Mr. Hocking deals in violent contrasts, and his colouring is apt to appear crude.

From Messrs. Chapman & Hall, Ltd.—
"News from 'Somewhere,'" by James Milne. Twenty-five charming and thoughtful impressions of war-stricken England gather below the title "News from 'Somewhere.'" "War-stricken" is perhaps hardly the word to apply to the England of Mr. Milne's point of view. He shows us England strung up to chivalrous enterprise, gay and tender in face of danger, hospitable to homeless folk from devastated countrysides, an England pouring out wealth, energy and soul in defence of home and ideal. In "Blow, Bugles, Blow!" he resurrects some of the phrases from soldiers' letters that have appeared in the daily Press, and cementing them with the happy knack of just writing which is his own particular style, makes of the composition an essay fit to be treasured as a worthy memento of the Great War. London in war time receives a series of vignettes, clean-cut and true. Paris also receives her meed of recognition, and perhaps the most delicate tribute in the book is paid to the Parisienne in war time. Mr. Milne has written a book which, though it may be read cursorily now, will be turned to years hence as a fitting echo of the present time.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—“Country Sights and Sounds,” by G. T. Rope. Mr. Rope walks abroad noting and observing domestic life among the denizens of our trees and hedges, the ways of plant, animal and bird life. He is a sympathetic and a tender observer and the descriptions he writes when he reaches home are worth the attention of every nature lover. Many of the papers collected in the present volume have appeared in The Selbourne Magazine, The Zoologist, and Science Gossip, and they are well worth a prolonged life in book form.

From the Same.—“War and Christianity,” by Vladimir Solovyof. With an Introduction by Stephen Graham. Solovyof was, before his death in 1901, a leader of Russian thought, and by many of his admirers is held to be the greatest philosopher produced by that country. The present volume contains three of his writings couched in the form of conversations, expressing theories and opinions on the subjects of war and religion that controvert in a sane and convincing manner the points of view put forward by Tolstoy and the Positivists. The translation has been excellently done and the work is a distinct addition to Messrs. Constable's “Russian Library.”

From the Same.—“Geographical Aspects of Balkan Problems,” by Marion I. Newbiggin, D.Sc. Lond. Dr. Newbiggin, elucidates the geography of the Balkans in a way that sheds light upon the whole field of Balkan problems. The structure of the peninsula, its inevitable effect upon politics, Turkish and Austrian interests and aspirations, the main trade routes and the varied peoples of the neighbour States, all these are shown in direct relationship. Climate and agricultural methods also have their place in the general survey and it is impossible for the reader to lay down the book at its conclusion without having gained much understanding of a question that, to many English people, is dark and almost inscrutable. Several helpful sketch maps are included as well as a coloured map of south-eastern Europe.

From the Same.—“Attila and the Huns,” by Edward Hutton. Many of us, having studied a little history in our youth with the reluctance that breeds forgetting have had frequent cause since the outbreak of war to search our hazy memories. To many of us, therefore, Mr. Hutton has done a real kindness in preparing a brief, lucid and interestingly written monograph of Attila. Somebody—was it the Kaiser himself?—having compared Wilhelm II of Germany with the greatest of the Huns, has had his comparison reiterated until a slight knowledge of fifth century doings has become a necessity of polite intercourse. At the end of Mr. Hutton's history are arranged the sources from which he has compiled his work and an elucidatory map of Europe in A.D. 450.

From the Same.—“The North-West Amazons,” by Thomas Whiffen, F.R.G.S., F.R.A.I., Captain H.P. (14th Hussars). Captain Whiffen spent the year 1908-9 in exploring the bush lying between the rivers Apaporis, Japura, Igara and Issa, tributaries of the Amazon. Other explorers have gone before him into this obnoxious region, but none has penetrated in quite the same direction. Captain Whiffen, therefore, has gathered a wealth of additional knowledge which should be of the utmost use to future travellers, and is, in his written record, a mine of interest to the armchair discoverer. The country itself, its vegetable and insect pests and attractions, are colloquially described. The curious tribes living in the oppressive silence and dampness of the bush are written about in a familiar and almost affectionate manner, until they and their habits, their black magic, tendernesses and cruelties become vividly present to the reader's mind. Captain Whiffen took the eye of a scientist and the heart of an artist with him on his perilous undertaking, and his book is a delightful compound of humanity and information. The appended vocabularies of the differing languages spoken by several Indian tribes are amazing in their fulness, and the numerous photographs add value to a noteworthy book.

From Messrs. Constable & Co. Ltd., and Messrs. Geo. H. Ellis & Co., Boston, U.S.A.—“Legends of Old Honolulu.” Collected and translated from the Hawaiian by W. D. Westervelt. Tragedy and comedy run side by side through these South Sea legends. Gods and goddesses tower in the place allotted in Europe to fairies and in Asia to genii. Nature, to the Pacific islander, is more often oppressive than beneficent. The legends collected by Mr. Westervelt narrate the divine origin of many everyday articles such as cloth and breadfruit. In almost every case there is divine anger and the shedding of blood. Man was created by the gods, who moulded an image of soil and pushed into it a spirit of the air. Woman was taken from out of his sleeping body very much in the manner of Genesis. The book is of the greatest interest both to the student and to the reader of stories.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—“Pointed Roofs,” by Dorothy M. Richardson. A clever and ardent girl leaves her English home to become governess-pupil in a German school. Germany in anticipation is to her a vision of Hermann and Dorothea in the dusk of a happy village. The Germany she encounters is the home of efficiency, kindness and content, sober virtues kindled to a glow by the fire of fine music. Beyond the slight incidents of school life, of leaving home and returning thither, there is no plot. The book—evidently written before the outbreak of war—is a fresh and vivid picture, revealing impressions made on an eye sensitive to colour and changing expression. The characters of the tale live and are psychologically convincing, and yet the reader is constantly aware that the authoress has been at pains to create a picture rather than to analyse character or to develop a series of events to a logical conclusion. “Pointed Roofs” is a fine and individual piece of work, and its writer should rank among our foremost writers of the day.

From Mr. Samuel French.—“Richard's Play,” by Mary C. Rowsell and Joseph J. Dillon. A costume comedietta in one act which has already received frequent performance. The period is that of George II and the mounting required is sufficiently simple for private theatricals.

From Messrs. Alexander Gardner (Paisley).—“Selections from the Collected Writings of Edward Irving,” edited by the Rev. Gavin Carlyle, M.A. A few articles on Bible subjects, four on Social questions, and seven dealing with various aspects of religion are comprised in the volume of selections chosen by the Rev. Gavin Carlyle from among the extensive writings of one of the most worthy popular of English preachers. High religious thought, a broad and tolerant outlook and an eloquence rarely surpassed were the chief characteristics both of the spoken and written word of Irving—characteristics which are manifest on every page of Mr. Carlyle's selections.

From Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton & Co., Ltd.—“Plants We Play With,” by H. R. Robertson, R.E., R.M.S. This delightful and original little volume will give the nursery folk many happy hours both indoors and out of doors. The author gives a short account, charmingly illustrated in colour and black and white, of twenty different plants which children use for games in their playtime hours. Among these many plant games there are sure to be some not yet known to the children which they will be able to try for themselves.

From Messrs. Grafton & Co.—“Canons of Classification,” by W. C. Berwick Sayers. Mr. Sayers is the chief librarian of the Wallasey Public Libraries and has already written a couple of books on library formation and the practical classification of books. In the present volume he deals with various methods of bibliographical classification in clear and easily followed language. The book is one that should be useful to all inexperienced and to many experienced librarians.

From Messrs. Greening & Co.—“Charles Baudelaire: His Life,” by Théophile Gautier. Translated into English, with selections from his poems, “Little Poems in Prose,” and Letters to Saint-Beuve and Flaubert, and an Essay on his Influence, by Guy Thorne. The decadent spirit of Baudelaire, vivid with the beauty of phosphorescence, has found in Mr. Guy Thorne a worthy medium. The verses of Mr. Thorne are rather after Baudelaire than translations from his work; they faithfully convey the poet's mood and imagery while paying no great attention to literalness—surely the only way in which to transcribe poetry from one language to another! In the concluding essay the influence of Baudelaire upon English writers is traced and analysed, especially in the work of Pater, Swinburne, Ernest Dowson, and Oscar Wilde. The greatest attraction of the volume to many readers, however, will be the inimitable appreciation of his fellow-countryman by Théophile Gautier, a translation of which occupies the first half of the book. Four excellent photogravures of Baudelaire and his friends appear as illustrations.

From Messrs. Heath, Cranton & Ouseley.—“Tales of Old California,” by Car Gray. Twelve short stories illustrative of the Spanish element in Californian life are collected under the title “Tales of Old California.” For the chief part they are love tales, tales of dancing, passion and murder, written to suit the casual reader of light fiction.

From the Same.—“A Passionate Pilgrimage,” by Charles Beadle. The pilgrimage of Jim Litham from the age of nineteen to that of maturity takes him through a period of “wild oats” in London to a brief career with the Rhodesian Mounted Police and an honourable part in the South African War. It leaves him in England after more “wild oats,” mated to the woman of his ultimate choice. Although the incidents of such a novel are many and exciting, the main interest lies in the analysis of Jim's successive emotions and in the recital of his love affairs. The book is sincere and well written, but the flavour of it is bitter.

From Mr. Wm. Heinemann.—“The Drama of Three Hundred and Sixty-five Days,” by Hall Caine. Sixty-two vivid impressions of persons and events connected with the War have been contributed by Mr. Hall Caine to the Daily Telegraph, and are now gathered into a volume with an excellent photogravure of the Prince of Wales in khaki as "frontispiece." The author has used his powers of fervour, enthusiasm and quick imagination in composing these short sketches. They are bound to appeal to a wide public, whose many bereaved members will be heartened and cheered by Mr. Hall Caine's sympathetic and humane outlook.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"Between St. Denis and St. George," by Ford Madox Hueffer. In a happy quotation from Henry V, "Shall not thou and I, between St. Denis and St. George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople, and take the Turk by the beard?" Mr. Ford Madox Hueffer finds a text for his spirited defence of the Anglo-French Alliance against the unpopular attacks of Messrs. Bernard Shaw, Brailsford and Co. The tiny following accorded to these anti-war gentlemen is hardly worth Mr. Hueffer's brilliant efforts.

From the Same.—"Bramble Bees and Others," by J. Henri Fabre. Translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos, F.Z.S. All the essays on wild bees contained in the "Souvenirs Entomologiques," with the exception of those dealing with mason-bees, have been collected and translated to form the present volume. Mr. de Mattos has done the work of translation exceedingly well. The essays of the famous entomologist emerge in English bearing all the characteristic marks of the originals—the dry humour veiling a very real affection for the creatures under scrutiny, the tolerant philosophy peeping out from between arrays of brutal facts—all that makes readers of M. Fabre delight in his work for other reasons than for the mass of valuable information to be acquired. The story of wild bees as unfolded by patient, laborious and meticulous research provides a chapter in world-lore second to none in vivid interest.

From the Same.—"Theism and Humanism." Being the Gifford Lectures delivered at the University of Glasgow, 1914, by the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour. The linking of God and humanity in a "natural" religion is the aim of the Gifford lectures as laid down by their founder. In January and February, 1914, Mr. Balfour, being Gifford Lecturer for that year, delivered the lectures which are contained in the present volume. Disclaiming with great modesty any special knowledge of either metaphysics or theology, the lecturer leaves both paths aside in favour of what he calls a "point of view." The beliefs on which men act rather than the beliefs about which they argue provide Mr. Balfour's approaches to a faith which, as he confesses, is, at the end of all his thought, very much like the faith held by men and women who never think at all! A wealth of careful thought and humane reasoning is expressed in the measured and choice language of the sequent lectures. They will be read, remembered and enjoyed both by men and women who agree and by those who disagree with the main line of argument.

From the Same.—"Through Terror to Triumph." Speeches and Pronouncements of the Right Hon. David Lloyd George, M.P., since the beginning of the War, arranged by F. L. Stevenson, B.A. Great popularity is assured for this vivid and arresting compilation. Mr. Lloyd George's speeches in the House, his public addresses since the outbreak of war and his appeals to the munition workshops have been drawn upon to produce a book the culminating effect of which is to stir patriotism to its uttermost depths. No recruiting sergeant speaks with so silvery, seductive and passionate a note and yet hardly one address is a direct appeal for men, although all plead for enthusiastic unity on behalf of a beloved land.

From the Same.—"Flower of the Dust" by John Oxenham. Mr. and Mrs. Brown live on a barge and earn their daily bread by conveying refuse from the city along the Grand Junction Canal to the distant rubbish dump. Amid these unsavoury surroundings little Hilary Brown is born and passes the first eight years of her life. After that period her father misses his footing, as a conclusion to Saturday night's debauch, and is drowned. During another year, life for Hilary, her mother and brother is continued on picnicking principles on shore. As the result of the strenuousness of prolonged picnicking Mrs. Brown dies, and Hilary's real education then begins in a charity institution. How she progresses through her school career, a period as "general," others as nurse and nurse-companion to the realisation of her grand ambition, that of becoming a hospital nurse, will be eagerly followed by the reader, for this human and kindly story contains some of the best work that John Oxenham has given his public.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"A Book of Myths," by Mrs. John Lang. In this collection of myths, not only many of the most celebrated have been told, but also many of the less well-known tales. In each case the author has endeavoured to give a vivid picture that will impress the story on the memories of the young people for whom the book is written. The aim of the author has also been to simplify for those who are not erudite scholars the stories of mythology, to which constant reference is made, not only in the classics, but also in modern poetry, and to direct the attention of her readers to poems not already known to them. The book is illustrated beautifully with twenty drawings in colour by Helen Stratton and handsomely bound in green cloth.

From Messrs. Chas. Kelly.—"The Red-cap's Annual." The large clear type makes this Annual very suitable for the little ones who are beginning to read. The stories are jolly, the pictures amusing, in colour and black and white; also there are many verses suitable for recitation.

From the Same.—"The Lost Fairy Tales," by H. L'Estrange Malone, author of "Nipping Bear," "Shaggy the Great," &c. Boris and his little sister Sasha run away from home while their mother and father are absent, and this story tells of their adventures in the forest. The book is illustrated with eight full-page pictures in colour and 144 other illustrations by Gordon Robinson.

From the Same.—"Mushrooms on the Moor," by F. W. Boreham. Twenty-five essays are contained in Mr. Boreham's "Mushrooms on the Moor." They take as their subjects many topics, from literature to pigs, each being dealt with in a pleasantly discursive manner, touched by a religious outlook. They have evidently been written in colonial surroundings, and the peep into Tasmanian ways and habits which is afforded now and again provides an additional attraction.

From Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd.—"Old Age Pensions," by H. J. Hoare, B.Sc., LL.B. Mr. Hoare shows the scheme of Old Age Pensions in its actual working by describing and analysing its effect upon the lives of the poor. He also sets forth the scope of the Act and the conditions it imposes upon would-be beneficiaries. He points out its merits and demerits and renders obvious the need for alteration and improvement. His task has been undertaken with impartiality and humanity and his clear and ordered chapters should prove of benefit to all who have this great measure of relief at heart.

From Messrs. Luzac & Co.—"Lord Kitchener and His Work in Palestine," by Dr. Samuel Dauckes. Selections from the reports, letters and articles written by Lord Kitchener during his Palestine exploration work are included in Dr. Dauckes's interesting little book, which gives an outline of the work done in Palestine now nearly forty years ago by our great Commander-in-Chief, whose indomitable energy and unequalled thoroughness in small as in great undertakings, are clearly shown.

From Mr. Erskine Macdonald.—"The Further Goal and Other Poems," by Gilbert Thomas. With an introduction by Arthur Waugh. "The Twentieth Century Poetry Series" is growing apace. Its latest addition is a slim volume from the pen of Mr. Gilbert Thomas, containing a number of short and pleasant poems. Genius is not perhaps to be found in the brief pages, but talent for versemaking, fair craftsmanship and a poetic and vivid imagination are all possessed by the new writer.

From the Same.—"A Crown of Amaranth." Under this title are grouped a number of short poems written in memory of our fallen soldiers and sailors, culled from the pages of newspapers and magazines. Among the many authors drawn upon are Laurence Binyon, Katharine Tynan, Canon Scott and Captain Julian Grenfell. It will be remembered that the last named was the second of the two famous brother polo players to fall in the war.

From the Same.—"The Youth of Beauty and Other Poems," by Cecil Roberts. With a Foreword by Prof. D. MacMillan, Litt.D. The little paper-clad volumes of "The Twentieth Century Poetry Series" contain some charming lyric verse, though perhaps none excels Mr. Roberts' in lyric quality. He uses metre with the skill of a master, and many of his lines sing with a quality only attained by a perfect ear. The poems show a gentle and imaginative spirit.

From the Same.—To the delightful "Little Books of Georgian Verse" are now added "Heather Ways," by Hylda C. Cole, "The Fields of Heaven," by Nora Tynan O'Mahony, "Manx Song and Maiden Song," by Mona Douglas, and "Poems," by Lieut. C. A. Macartney. The high level of attainment reached by these little books is astonishing, and much real poetry is enshrined in their pages.

From the Same.—"Wings of Desire," by E. Hamilton Moore. Mr. Moore's new novel carries along the eloping couple of "The Rut." Laura, the young girl, and Metcalfe, the middle-aged man, pursue a honeymoon of two years' wandering which gradually declines into a state of dissatisfaction on both sides. They settle down in London, and their divergent temperaments and disparity in age lead to the failure of the lives of both. Metcalfe buries himself in crustaceans and finally dies of heart failure. Laura runs through the life of underhand immorality that so many novelists paint as typical of upper middle class London, and at the end of all, suffers the consciousness of defeat. The characters of the book are for the most part selfish and depressing, and the skill with which they are drawn only accentuates the bitter flavour of the aspect of life which Mr. Moore has chosen to depict.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—"The Pentecost of Calamity," by Owen Wister. Germany, as the peaceful, ordered home of a contented and cultured people, impressed Mr. Wister to such an extent that, compared with its fair cities, "Paris was shabby and incoherent, London full of unrest"; in fact, pre-War Germany was this travelling American's "spiritual home." The shock of war caused an upheaval in Mr. Wister's opinions and he now thinks that Germany has been poisoned by Prussianism and is nearing her death pangs. He sets down his pre-War impressions and his present-day opinions in fluent and picturesque language, and his book is, to say the least, eminently readable.

From Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd.—"The Struggle for Existence: Mr. Sherbrass's Form of It," by Austen Somers. The four short stories contained in "Mr. Sherbrass's Form of It" form the second volume of Mr. Austen Somers' "Comedy Series." Each story is either ironic or fantastic, and an apparent absence of sympathy between the author and his characters causes the reader's interest to flag almost before it is aroused.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—"The Naval Crown: Ballads and Songs of the War," by C. Fox-Smith. There is a fine roll and a real taste of the salt in Miss Fox-Smith's sea songs. Occasional stanzas take the reader back to the work of Masefield and Noyes, but apart from these, probably unconscious similarities, the verses are strong, virile and individual. All of them are concerned with the new dangers and zests of sea traffic in war-time, and the spirited rhythm will probably lead to some of the shorter ballads being set to music for which they are obviously fitted.

From the Medici Society.—Of the charming "Memorabilia" booklets, we have received Nos. 1 to 8, and 101 to 106. They are quaintly printed and furnished, each with a suitable envelope, rendering them convenient for use as Christmas gifts. The earlier numbers include a book of little-known English carols, another of French carols, the fifteenth century poem, "Quia Amore Languet," Milton's "Ode on the Morning of Christ's Nativity," Gray's "Elegy," Wordsworth's "Happy Warrior," Browning's "Christmas Eve" and "Easter Day." Numbers 101 to 106 contain reproductions of famous pictures on the subjects, "The Visitation of Mary," "The Adoration of the Magi," "The Flight into Egypt," "The Life of Christ," "Saint George," and "Saint Francis."

From Messrs. A. & R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd.—"And Mary Sings Magnificat," by the Ven. E. E. Holmes, B.D. With six illustrations in colour by Lilian J. Pocock. Miss Pocock's finely designed and artistically coloured illustrations turn Canon Holmes' treatise on the Virgin, Mary into a dainty Christmas gift book. The hymn legend "Away! With Loyal Hearts," furnishes the theme of the discourse and one of its lines "And Mary Sings Magnificat" supplies the title. The hymn is printed on the opening page together with music by the Rev. J. B. Powell.

From the Same.—"The Temple and the Doctrine of Holiness," by Evelyn W. Hippisley. A chronological table of Jewish history is followed by a description of Solomon's Temple, accompanied by explanatory diagrams. Herod's Temple is subjected to the same process, and the whole forms a most useful book for Sunday School teaching purposes.

From the Same.—"Missionary Principles and the Primate on Kikuyu." Three Addresses with some Observations on the Present German Movement in the Church of England, by the Rev. Leighton Pullan, M.A. The addresses, observations and explanations are worth the attention of readers interested in missionary questions. The Rev. Mr. Pullan's scathing remarks on "second-hand versions of second-rate German divinity" will be received with favour.

From the Same.—"A Short History of the Evangelical Movement," by the Right Hon. George W. E. Russell. John Wesley, George Whitefield, William Wilberforce, Hannah More and Marianne Thornton are prominent figures in Mr. Russell's delightfully clear and fluent History. The author, in his well-known easy, almost conversational style, much studded with quotation, traces the rise and development of the Evangelical Movement and studies its effect upon the social life of the time. The book is of value both for its manner and matter.

From the Same.—"Comfort and Consolation: Thoughts for the Bereaved." Extracts from sermons preached by the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Norwich, and the Archdeacon of London find place in this booklet, which should fulfil its mission of comforting the relatives of our fallen soldiers.

From "The National Review" Office, 14, Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, W.C.—"The Germans in England, 1066-1598," with Map of Hanseatic League, by Ian D. Colvin. We have read this work with much interest, and although we must admit we had no idea of the extent to which British trade and industry was injured by German competition through the great Hanseatic League and its ramifications, yet on the other hand we think Mr. Ian D. Colvin rather weakens his case by claiming that Germans financed English kings and found the sinews of war for their great campaigns in France, engineered the Wars of the Roses, set up and deposed our kings, and supported the Spanish Armada enormously. The author says that our historians have all been ridiculously blind to the immense importance of German secret trade influence on the affairs of this country from the time when they enabled William to conquer us to the time, after the defeat of the German-Spanish Armada, when Good Queen Bess turned the Germans out of England, bag and baggage. We are told that this book "shows that Germany was ever a dangerous enemy of Great Britain"—the impartial reader will, we think, come to the conclusion that Great Britain has ever been a much more dangerous enemy to Germany—it was, as Mr. Colvin shows, mainly English commercial energy which broke up all the competition of the Hanseatic League and reduced it to the state of being a mere nominis umbra. Although we think the author has somewhat weakened his case, especially by attacks on living politicians supposed—most unfairly—to have German success more at heart than British; yet we think Mr. Colvin has done good service by rubbing in the fact that for hundreds of years German craft and business craft beat us in our own markets and all others, chiefly by underhand work, just as she hoped in this war to do it by under-sea attacks.

From Messrs. Nisbet & Co., Ltd.—"Lanöe Falconer," by Evelyn March-Phillips. Admirers of "Mademoiselle Ixe" will find in Miss March-Phillips' book a sympathetic account of its authoress. "Lanöe Falconer's" real name was Mary Elizabeth Hawker, and she was a member of a well-known Hampshire family. Many years of her life were spent on the Continent in the company of her mother, sisters and step-father, although the bulk of the humorous and cheerful narrative supplied by Miss March-Phillips refers to the family life in Hampshire. Mary Hawker died in 1908, aged sixty, after a comparatively uneventful existence. Many chapters are devoted to "Lanöe Falconer's" literary work, "The Hôtel d'Angleterre" and "Cécilie de Noël" receiving especial attention. A few photographs illustrate a book which charms by its evocation of a gay and gentle character.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—"Some Musicians of Former Days," by Romain Rolland. Translated by Mary Blaiklock. Beginning with the early morning of musical art—the music used in the later developments of Greece and Rome—Mr. Rolland traces the history of his subject up to the time of Mozart. He links up the various phases of musical thought with the national life from which they sprang, producing as a result an absorbing narrative of human evolution. Sketches of the careers of Luigi Rossio, Lully, Gluck, Grétry and Mozart follow, each one imbued with the critical thought and virility of treatment for which this notable French writer is famous. An excerpt from Luigi Rossi's "Orfeo," the first opera to be produced in Paris, concludes the volume. The work of translation has been excellently done.

From the Same.—"The British Coal Trade," by H. Stanley Jevons, M.A., B.Sc., F.S.S., F.G.S. Mr. Jevons' book is not a technical or commercial treatise. It is a readable, indeed in parts thrilling, account of the coal mining industry, viewed from both economic and social points of view. There is, of course, an alloy of technical and geological information which will be regarded as valuable by the expert reader. The question of the nationalisation of mines is treated in a serious and impartial spirit, and the author's argument cannot be refuted that "no adequate discussion of the subject matter in or out of Parliament will be possible while the present widespread ignorance of modern methods of working coal exists." This ignorance Mr. Jevons has done his best to remove. Photographic illustrations, maps and charts in abundance help towards an understanding of a little studied although exceedingly important branch of our national life.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—"Little Sir Galahad," by Phoebe Gray. The author dedicates this charming story to "everyone who delights in the love of children and believes in human salvation through love and service." A fine little character is Mary Alice Brown.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.—"The Soul of a Nation," preached by the Right Hon. and Right Rev. Arthur F. Winnington-Ingram, D.D., Lord Bishop of London. With a long descriptive "Publisher's Note" is printed Dr. Ingram's fine and memorable sermon to the City of London Territorials on July 25 of this year. The sermon, preached from the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral to the serried ranks of soldiers encased in a dense throng of civilian worshippers, will in future years make a worthy reminder of the courageous days in which we live.

Published by Authority.—Supplement No. 4, carrying forward to August 31st, 1915, is now issued, in continuation of Supplement No. 3 to the "Manual of Emergency Legislation, comprising all the Acts of Parliament Proclamations, Orders, &c., passed and made in consequence of the War, with an Introductory Note and an Analytical Index," edited by Alexander Pulling, C.B. Mr. Pulling's Introductory Note occupies several pages and gives a lucid summary of the changes in law effected during the last few months.

From The Religious Tract Society.—"The Sunday at Home." This volume for 1914-15 is most interesting, especially the numerous articles and stories bearing on the War, which will appeal to all readers. Ella Mary Ferguson gives a delightful serial story entitled "A Melody in Tune." There are many short stories and poems, also a series of "brief meditations for the sick and lonely," and a useful series for teachers and others called "Points and Parables," and the series, "Paragraphs and Pictures," being miscellaneous notes on matters of general interest. For the children there are stories and story sermons. The volume is profusely illustrated throughout, and there are twenty-five plates and page pictures.

From the Same.—"The Girl's Own Annual and Woman's Magazine." This volume is most attractively got up in green cloth with a charming photo of H.R.H. Princess Mary on the front cover, with pretty pictured title-page, illustrated end-papers, and coloured frontispiece—"Roscs"—from the painting by Maude Angell. Not only in appearance is the volume desirable, but from almost any point of view it will be found to justify its title. The stories are refreshing and amusing, whether short or serial, of which there are two particularly good ones: "The Brown Study," by Grace Richmond, and "The Independence of Claire," by Mrs. George De Horne Vaizey. The editor's page is always most interesting, also a series of articles, "Thoughts on the Out of Doors," and "Pieces from a Patchwork Bag." Among the many useful articles are some on cooking, dress-making, needlework (fancy and plain), housekeeping, fashions for girls and children, and so on. The volume is most excellently illustrated throughout with photographs, sketches, &c., and several coloured plates.

From Messrs. Seeley, Service & Co., Ltd.—"Stories of Indian Heroes," by Edward Gilliat, M.A. With coloured frontispiece and many illustrations in black and white. In the preface of this book we read: "President Roosevelt has eulogized our rule in India in a recent speech: 'It is a greater feat than was performed under the Roman Empire . . . indeed, if English control were now withdrawn from India, the whole peninsula would become a chaos of bloodshed and violence.'" British boys and girls ought to know something of how our mighty Indian Empire was built up; these stories are true and stirring records of the bravery, tact and resourcefulness of the men who helped to build it. History offered in this attractive way often makes more impression than that which is learnt from the class history book.

From the Same.—"The Adventures of a Cavalier," by G. I. Whitham. This book was originally issued under the title of "The Last of the White-coats"; it belongs to "The Royal Library for Boys and Girls," a series of handsome gift books by celebrated authors, illustrated in colour by well-known artists.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—"Escape" and Other Essays," by Arthur Christopher Benson. The essay form has undoubtedly been shaped and perfected by the needs of genius such as that possessed by A. C. Benson, whose particular meditative and philosophic trend of mind shows most brilliantly in this guise. An Introduction, written in September of this year, apologetically explains the appearance of literary flowers of peace at such a time as this; but readers who allow the Essays to precede the Introduction, will feel both that no apology has been needed, and that the Introduction itself is a flower of a charming and specially English species. To read the Essays at the present time is not merely to escape for a short period from the grim realities of the moment—it is to return to the tussle with a refreshed mind, widened for the problems and solutions of the present and the immediate future.

From the Society of SS. Peter and Paul.—"Practical Prayers." Eleven little booklets of this series have reached us, each containing distinctive prayers or directions as to behaviour on unusual religious occasions. The titles are "Morning and Night Prayers," "Things to Know," "Usual Prayers," "Christian Doctrine," "Special Prayers," "Eucharistic Prayers," "Penance," "Practical Devotion," "Prayers for Use on Active Service," "Holy Communion," and "Children's War Prayers." "In the Morning: Thoughts for the Sick and Wounded" is the title of a short book of extracts from famous writers bearing on the subject, also issued by the same Society.

From Mr. Elliot Stock.—"A Call to the Nation," by the Rev. C. A. Woodroffe. A pamphlet enshrining an excellent sermon, delivered on the anniversary of the Declaration of War and touching on the national problems in an encouraging and helpful manner.

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell.—"Alcohol: a Poem for the Times," by Joseph W. Wright.

"The days are evil, Alcohol!
Your boasts are not respected,
Dynamic queries, put to you,
Evoke replies, that prove it true,
Your claims must be rejected."

Mr. Wright demolishes Alcohol in an argument which allows of no counter-attack. Hard thrusts on both racial and personal grounds leave the victim hors de combat and, as far as Mr. Wright is concerned, Alcohol is routed once and for all.

From the Theosophical Publishing House.—"How We Remember Our Past Lives," by C. Jinarajadasa, M.A. These four addresses on theosophical subjects, gathered together under the title of the first of them, have already been delivered as lectures and printed as essays in The Theosophist. Their own particular public will be glad of the appearance in book form of these simply and clearly written expositions of Theosophist doctrines.

From the University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—"An Anthology of English Prose," by S. E. Goggin, M.A. Lond., and A. R. Weekes, M.A. Lond. Messrs. Goggin and Weekes' "Anthology" is intended for use in schools and colleges, and is furnished with an introduction and a glossary. The extracts are culled from all periods of English literature, and are arranged in chronological order, thus illustrating the development of the art of letters. The selected authors range from Mandeville in the fourteenth century to Kipling in the twentieth.

From Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd.—"Maxims and Sayings of Father Paul Gin hac, S.J." A collection of the utterances of a French priest whose biography has been sufficiently popular to run through five editions. The sayings show a rigidly ascetic spirit and to an outsider a good deal of egotism. Flagellation of body and spirit and a complete alienation from human interest and kindnesses are enjoined as a sure means to attain salvation. So mediæval a note is rarely pleasant to modern ears unless tempered by a sweetness which is absent in the case of Father Gin hac.

From the Same.—"The Our Father." Printed on soft linen with each page a picture illustrating a phrase of our oldest Christian prayer. "The Our Father" is a suitable gift for tiny children.

From the Same.—"Roma: Ancient, Subterranean and Modern Rome in Word and Picture," by the Rev. Albert Kuhn, O.S.B., D.D., with a Preface by His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons. A brief history from the Roman Catholic point of view of the Popes, artists and sculptors who have helped to create Rome, and a description, also brief, of their work. Many photographs of portraits, places and statuary illustrate the work.

From the Same.—"The Life of Saint Monica," by F. A. Forbes. A brief and simply told narrative of the life of Saint Monica, the mother of St. Augustine, with three illustrations by Frank Ross Maguire.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular (Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable 'Book-Auction Records.'" How Mr. Karlslake can give such a valuable book for 21/- we do not know." The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection. KARSLAKE & CO., 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, London, N.W.

Publishers' Circular

The Athenæum to become a Monthly at 1s. on January 15

FROM a paragraph in the daily papers we see that The Athenæum is to become a monthly at one shilling on January 15th. The Athenæum has done such splendid work during the 87 years of its existence that we feel sure there will be wide-felt regret at its disappearance as a weekly. We hope its useful career may be continued successfully in the new form. What changes since the days when publishers used to fight for the positions in The Athenæum, and our good friend, Mr. John C. Francis, had the difficult task of trying to please us all! Those were the days when a good review in The Athenæum kept the publisher busy dictating extracts to his advertisement manager, ordering paper and print for a new edition, all on the Friday afternoon, for he knew that the review would soon bring in orders from every part of the country. We have known within three days of a review in The Athenæum, orders amounting to over £1,000 to be received by the publisher.

Notes and Announcements

SINCE the outbreak of war, we have been delighted to note the very generous manner in which M. Francis Charnes, the Managing Director and Editor of the Revue des deux Mondes, has always referred to our part on land and sea in this War. It was, therefore, all the more striking to find a note almost of sarcasm directed at Britain's hesitating policy—especially in the Balkans—in the current issue. He says, whatever happens, the French will never regret their attempt to help the Serbians, and he more than hints that our not knowing our own mind—whether to go, whether to stay if we go, in fact, our indecision—is to blame for much and may be to blame for much more.

Mr. Robert Bridges has nearly ready for publication through Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., an Anthology of Prose and Verse. The title is "The Spirit of Man, an Anthology in English and French from the Philosophers and Poets made by the Poet Laureate in 1915." It will be dedicated by gracious permission to His Majesty the King. The book is a new kind of anthology, the quotations, prose and poetry mixed together, being arranged in context, to exhibit the aspects of life on a spiritual basis. It was made for those who wish for serious reading at the present time, and the last section relates to the War.

Messrs. Macmillan announce the 21st thousand at 6s. net of "Ordeal by Battle."

by F. Scott Oliver; also a fourth impression of "The Pentecost of Calamity," by Owen Wister—one of the best books on the War we have had by an American—or by anybody.

Mr. Alexander Gardner (of Paisley), publisher by appointment to the late Queen Victoria, has just brought out "More Ballads of Field and Billet and other Verses," by Corporal W. Hersley Holmes, whose first little volume, "Ballads of Field and Billet," received such a hearty welcome from the press. The Corporal is much above the ordinary drummer-out of battle lines. Anyone who has been kept awake by the voice of the bird—we had almost said beast—will appreciate the corporal's lines "to a certain guinea-fowl." There is only one worse noise, and that is the peacock's.

A charming little book is "Our Indians at Marseilles," by a young Russian lady, Mlle. Massia Bibikoff, just published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. It has an introduction by M. Maurice Barrès, of the French Academy; is translated by Mr. Leonard Huxley, and has facsimile reproductions of fifty pencil drawings by the author. Mlle. Bibikoff is a great admirer of our Indian soldiers, and her bright, vivacious text and bouquet of illustrations form as graceful a tribute to them as they could wish to have. After the interminable photograph, these rapid sketches from life are a pleasant change.

Messrs. Bertram Wright & Co., Ltd., publishers, 121, Bath Street, Glasgow, and 88, Jermyn Street, St. James', London, are publishing a most attractive, well-produced work, entitled "Europe in Arms: a Concise History of the Great European War." The text, by Mr. Everard Wyrall, is admirable, clear and concise; we are glad to see he does full justice to General French's splendid work—history will admit that he saved France and the cause of the Allies. There are about thirty excellent full-page plates in this Vol. 1, as well as four plans and some admirable maps. The size of the book is a broad royal 8vo. (9½ × 7). It is a pity there is no mention of the illustrations and plans on the title-page, and no mention of the maps at all. From the bibliographical point of view, such details should never be omitted from a title-page; they are like the clasps, medals and stars on the soldier's breast. We understand that it is to be completed in 3 vols. and sold only in sets at 30s. net per set.

British photographers may be glad to know that the 1916 edition of the "American Annual of Photography" is now ready. It is a handsome volume of over 300 pages, fully and well illustrated. Price 3s. 6d. net. It is for sale by George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., London.

Mr. Francis Edwards, of 83, High Street, Marylebone, the General Agent of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland, publishes a very useful list of the publications of the Institute.

The Christmas double number (at 6d. net) of the Wireless World (Marconi House, Strand) will interest the general public as well as all engaged in sending Marconigrams or receiving them; it is well illustrated and has a striking cover.

Messrs. James Maclehose & Sons, of Glasgow, have published, at 1s. net, "Bach's Mass in B Minor: a Study," by Chas. S. Terry.

Oxford Branch

A MEETING was held in the Large Room, 50, Broad Street, on Wednesday, the 8th inst., at which Mr. Basil Blackwell gave an extremely interesting lecture on "Herodotus," Mr. F. S. Thornton being in the chair. With the aid of specially drawn maps, the lecturer described the great historian's travels, at the same time depicting Persia's efforts to conquer Greece. Many of the places mentioned were very familiar, and it seemed incredible that after 2,000 years battles should still be raging on the same historic ground. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed and seconded to Mr. Blackwell.

Book Auction Sale

On Monday, December 13th, and the four following days, Messrs. Sotheby sold the first portion of the stock of the late Joseph Hornstein, 110, Victoria Street, S.W. The chief prices were:—Alken, "National Sports of Great Britain, 1825," £17 10s.; "Annals of Sporting and Fancy Gazette," 13 vols., 1822-8, £103; Apperley, "Life of a Sportsman," 1842, £11; Burney, "Evelina," 3 vols., 1778, £46; Burns, Poems, Kilmarnock edition, 1786, £100; Combe, "Three Tours of Dr. Syntax," 3 vols., 1812-20, £16; English "Dance of Death," 3 vols., 1815-7, £16 10s.; Cruikshank, "The Humourist," 4 vols., 1819-20, £42; Dickens, "Sketches by Boz," 3 vols., 1836-7, £13; "Great Expectations," presentation copy from the author, 3 vols., 1861, £110; Pierce Egan, "Life in London," 1821, £22; "Life of an Actor," 1825, £11 5s.; "Finish to the Adventures of Tom, Jerry, and Logic," 1830, £32; another copy, £23; George Eliot, "Scenes of Clerical Life," 2 vols., 1858, £13 5s.; "The Fanny, or True Sportsman's Guide," 2 vols., 1826, £11; "The Germ," 1850, £18; Daniell and Ayton, "Voyage Round Great Britain," 8 vols. in 4, 1814-25, £54; Goldsmith, "Vicar of Wakefield," 1817, £13 10s.; Grimm, "German Popular Stories," 2 vols., 1826-7, £11 10s.; Hardy, "Desperate Remedies," 3 vols., 1871, £16; Hassell, "Picturesque Rides and Walks," 2 vols., 1817-8, £10; Moore, "Annals of Gallantry," 1814-5, £78; "Real Life in London," 2 vols., 1821-2, £19 10s.; another copy, £10 5s.; Scott, "Waverley," 3 vols., 1814, £36; "Guy Mannering," 3 vols., 1815, £28 10s.; "Tales of My Landlord," 4 vols., 1816, £47; "The Scourge," 12 vols., 1811-16, £25 10s.; Shakespeare, "Plays and Poems," 21 vols., 1821, £10; Papworth, "Select Views of London," 1816, £12; Rowlandson, "Loyal Volunteers of London," 1799, £13 10s.; Compendious Treatise on Modern Education, 1862, £29; "The Sporting Repository," 1822, £40; Surtees, Novels, 6 vols., 1853-88, £36 10s.; another set, 5 vols., 1853-65, £26; "Jorrocks's Jaunts and Jollities," 1838, £21; another edition, 1843, £31; "Analysis of the Hunting Field," 1846, £12 10s.; "Hawbuck Grange," 1847, £10 5s.; "Handley Cross," 1854, £15 10s.; another copy, £11; "Trials for Adultery, &c.," 7 vols., 1779-80, £10 5s.; Westmacott, "The English Spy," 2 vols., 1825, £23 10s.; another copy, £16; another copy, £15; Shakespeare, Plays, 1685, £15. The total of the sale was £3,087 9s.

American and Continental periodicals, fiction and minor verse being excluded. A series of class lists will be published as fast as compiled, and these will be combined in one alphabet early in the new year. Monthly indexes will be published in 1916. American libraries may obtain both the class lists and the annual volume through B. F. Stevens & Brown, of New York City.

On obtaining Books at Public Libraries

IN Great Britain we believe less time is lost between asking for a book at a public library and getting it, if it is in stock, than in any other part of the world. An American journalist, Mr. Slosson, editor of The Independent, says that when he feels inclined to be impatient if he has to wait seven-and-a-half minutes for a book to be found and placed before him in the New York Library, he reminds himself of his experience at the Berlin Library, where, "after he had hunted up the book he wanted in the catalogue—no easy task—and made out the necessary documents, including information as to his private affairs that no American census-taker ever dared to ask," and the librarian had ascertained that the book was in, and politely notified that he all was in order, he was told that he "could get the book to-morrow."

We believe that there is less formality and red-tape—in fact, less "fuss and bother"—in getting books from a British public library than from any other. Of course, in the case of the British Museum, which contains so many invaluable literary treasures, a certain amount of formality is necessary, and probably the same applies to the Berlin or any other great National library.

A Young Canadian Soldier-Poet

A YOUNG Canadian soldier poet, one of the famous Princess Pat's Contingent, Sergeant Frank S. Brown, killed at St. Eloi, has left a little sheaf of promising verse which deserves a welcome here and in Canada. We have read a good deal of the poetry of the War, but not with a feeling that much of it will live. Mr. Holbrook Jackson, editor of T.P.'s Weekly, writes a sympathetic note about this fine young Canadian soldier; and Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., have published his "Contingent Ditties" as a 1s. net booklet—the get-up of which has evidently been a labour of love and will ever remain a specimen of good taste. The little illustrated headings to the pages, showing scenes in Canada, the troopships and fields of battle, are a great set off and do credit to the artist. The poem we like best is that describing how the first thirty-thousand Canadians crossed to join in the battle for liberty and humanity—it is called "The Convoy." Here is one verse:—

The days roll by. The ocean slowly yields
Its bosom to the squadron's steady pace,
Until the cliffs of England rise to greet
The scions of her colonizing race
Come home—to give their all. Come home to fight.

Come home—though born of that far Western land Where Britain's shield is 'stablished for the right,
They volunteered to lend an armed hand.

It was a great disappointment to our people that the "powers that be" gave us so little chance to welcome the sons of the Empire, as they reached our shores, as we should have liked to have done. These same powers have made John Bull fight this war blind-folded, and, yet, in spite of it all, we all feel—with this young Canadian—that

... In common cause
United, proud, defiant, Britain stands.

A Lost Lamb

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, at a dinner in Boston, said of modern American letters:

"The average popular novel shows on the novelist's part an ignorance of his trade which reminds me of a New England clerk."

"In a New England village I entered the main street department-store one afternoon and said to the clerk at the book-counter:

"Let me have, please, the letters of Charles Lamb."

"Post-office right across the street, Mr. Lamb," said the clerk, with a naive, brisk smile."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

"The Story of the 'Grafton' Portrait of William Shakespeare"

ON February 18th, 1907, there appeared in the pages of the Manchester Guardian a photographic reproduction of what was described as "the supposed portrait of Shakespeare which has been found in a village inn near Darlington." This and similar notices in the press induced a gentleman, Mr. Thomas Kay, of Stockport, who describes himself as "being possessed of the necessary leisure and having had considerable experience in portraiture," to look up the picture and work out its history. Mr. Kay—after seeing it and making inquiries about it—bought it on February 8th, 1909. He then devoted his leisure to investigation and to writing a most interesting account of what he convinced himself is a genuine painting from life of Shakespeare, and of its history or supposed history. The result is a book of about eighty pages written by Mr. Thomas Kay, published by Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co., Ltd., Old Bailey, London, and entitled "The Story of the 'Grafton' Portrait of William Shakespeare, Ætatis suæ 24, 1588, with an account of the Sack and Destruction of the Manor House of Grafton Regis, Northamptonshire, by the Parliamentary Forces on Christmas Eve, 1643."

We regret to see from a "note by the executors of the late Mr. Thomas Kay" that "the publication of this work, which it was intended should take place in the autumn of 1914, has unavoidably been postponed, owing to the illness and lamented death of the author and the outbreak of the War. The Grafton portrait was bequeathed by Mr. Kay to the John Rylands Library, Manchester, and has been accepted by the Governors of that Institution." So far as we can see, the only evidence in favour of the view that this is—we were going to say a True Bill—any way, a real portrait of William, is that it is strikingly like the portrait which Ben Jonson, who knew Shakespeare so well, placed as frontispiece to his folio edition of his friend's Works, and the date on it, which shows it to be of a man who was born in the same year as Shakespeare. This is all, and yet many much less interesting books about Shakespeare than this have been published.

The Standard on Books and the War

IT was inevitable that in the midst of a modern war, which so profoundly disturbs every social arrangement, literature would suffer cruelly. It is not that people have little time to read. Actually, they probably read more than in the days of peace, but it is to the newspaper, the pamphlet, and the novel rather than to the book proper that they are apt to turn. Authors, too, are as little inclined to write serious books as the public to read them. They cannot help being infected with the mood of the moment, and turn aside impatiently from their ordinary interests.

We think, however, that authors who are beyond the military age would be better advised if they concentrated their minds and continued their customary activities. It is different with those who are young and strong. They are men first and writers second, and even if they have no great vocation for the military life it is, we think, their duty to accept the first responsibility of manhood, and uphold the traditions of a craft that has so often shown that the master of the living word has in him also the stuff of which heroes are made.

As for the reader, it is questionable whether economy should wisely begin, though it may wisely end, at the bookshelf. Discrimination must be observed, of course, but we, in our British scorn for things of the intellect, are only too apt to jump to the conclusion that literature is a thing of little account. We forget that it is part—and no insignificant part—of the panoply of a civilised people. German literature is one of the secrets of the spread of German influence. The German language would be a poor competitor with English as a world language, but it has not only a general appeal to the cultured, but a particular appeal to the specialist, who can often find no translation of works essential to the study of his subject. It would be indeed folly if the impression were allowed to gain currency that books are among the things that do not matter. They have always mattered, and will matter even more in the future.

[It would be interesting to know if there is such a thing as The Standard takes for granted: viz., "Our British scorn for things of the intellect."—ED. P.C.]

"A little Child shall lead you"

THE newest of the new officers strolled into the sergeants' mess to have a look round. He looked exceedingly young and small, and had a complexion which a society beauty might well have envied. The middle-aged warriors were not at all pleased at having to "kow-tow" to this stripling, and one gruff-voiced sergeant observed audibly: "And a little child shall lead us." The young officer did not appear to notice the remark, and left the room. Some time later, when the men had all settled down for the night, playing cards, &c., he again entered, and addressing the sergeant said: "You will assemble the men immediately for a twenty mile route march. And a little child shall lead you; only he'll be on horseback and you lazy sons of guns will walk."

In Aid of Our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors

SOME time ago we gave particulars respecting "The Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Gift Book," which Messrs. Jarrold & Sons are publishing, and said that we were sure our readers at home and abroad would do all in their power to push the sale. Mr. Arthur Greening, manager of Messrs. Jarrold & Sons, now informs us that over five thousand booksellers have applied for the posters to exhibit in their shops. Hundreds of thousands of leaflets and circulars have been distributed by the "Trade." There can be no doubt the blinded soldier or sailor is one of the saddest results of the War, and the cause appeals straight to the heart of one and all. Mr. C. Arthur Pearson, who is blind himself, has done wonders, and with further funds will do still more to lighten the darkness of our stricken fighters, and provide them with a haven of rest.

We have heard grumbles in the trade at some of the many books in aid of this or that charity, but never a murmur at this chance to help our blinded fighters.

Book Titles Along Back

DEAR SIR,—May I, as another librarian, venture to take up the cudgels on your behalf against Mr. Hawkes and his supporters? Mr. Hawkes tells us that the side view from the right is the "natural and habitual method." Habitual it is, without a doubt, and habits, especially bad ones, die hard. Whether it is natural or not is hard to say. An experiment on my wife leads me to suspect that it may be an acquired characteristic of librarians. But, in any case, is it not the privilege of mind to modify and improve upon nature? The Germans, from whom we have much to learn in the direction of mechanical efficiency, are, shall we say, habituating themselves to taking a side view from the left in this very matter.

And there is another point which, so far as I have seen, none of your correspondents has touched upon, and which appeals to me specially as a librarian. We are all of us aware of the flaw inherent in the constitution of things which, when we pick a work in two volumes off the shelf and place it flat on the table, brings Volume 2 on top. Now, there is a small, but precious class of slim folios, choice facsimiles, and what not, which lie flat upon even a library shelf, to which lettering from top to bottom would bring deliverance. Is it not worth while saving these, as well as the shop and bookstall, from topsy-turvydom at the small cost of learning to take a side view from the left, and at the sacrifice only of a habit? Uniformity by all means, but let us not be afraid to change our uniform for a better one.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, STEPHEN K. JONES.

Dr. Williams' Library,
Gordon Square, London.

DEAR SIR,—Our experience goes to show that if publishers consulted the public the plan you have always advocated would generally be adopted. We have lately seen through the press two thin books, and in both cases our clients gave as their reason for wishing it so that books, if laid down, are naturally face upmost, and that they wanted the title readable when in that position. When publishers and bookbinders have done the reverse it has no doubt been either without first consulting the author, or because more usual; but there can be no doubt that a uniform plan would be a real help to everybody. Whichever is adopted, it is inevitable that in, say, a large library in long rows of books, the steps to reach high shelves cannot be placed in relatively the same position to all—there must of necessity be (as things are at present) titles running both ways, on either hand.

Nor can there be any real difference between turning the head down towards the right, to read titles along the backs from the top (except the free use of the right hand in this case, which is an argument for your plan), and towards the left to read those running from bottom.

It may be remembered that (when classification is not a first consideration), more books, arranged flat and those of a size together, can be got in between the shelf and the one above it, than by placing them upright, as less space is lost—another argument for lettering along from the top.

JOHN FLAGG.

A Bookbinder on Book Lettering

DEAR SIR,—In reference to your article dealing with the lettering of books, may I be allowed to give the bookbinder's point of view.

It is a standing rule amongst book-finishers, when a volume is considered too thin to accommodate the lettering across the back, to letter from bottom to top. Oblong pages and illustrations are always imposed to read from the bottom to top. It is obvious that a title running in the opposite direction would be quite out of harmony with these standing rules. It seems natural to take a side view from the right when facing a book lying on a table or standing upright in a bookcase.

Book-finishers from time immemorial have always adopted the method of lettering upwards; it seems a pity there should be any doubt about it.

Notice to Publishers

PRINTING OFFICE, with Monotype installation in Holland, begs to inform the Trade that it is in a position to undertake the printing of English works. Quick delivery and first-class work guaranteed.

About Titles Generally and Translations

DEAR SIR,—In reference to the question of lettering thin books on the back, I may perhaps be allowed to give an opinion as, in the course of twelve months, I handle many thousands of such books. My experience is decidedly in favour of lettering downwards, as one almost invariably reads a shelfful of titles from left to right, and of necessity does so if the books form part of a series running into thousands; and there are such on the market. The ideal method is that used for "Reklam's Universal Library," viz., author, title, number. This arrangement permits of classification by author or number according as to which may be the more convenient in any given case. It is advisable to begin with the author's name, otherwise its position depends too much on the length of the title. Whilst on this subject I may say that many books are sent out without the author's name being on the back at all, even though the title may be there. This should not be so, as books are often sold on the strength of an author's reputation, but, as it is a waste of shelf-room to put such anonymous items in a window, their sale suffers in consequence.

There is another matter I wish to draw attention to, and that is the transliteration of Russian names. This should be standardized if only to obviate a multitude of cross-references in the various trade catalogues. Here are a few samples of what a cataloguer has to contend with now—what will it be like if the present interest in Russian literature continues?

and so on, for there are others. Some of the spellings are so obviously influenced by French rules of pronunciation that one is tempted to suggest (and reading the book does not always dissipate the idea) that in some cases we are not getting translations from the original, but translations of French translations! A higher standard of work should be demanded of translators (I am not thinking particularly of Russian now), as some of the stuff which is offered to the public under the guise of "Foreign Classics" has about as much literary flavour as a ready-reckoner.—I am, Dear Sir, yours faithfully,

F. MUGGLESTONE.

Sevenpenny Net and Shilling Net Fiction

DEAR SIR,—There is a rumour in book-selling circles that owing to the increased cost of production in consequence of the war, publishers are contemplating raising the price of these series to 9d. net and 1s. 3d. net. I hope it is true and hundreds of my brother booksellers must be saying ditto, for some such action is imperative, if we are to live in these trying times and pay 20s. in the pound.

On the other hand I have heard whispers that trade prices are to be stiffened, but that the onus of getting an increased price from the public is to be thrown upon the bookseller. This, in my humble opinion, is grossly unfair, and cannot possibly work, as without the co-operation and support of the publisher it is impossible to get 9d. for a 7d. book, or 1s. 3d. for a 1s. book.

It is my firm conviction that if publishers will only show a little common-sense business acumen and enterprise they can, with the assistance of the bookseller, weather this storm of increased prices and expenses and come out at the finish evens all, if not with a little bit to the good. If the 9d. net and 1s. 3d. net idea was carried out all that the publishers would need to do, apart from advertising, is to print a fresh supply of coloured wrappers bearing the new prices (a small expense comparatively), put them on to the existing stock that is on their shelves, and supply wrappers only on application to the booksellers, with which to redress their stock.

When once the new published prices were firmly established, there would be little difficulty in getting rid of the stock that remains over, for which no wrappers were available.

Thanking you in advance for publishing this letter, in which I have feebly tried to indicate the lines upon which I should like to see this question settled.—Faithfully yours,

A SUBURBAN BOOKSELLER.

Booksellers and the War

SIR,—Have not the retail booksellers been hit sufficiently hard by the cheapening of books, and by the loss of sales through the war without their being bitterly attacked now by the publishers. The retail book trade does not now pay working expenses, and two of the largest publishing firms, instead of altering their prices to the public, have taken off the small fraction of profit which the booksellers have hitherto received. Why not have made all their books net to the public and thus secured a chance of living to the retail bookseller, especially as his profits on Educational works are far below his working expenses? Cannot the whole of the trade protest against this harsh treatment?—We are, yours faithfully, Moxon's Miniature Poets and J. B. P.

DEAR SIR,—I am much obliged to Mr. W. H. Peet and Sir Frederick Macmillan for their courteous replies to my query. As it happens I received similar information from a personal friend immediately upon my letter appearing in your valuable journal. He adds, however, one or two interesting facts with regard to J. Bertrand Payne which, now that the subject has been raised, may interest some of your readers.

Payne was a great personal friend of Tennyson, and was often present at the readings given by the latter. A short time ago this gentleman had in his possession some letters of Tennyson's, in which Payne was mentioned. He (Payne) appears to have been very decided in pronouncing upon the merits of Tennyson's poems, and procured publication of some which Tennyson himself would have discarded. Mr. Payne was also editor of Haydn's Biography, published by Moxon.—Yours faithfully,

Notices of Books

From Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd.

"The Future of Democracy" by H. M. Hyndman. In this collection of essays expressing the Social Democratic outlook Mr. Hyndman has a great deal to say that should be heard by all parties, and especially by that section of British Socialists which advocates peace at any price. No man now living, not even excepting Robert Blatchford, has preached national defence against Germany more vigorously or for a longer period, and no man in this country is more familiar with the tenets held by the Socialists of other Continental countries or is better able to explain the causes of the defection from the common ideal of the majority of German Socialists in the case of the present war. Mr. Hyndman's prognostications for the future are based on a wide and wise survey of present-day conditions and are worthy of respect even though they will not obtain agreement from every reader.

From John Bale & Sons.—"Old London's Spas, Baths and Wells," by Septimus Sunderland, M.D. Inhabitants and lovers of our capital city should find Dr. Sunderland's resumé of its old-world medicinal advantages, both supposed and actual, of the greatest interest. He begins with the earliest records of pre-Saxon times and enumerates the wells and springs of the city, describing with a fluent pen the associations, either holy or pleasurable, of each spot. The numerous illustrations show us a London that has ceased to exist—Marylebone as a sequestered village, Sydenham as a rural spa well known to fashion; sights both naive and quaint to our modern eyes.

From the Same.—"Religio Medici Moderni," by Neo Kama, M.D. A little book embracing the views and experiences of a physician in the regions of religion and sociology. The outlook is, of course, entirely personal, and many readers will find it valuable on that account. The chapters are breezily written.

From Messrs. A. & C. Black.—"Black's History Pictures: The Tudor Period," Selected and edited by G. H. Reed, M.A. Seventy-nine pictures of Tudor times find place in Messrs. Black's collection. Many are portraits, others depict thoroughfares, shops, buildings, groups of historic interest, costumes, &c. Such a picture gallery should accompany the teaching of history to young children, and will prove of great interest to older students.

From Messrs. Bloud & Gay, Paris.—"Les Leçons du Livre Jaune (1914)," par Henri Welschlinger. M. Welschlinger gives an excellent potted version of last year's famous Yellow Book. He has linked the most noteworthy portions of the book with explanatory comment of his own and by a brief running over of the diplomatic ground of 1913, paves the way for a clear understanding of the events of the succeeding year. The now numerous French inhabitants of England will, with many of their English friends, find much food for patriotism in this little volume.

From Messrs. James Clarke & Co.—"Reconstruction: a Help to Doubters," by Robert F. Horton, M.A., D.D. To show that the progress of scientific thought is not essentially opposed to a belief in Christian doctrine is the mission of Dr. Horton, a mission which he pursues by the use of both the oral and written word. In the book, "Reconstruction" he crystallizes the Christian faith into certain truths and demonstrates that by the application of these truths science and the Bible can be brought into a helpful rather than an antagonistic relationship.

From Mr. Alexander Gardner, Plaisley.—
"The Bruising of Belgium," by Walter A. Mursell. The sermons contained in the Rev. Walter Mursell's volume all deal with current topics of the war and should prove of comfort to the bereaved relations of our dead fighting men.

From Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd.—
"Maternity and Child Welfare," by E. J. Smith. A survey of co-ordinated medical work in the mean streets of Bradford on behalf of the child is provided in Mr. Smith's booklet. He describes the great municipal attempt which this city has made to grapple with the problems of infant mortality; its clinics and maternity home, its pure milk depot, its dining rooms for both expectant and nursing mothers, and its system of health visitors. The pages are interspersed with photographs of the special buildings involved in the scheme. The little volume is a tribute to the humanity and foresight of this excellent municipality.

From Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd.—
"The Honey of Romance," by Maud Churton Braby. "The Honey of Romance" is embittered by Divorce Court details and the intervention of the King's Procter. It is realistically carried out to an ending that is neither comedy nor tragedy, but simply life. Provides excellent entertainment and much shrewd observation.

From Mr. Elkin Mathews.—"Unseen Horizons," by Frederick Arthur. The two poems, fruit of the war, which precede Mr. Arthur's slender collection, are as good as anything to be found in its pages. They are triste rather than tragic, smooth and lyrical rather than virile, and, as they are read, immediately suggest their use in recitation or song. The lyrical quality of all Mr. Arthur's work gathered here is excellent and a short poem, "After Heine," reaches the lofty standard set by that prince of lyric writers more nearly than any other English attempts we have seen. The verse of "Unseen Horizons" can be recommended to all who look to poetry for a gentle consolation.

From Messrs. Novello & Co., Ltd.—
"The Interpretation of the Music of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries," by Arnold Dolmetsch. Mr. Dolmetsch's book has all the authority of a work of reference and all the charm of an imaginative reconstruction of a long-past musical life. The book is a mine of information and is a notable addition to Mr. Ernest Newman's "Handbooks for Musicians" series. The section on "Ornamentation" is fully illustrated and simultaneously published in a separate volume is an Appendix containing 22 pieces of music belonging to the periods under review.

From Mr. George Vickers.—"The Soul With the Carnation Lips," by Ardeen Foster. A melodramatic story coloured with the lurid hues of the present war has been written by Mr. Ardeen Foster as an aid to recruiting in this country. Entitled "The Soul With the Carnation Lips" it is carried along in a series of pictures and was quite obviously composed for cinema purposes before receiving the treatment necessary to turn a wordless play into a novel. An ordinary play for the theatre is also promised from the same material. The main scenes are laid in Belgium and are a clever compound of the actual conditions obtaining at the opening of war and a continuation and conclusion drawn from Mr. Foster's imagination. As an aid to recruiting from the less well-educated of our people, the book ought to have all the success hoped for by its author.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and American sales are also recorded. The Publishers' Circular (Nov. 6, 1915) says that this year's volume is "the biggest and best of all the 12 volumes of the invaluable 'Book-Auction Records.' How Mr. Karlake can give such a valuable book for 21/- we do not know." The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection. KARSLAKE & CO., 35, Pond Street, Hampstead, London, N.W.
